REPUBLICANS PLAN ANTI-KLAN PLANK STRONGER THAN DEMOCRATIC ONE

Manipulators, Preparing in Advance for the State Convention at Springfield, Are Drafting Declaration That Will Hit Mask and Gown Body.

PROBABLY WILL NOT NAME ORGANIZATION

Intention of Those in Control to Have Everything Arranged for Meeting to Pass Off Without Controversy.

By CURTIS A. BETTS.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., April 26.—Republican party convention manipulators, preparing in advance for the party's State convention which convenes in Springfield Tuesday, are arranging a Ku Klux Klan plank for the platform, not too strong a plank for political purposes, but stronger than that adopted by the Democratic convention two weeks ago.

It is not probable they will mention the klan by name, but it is probable that they will denounce all organizations which proscribe on class of citizens because of religion, race or color, and will demand an adherence to the principles of the Declaration of Independence and the guarantees of the Constitution. That will be more than the Democrats did.

Leaders' Attitude.

Notwithstanding the large negro vote which is in the Republican party, it is not the negro vote which is influencing the Republican leaders to change their attitude toward the anti-klan resolution. They are not fearful of loss of the negro vote, whatever the party's attitude toward the klan is.

Here is the argument as advanced by one of the most active and influential of the Republican leaders:

"The negro will vote the Republican ticket. He always has voted it and always will, so we don't have to worry about him. Also, though it may seem strange, we do not feel that we have much reason to worry about the klan vote just so we do not go so strong in our platform as to make a real and active fight on the klan. We can do all the talking about religious freedom and constitutional guarantees we want and the klan is not liable to take serious issue with us.

Advantage Hoped For.

"It is a bad idea to mix politics and religion, but they are already mixed to a considerable extent, and why should we be blamed for taking advantage of a situation which is not of our making.

"The natural thing is for the Republican party to reap the advantage from this whole klan situation. Why? Because of the fact that the Democratic party, particularly in the larger cities, is controlled by persons of the Catholic religion. Examine the names of the members of the Democratic party committees in St. Louis and Kansas City and you will find that is true.

"The members of the klan know that because of this control, the Democratic party, whenever it is in power, must recognize this powerful element of the party. Now, whatever may be the purpose of the klan in other parts of the country, in Missouri it is an anti-Catholic organization. It cares little about the Jew or the negro.

"The place for the klan vote is for the Republican candidates, because there is not this influence within the Republican party, at least not to the extent that it is in the Democratic party."

Fixers are Working.

Thus, acting on the belief that they have nothing to lose by an anti-klan plank just enough stronger than the Democratic plank, for it to be pointed to as stronger, the preliminary fixers are working out their plans. Of course, Gov. Hyde will be the final censor of the tentative draft of the platform, and probably of the platform as it comes to the convention from the platform committee. He will arrive in Springfield tomorrow and is expected to call into conference his more intimate party associates to pass upon this as well as other

EIGHT SAVED FROM GALLOWS BY EXECUTIVE CLEMENCY

Recommendations Made by Leavenworth Officer Saves Prisoners From Death Penalty.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., April 26.—Eight of the 12 men who were originally sentenced to hang or serve life sentences in the United States desciplinary barracks in connection with the death in July, 1918, of Shelby Hisle, prisoner in the barracks, have received commutations of sentence as a result of recommendations made by Maj. James Stansfield and Maj. F. K. Ross, it was announced today by Warden W. I. Biddle of the Federal prison.

The eight men to receive favorable recommendation—Francis J. Cooney, Millard Bowers, William Cook, Donald Fisher, Alexander Kahn, R. W. Lecocq, William F. Peters and George W. Jerue—were held in solitary confinement for 15 months preceding and following the courtmartial and were only released fro mthe dungeon when they were transferred to the Federal penitentiary prison in February, 1920. The death sentence having been commuted by President Coolidge to life imprisonment.

The murder of Hisle took place in one of the cell wings, and according to prisoners, he was a "stool pigeon," informing authorities of happenings in the cell block.

He was set upon, beaten with a gas pipe, stabbed and thrown from a balcony. As a result of the recommendations, five of the eight men will become eligible for parole in May.

Kahn, Lecocq and Fisher originally were under death sentence. Upon receipt by Warden Biddle of 19 reports today, there remains only 24 of the 223 cases considered by the clemency board to be heard from. So far seven full pardons have been granted.

PRESIDENT BALKS AT RIDING

Refuses to Ride Horseback and Walks for Regular Exercise.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—President Coolidge has definitely vetoed suggestions that he begin horseback riding regularly for exercise. He has been on a mount only once since becoming President, and has decided to stick to walking.

Coolidge is finding that he has no time for hobbies while being chief executive, according to his friends. Horseback riding requires too much time for him. He is returning to early morning walks, now that Washington is enjoying warm mornings.

CHOICE OF BURTON AS KEYNOTER DUE TO THE OLD GUARD

SLEMP PICKED HIM, TO HEAD OFF HUGHES

Party Regularity of Ohio Senator Was Factor That Led to His Selection for Post.

Post-Dispatch Bureau
20-23 Wyatt Bldg.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Continued domination of the Republican party by the old line regulars was manifested today through the selection of Representative Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, former Senator and leading Republican spokesman in the House on International Affairs, as temporary chairman and keynote orator of the Republican National Convention.

Burton was picked because the party chiefs considered him safe. President Coolidge passed over the host of western governors, Senator Borah, Rep., Idaho; Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana and a dozen others, strongly suggested as representing the Progressive elements of Republicanism and better qualified to mitigate the danger of a third party revolt, and consented to a congressman less likely to prove an affront to the reactionaries.

Slemp's Hand Seen.

C. Bascom Slemp, secretary of the President, is credited with putting Burton across to head off the selection of Secretary Hughes, his theory being merely that the convention could not wear Eastern habiliments with a New Englander as the nominee. The Massachusetts managers for Mr. Coolidge—Messrs. Butler and Stearns—are supposed to have favored the State Department chief first but have agreed to Burton. The selection was made at the White House this morning when John T. Adams, chairman of the national committee and Dave Mulvane of Kansas, chairman of the convention arrangements committee, called to consult the President before departing for Cleveland. Formal designation of Burton will come at the meeting of the arrangements committee in the Ohio city Wednesday.

Burton was not agreed to until after party leaders had given serious consideration to the qualifications of Representative Longworth, (Rep.,) Ohio, majority leader in the House, but Burton's previous service as a Senator gave him a certain prestige which removed the probability of objections in the upper chamber because one of its membership was not accorded the honor.

Recognizes Old Guard.

In addition, Burton will serve the same purpose for the party as could Longworth, and as no Republican Senator could. He recognizes the old guard as still the master of the party, but gives to the Progressives the promise of co-operation. The selection of a House member over a Senator goes back to the fundamental difference between the treatment of the Progressives in the two bodies, the Senate reactionaries holding themselves aloof, while those in the House consented to modification of the rules and played ball with the liberals on the tax bill.

Representative Burton was not the first choice of the old guard. While known as a regular, he has distinctly independent views on foreign affairs and at times has been termed a "safe Progressive," which would place him well beyond the select circle of the reactionaries. His regularity, however, was what gave him the honor. It was pointed out that the party did not want to risk any one who might run amuck or refrain from consulting the party chiefs.

The final and probably most impelling reason for deciding on Burton was the feeling that through him the party could reflect something of the glory of the Ohio campaign of 1920, call sight to the fact that Mr. Coolidge was running on President Harding's record as well as his own and foster the feeling that the party rather than the individual was going before the country.

Dawes Considered.

Consideration was given also to Gen. Charles G. Dawes, but the party heads did not know where they could put their hands on him. He likewise would have represented the Harding touch.

U. S. REVIVES WAR SPECTER, MAY DAY WARNING OF "REDS"

Communist Internationale Says America Strives to Monopolize World Resources.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, April 26.—A May day proclamation issued by the communists internationale refers to the United States as not knowing what to do with its "colossal wealth, piled up during imperialistic war," and continues:

"It is still greedily reaching out for new wealth, searching the whole world for fresh sources and striving by fraud and violence to monopolize them. By this action, it is again reviving the terrible spectre of war."

In an article in the Labor Gazette, Israel Amster, member of the central communist party, and head of the American section of the communist internationale in Moscow, says the United States is preparing "a world war which will be unexampled in its cruelty and devastation."

At the command of the American capitalists, whose interests are scattered throughout the world, he declares, the blood of millions will be shed and he calls upon the American laboring classes and the communist party to devote their efforts to prevention of such a dreadful eventuality.

"Since the Spanish-American war," the diatribe continues, "the United States has become a great empire, having acquired a number of colonies and suzerainty over most of the South American republics. It is extending its superiority in the Pacific. Rich in manpower, strong economically and unlimited in capital, it now is preparing to invade Europe.

"Austria and Hungary, by reason of the loans extended to them yesterday already are under the financial heel of the United States. The same fate awaits Germany. It may be deduced from this that American imperialism seeks new colonies in Europe which makes war inevitable."

Amster describes Canada as sliding slowly and peacefully into the hands of the United States. He asserts that the day is not distant when Canada will separate itself entirely from England.

Four years ago Miss Johnson met a similar accident and has since been unable to walk. When 84, Miss Johnson bought 84 $1000 liberty bonds. Four years ago she turned over the bonds to the Board of Assumption Presbyterian Church, for a new Presbyterian Memorial Church as her gift.

MRS. LERNER ASKS FOR SQUARE DEAL ON ENTRY TO U. S.

Alleged Radical, Refused Admission to America, Makes Appeal Through Post-Dispatch.

HER LETTER TELLS OF LIFE IN AMERICA

Order of Department Refusing Her Permission to Enter Has Been Attacked in Congress.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Forbidden by an order of the State Department to return to the United States from Russia, Mrs. Anna Kipness Lerner, the young wife of a native-born American citizen and soldier of the World War, has appealed through the Post-Dispatch for a "square deal."

Attention was called to Mrs. Lerner's plight by the Post-Dispatch last November. On the ground that she was a "dangerous radical," whose readmission to this country might imperil its institutions, a minor official of the State Department issued an order to the consul at Riga, in the summer of 1922, that her passport should not be vised. This action later upheld by Secretary of State Hughes effectually barred her out of the United States.

Though born in Russia, Mrs. Lerner is to all intents and purposes an American citizen. She was brought to this country when 4 years old and lived here all her life till she went to Russia in 1922, at the age of 18. She was married while in Russia to Noah Lerner, of Brooklyn. Had the wedding taken place a few months before it did, it would have conferred American citizenship on the wife and she would have been able to return to the United States with her husband. But in the meantime, the new citizenship law, which makes the nationality of a wife independent of that of her husband, had gone into effect. Under this law Mrs. Lerner is technically an alien, and the Department of State seized upon this fact to keep her out of the United States.

Order Is Denounced.

The Department's ukase has been denounced both on the floor of the Senate and in a letter to Secretary of State Hughes by Senator Norris, of Nebraska. The condemnation of Anna Lerner, on secret, ex parte evidence, is described by the Senator as a "relic of barbarism." If she has committed any wrong, Norris maintains, she should be brought back and punished under the laws of the country in which she grew up. The effect of the disbarment order, he says, is to consign her to perpetual banishment in a strange country.

Norris is the author of a pending joint resolution to require the Department to vise Mrs. Lerner's passport. This is now before the Senate Immigration Committee.

After the State Department's refusal to modify its exclusion order, the Post-Dispatch last November cabled to Mrs. Lerner at Moscow, asking her to send a statement of her side of the case. A letter in reply, originally designed to be a cablegram but for some unexplained reason not forwarded as such, has just been received from Mrs. Lerner by the Post-Dispatch and handed to Senator Norris for his information.

"I was four years old when brought to America," writes Anna Lerner. "I went to grammar school and then to business college, beginning work as a stenographer when 15 years old. After three years' work with an electric company and a clothing company of Philadelphia, there came an opportunity to work as a stenographer for the American Kuzbas Colony in Siberia. I accepted the position and left America in 1922, when 18 years old, with the intention of returning after a year or so."

Denies Socialist Coalition.

"In America I was never a member of the Socialist or the Communist or any party, but was a member of a labor union. Is it a crime to belong to a labor union?

"I was also a member of the Prison Comforts Club of Philadelphia, working in conjunction with a committee of the Society of Friends in behalf of the political prisoners. Is it criminal for a young girl to wish to comfort men and women who are imprisoned for their beliefs?

"I married in Siberia Noah Lerner, a member of the colony, an

POLICE MYSTIFIED IN BARING POISONING CASE

Wealthy New York Man, Held on Charge of Attempt on Wife's Life, Denies Intent to Kill.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Charged with attempting to murder his wife by administering arsenic, Clarence O. Baring, Eastern representative of the Minneapolis Heat Regulator Co., with offices in Grand Central Terminal, is in the West Chester County Jail at White Plains.

He was arrested when he arrived Friday afternoon at his home in White Plains, from his office here, was hurried to the jail in a taxicab he had taken from the station, and this morning was arraigned on a short affidavit before Judge Bleakley at a special session of the County Court. He was held without bail.

There was no end of mystery about the case. Sheriff Maudlin and the local police said they knew nothing about it. Two State troopers who had hidden behind some bushes in front of the Baring home grabbed Baring, handcuffed him and ordered him back into the taxi when he alighted from it. They directed the chauffeur to drive to the jail.

Investigation a Month Ago.

Capt. E. L. Toby of the State police said he had been instructed by District Attorney Arthur Rowland not to talk. This was when an effort was made to get a statement from Capt. Toby, it having been learned that Mrs. Baring complained against her husband to State troopers a month ago and that they carried on an investigation that resulted in his arrest.

Mrs. Baring, who was said to be a few years older than her husband, who is about 40, was said to have accused him of placing arsenic in her food April 14. The short affidavit stated the poison was administered "in her system."

Mrs. Baring was said to be under the care of Dr. Henry Vier, her physician, and a nurse in her home.

The Barings have been married 11 years. Mrs. Baring was married before. They have lived in White Plains five years.

Both were reported to be well to do.

Jealousy was said to have entered into their married life, however, and quarrels resulted. Mrs. Baring berating her husband on several occasions. A year ago they became reconciled and went on a "second honeymoon" to Europe last summer. Mrs. Baring was said to be about to become a mother.

Nearly Collapsed in Court.

Baring is a mild mannered, soft spoken man, tall and slender. He is a member of several golf clubs. When taken into court he was on the verge of collapse. He had to hold the court railing to steady himself.

Asked how he would plead, he seemed to be in a daze. Finally he stammered: "I plead guilty to the charge, except as to the intent to kill."

BEAUTY OF AMERICAN GIRLS WINS OVER BRITISH LORD

Rothermere Declares They Even Excel Paris and—Also England.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26. — The beauty of American women made a deeper impression than anything else in this country upon Lord Rothermere, owner of the London Daily Mail and other British newspapers, who sailed for England on the Majestic today. "I never saw prettier women than in New York," he said.

"Even prettier than in Paris?" he was asked.

"Oh yes—much prettier."

"And what of England?"

"For the moment I might even say of England."

One of Lord Rothermere's secretaries suggested that the Britisher's praise of America's feminine charms should be toned down lest his words should plague him on his arrival in England. But Lord Rothermere stood pat.

$3,600,000 FOR STATE BONUS

Raupp Says Amount Is Sufficient to Pay Remaining Claims.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—The State Board of Fund Commissioners this afternoon decided to sell only $3,600,000 in bonds from the $4,600,000 issue authorized by constitutional amendment, to meet unpaid claims for the Missouri Soldier Bonus, on a recommendation by Adjutant General Raupp that $3,600,000 would be ample to pay remaining claims. The remaining $1,000,000 in bonds authorized will not be issued, it was stated. The bonds will be sold by the commissioners in Jefferson City on May 15, for delivery July 1 to the purchasers. The bonds will bear four and a half per cent interest, dating from June 1, and will mature in annual installments, at 1 to 20 years.

Payment of approximately 25,000 claims still unpaid will begin soon after proceeds of the bond sale are made available. These claims were left in the hands of the Adjutant-General's department when the original $15,000,000 bond issue for soldier bonus was exhausted last year. The additional bond issue of $4,600,000 was provided in a constitutional amendment adopted, with five other amendments, in a special election on February 26.

CHICAGO TURNS UP CLOCKS

Daylight Saving Also Begins in New York This Morning.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Daylight saving will begin here for the seventh consecutive year at 2 a. m. tomorrow morning. The hour will be made up when clocks are turned back the last Sunday in September. Most suburbs near Chicago followed the city's example.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Daylight saving, optional in New York State and made operative in New York City by a municipal ordinance, will become effective at 2 o'clock tomorrow morning and will continue in effect until 2 o'clock the morning of Sept. 28. Clocks will be put forward one hour. While railroads generally will continue to operate on standard time, they will conform, in some cases, to daylight saving time to facilitate suburban traffic.

GOLDEN RULE TRIUMPHS AND SGT. BECCARD IS REINSTATED

Mayor Kiel Reverses Himself and Casts Deciding Vote in Favor of Officer Previously Dismissed for Insubordination — Board Has Stormy Session.

BREACH BETWEEN MEMBERS WIDENED

President Brockman Likely to Call for Showdown With Governor—Friends Say That He May Resign.

The Golden Rule—sweet and gentle doctrine that it is—was pitted against the grim rule of iron behind closed doors at the Board of Police Commissioners' meeting yesterday afternoon. Hail to the golden rule. It won. Perhaps but temporarily, though poets assure that "truth crushed to earth will rise again."

It was a question of which rule would rule the Police Board from now on. Any one who listened from the outer chambers could have told that. His Honor, the Mayor, and four commissioners were arguing. Those upholding the golden rule was neither very sweet nor very gentle, and so was the iron rule—the mailed fist was hitting the table hard and often.

Results of Clash.

The results of the clash were these:

Former Police Sergeant John Beccard, discharged for insubordination recently, was reinstated.

The board split sharply and in anger on the question. President Brockman and Commissioner Moore opposed Beccard's reinstatement. Commissioners Howard and Young were in favor of it.

Mayor Kiel cast the deciding vote. In doing so he reversed himself, as he on a previous deadlock had voted to discharge the Sergeant.

The breach between members of the Police Board, opened shortly after Clarence H. Howard was named a member by Gov. Hyde, is widened.

Brockman Wants Showdown.

It was learned on good authority that President Brockman intends to call for a showdown with the Governor and urge him to end the deadlock between the Commissioners. Friends of Brockman say he may resign.

The Board of Police Commissioners had not intended to devote this week's meeting to a fight over the Golden Rule. It had assembled to promote worthy officers to vacancies and thus create one Captain, two Lieutenants and 10 Sergeants.

But Commissioner Howard is not a man to desert his principles. Indeed, he has frequently said in speeches before the Chamber of Commerce that the Golden Rule is the biggest thing in his life. He likes it even better than the Boy Scout oath, another favorite creed of his. And Howard recalled that the vacancy created by the discharge of Sergt. Beccard would soon be filled. It was now or never.

Moves for Reinstatement.

"I move we reinstate Sergt. Beccard," he said.

"Second the motion," announced Commissioner Young promptly.

President Brockman protested that the Beccard case had been settled and appealed to Mayor Kiel. Commissioner Moore sided with Brockman. The Mayor, feeling that he, as fifth man, was judge, and forgetting that he had heard all the evidence at Beccard's trial and voted to fire him, said he was willing to listen to arguments.

Commissioner Howard, in an expansive mood, got up immediately and said he thought Sergt. Beccard ought to be judged in a "big, loving way." He added that every member of the Board would want himself judged that way if he had been a Police Sergeant and had called the Chief of Detectives a liar, as Beccard had done.

Effort at Compromise.

Commissioner Young said he thought the board had been too severe in discharging the Sergeant. An effort at compromise was made by President Brockman, then. He offered to vote to reinstate Beccard as a patrolman. Howard and Young shouted that

SWEARS WHEELER PROMISED TO GET PERMITS FIXED UP

Former Secretary to Campbell Testifies Concerning Conversation Over Work in Capital on Oil Lands.

MADE AFFIDAVITS FOR G. O. P. WORKER

Borah Declines to Admit Hearsay Evidence—Member of Wheeler Grand Jury on Stand.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—H. E. Glosser, former secretary to Gordon Campbell, Montana oil prospector, whose employment of Senator Burton K. Wheeler as attorney led to Wheeler's indictment, testified today before the Borah committee that he had heard Wheeler tell his client not to worry about Government permits, as "they could be fixed up easily in Washington."

Glosser is understood to have been the most important witness before the grand jury, which returned the Wheeler indictment since the charge is based on the assertion that Wheeler accepted money to use his influence before the Department of the Interior, the Glosser testimony was undoubtedly the most damaging to the Senator that has yet been produced.

Borah Rejects Evidence.

It was, however, offset to a large degree by admissions which the witness made on cross-examination, and by other testimony which revealed the following circumstances:

That the grand jury which indicted Wheeler heard evidence which Senator Borah refused to accept before his committee on the ground that it would not be held valid in any court of law, being based on alleged statements of Campbell which were not made in the presence of Senator Wheeler.

That no minutes were taken of the proceedings before the grand jury.

That Glosser was sought out by Blair Coan, agent of the National Republican, official organ of the Republican National Committee, and had his expenses paid by Coan to Denver, Colo., where he made an affidavit which formed the substance of this latter testimony. Glosser made two affidavits for Coan, the first of which he was unable to produce because he said it was in Montana. Coan, it was testified, paid Glosser's expenses for another trip which he took to Billings, Mont., to consult a lawyer.

That there was a misstatement in the Denver affidavit concerning the amount of the checks which Campbell paid to Wheeler by way of fee. Glosser testified that this was based on faulty recollection and he subsequently corrected it when he saw the actual checks on his appearance before the grand jury.

There were several sharp clashes before the committee when Senator Sterling, who represents the "prosecution," sought to have Glosser relate his conversations with Campbell when Wheeler was not present. Sterling insisted that other committees had taken hearsay testimony.

Committee Supports Borah.

"I want facts," said Borah. "I don't want hearsay," and the committee supported him.

Glosser testified that Wheeler had "left the impression" upon those attending a conference in Great Falls, that he would "fix up" one permit at Washington for the oil operator.

On the other hand, E. M. Harvey of Eugene, Ore., formerly a trustee of Gordon Campbell Syndicate No. 1, told the committee that the trustees had passed on the terms of Senator Wheeler's employment and that he was to represent the syndicate only in court matters.

"Mr. Wheeler's employment," he said, "as far as I know, was to appear in a receivership suit brought by L. C. Stevenson and some other actions we contemplated bringing in behalf of the syndicate."

"Was Mr. Glosser present when the terms of the agreement were ratified?" asked Chairman Borah. "I think he was," Harvey replied.

Conference on Permits.

Glosser testified that the conference at which Campbell's business was discussed, was held on Jan. 15, 1923, and was attended by Wheeler, Campbell, W. W. Rhea and Glosser. Oil land permits were discussed, he said, and particularly the Phil McGowan permit.

"Mr. Campbell said to Mr. Rhea that if Mr. Wheeler could get this fixed up in Washington," Glosser said, "we can afford to cut a lot of money, or something like that."

"What did Senator Wheeler say?" asked Senator Sterling, Republican, South Dakota. "I don't recall that he made any reply. Oh, yes he did later."

"But not that evening?" "No, but he left us under the impression that he could fix it up at Washington because of the influence he had there."

Glosser testified that he had made two affidavits at the request of Blair Coan, who was sent to Montana by George B. Lockwood, secretary of the Republican National Committee, and who had appeared before the grand jury which indicted Senator Wheeler. He said it was his understanding that Coan was to use the affidavits as the basis for news stories in the National Republican.

The first affidavit was made at Billings, Mont., he said, and the second at Denver, Colo., and Coan paid his expenses to both cities. The committee had a copy of the second affidavit, but not of the first, and Glosser agreed to furnish it. He will be recalled later, probably after the examination of Coan, who has been in Washington for some time.

Grand Juror Testifies.

A. F. Sparling of Great Falls, one of the three men of the Great Falls grand jury who have been summoned here, and Col. Harry O. Willard, U. S. A., retired, a stockholder in and a trustee of the Campbell company, were heard before the committee adjourned subject to call.

Sparling said the grand jury had kept no minutes of the Wheeler case, although minutes were kept on the first case that was taken up. He started to criticise the Wheeler case, but Sterling shut him off before he could do so. Wheeler asked that Sparling state the number of ballots taken by the grand jury before a true bill was agreed on, but Sterling objected, and Borah said he would have to examine the law before passing on the question. Sparling will be recalled.

Col. Willard told the committee that he had had correspondence with Senator Wheeler with reference to his employment by Campbell and promised to furnish later his letter to the Senator and the latter's reply.

Vanderlip Appoints Counsel for His Research Bureau.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Frank A. Vanderlip announced tonight the employment of J. Weston Allen, former Attorney-General of Massachusetts and criminal prosecutor, as general counsel for the Citizens' Federal Research Bureau, the investigation organization Vanderlip created following the oil exposures. Vanderlip said he appointed Allen because of the latter's high legal attainments and impartial enforcement of law in public offices without regard to politics. Allen made a statement, which said in part:

"In directing the legal work of this bureau, I shall have in view the two purposes so forcefully declared by President Coolidge in his New York address—first, that any who have been guilty of corrupt practices shall be ascertained and held to full accountability, and second, that any charges of corruption shall be supported by trustworthy evidence, and not based on rumor or malice.

"The material gathered by the bureau will be available, both to the Department of Justice and other executive departments, and to the committees of Congress. In the present political situation in Washington, incident to the presidential campaign, it seems to me that a nonpartisan bureau affords an unusual opportunity to render a great public service."

Harriman and Bride, Former Model, Sail on Honeymoon

MRS. OLIVER C. HARRIMAN.
(From a Sketch by Harrison Fisher)

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.

THE marriage of Oliver Carley Harriman, broker and polo player, to Miss Harriet Hewitt, formerly Horowitz, one time model in a Fifth avenue dressmaking house, was revealed today when they sailed on the Majestic on their honeymoon. Friends said they were married recently in a city near New York.

Harriman, the son of Oliver Harriman, banker, was divorced in January by Mrs. Lois Bisbee Harriman. The decree gave the first Mrs. Harriman alimony of $500 a month and custody of their two minor children. A short time later Harriman sold his seat on the New York Stock Exchange and resigned his membership in a brokerage firm.

Great secrecy surrounded the departure of the Harrimans today. They succeeded in making their way undetected to a suite which was filled with flowers. There they entrenched and refused to see callers while in the corridor outside a group of the bride's friends, who said they were models, confirmed the marriage. It was stated the Harrimans would spend six weeks in France and England.

M. S. DAUGHERTY'S ARREST ORDERED BY THE SENATE

Without Debate Brookhart's Request for Summoning of Ex-Attorney-General's Brother Is Granted.

HE HAS FAILED TO OBEY SUBPENAS

If Ohio Banker Is Taken Into Custody He Probably Will Be Kept in Hotel Instead of Jail.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—John J. McGrain, Assistant Sergeant-at-Arms of the United States Senate, had placed in his hands tonight a warrant calling for the production of the "body" of Mal Daugherty, brother of the former Attorney-General, "before the bar of the Senate."

It is expected that McGrain will arrive in Washington Courthouse, O., to arrest Daugherty not later than Monday morning. Whether he will accomplish his purpose, or whether the Ohio banker will be able to resist the process through his own State courts is now in doubt. The expectation is, however, that there will be an Ohio law suit based either on a habeas corpus or an attempt to enjoin the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Has Ignored Two Subpenas.

After waiting, while the Brookhart committee was preparing the necessary papers, the Senate voted unanimously today, without debate, to bring Daugherty before it and keep him in custody until he has answered the questions which the Brookhart committee desires to propound to him. Unlike other recalcitrant witnesses, Daugherty has not even put in an appearance before the committee. He has simply ignored the two subpenas which have been served on him.

If the Sergeant-at-Arms does succeed in taking Daugherty he will not be put in jail. Any good hotel will answer so long as Daugherty is "in custody." And since once before a man who was arrested under somewhat similar circumstances, sued the Government and recovered $11,000 damages, Daugherty will not be made to sustain any indignities unless he should physically resist arrest.

The warrant for Daugherty's arrest, which was signed by the President pro tem. of the Senate, was based on a report from the Brookhart committee, which set forth that the president of the Midland Bank had twice ignored a subpena. The first was served on him on March 21. It called for the banker to appear and bring with him the deposit ledgers of the bank, the files showing the owners of safety deposit vaults and also account records showing withdrawals from the bank in excess of $25,000. Obedience would have meant the production of perhaps a ton of books.

Interested in "New York Funds."

On April 11, a subcommittee consisting of Senators Brookhart and Wheeler went to Washington Courthouse and served another subpena on Daugherty calling on Daugherty to appear before them there. This, the report of the committee sets forth, he likewise failed to respond to. The committee is particularly interested in the "New York money" which, according to testimony, was deposited in the bank and in the funds which Harry M. Daugherty is credited with having kept in his brother's bank.

Not a question was directed to Chairman Brookhart, when he rose to ask for the Senate vote, and, although a single objection would have sufficed under Senate rules to hold the resolution over for a day's consideration for a day at least, the intervention was not forthcoming.

Senator Cummings (Rep.), Iowa, as president of the Senate, signed the warrant which directed the sergeant-at-arms to "take into custody the body of the said M. S. Daugherty, wherever found," to produce him to answer such questions pertinent to the matter under consideration as the Senate may direct, and to keep the "said M. S. Daugherty in custody to wait the further order of the Senate."

Precedents for the action, while scanty, are not entirely lacking. In the Senate sugar investigation, several years ago, Hale T. Kilbourne refused to testify and was imprisoned, but released after a fight through the courts on a writ of habeas corpus. Three other instances of the arrest of recalcitrant witnesses occurred between 1857 and 1868.

A temporary restraining order was issued on April 11, from an Ohio State court, seeking to prevent Chairman Brookhart and Senator Wheeler, the committee "prosecutor," from endeavoring to get the books of the Midland Bank. So far, no attention has been paid by the committee to the suit.

J. P. MORGAN PROMISES AID ON GERMAN LOAN WHEN ALLIES GET TOGETHER

American Banker's Views Communicated to Poincare—Theunis to Try to Harmonize English and French Views.

By ARNO DOSCH FLEUROT,
Paris Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, April 25.—America will participate in the loan to Germany under the terms of the experts' plan, provided the allied Governments fully agree to support the plan and settle the differences between them as soon as possible. This conditional proposal was suggested this morning by J. Pierpont Morgan to Louis Barthou and Sir John Bradbury, French and English members of the reparation commission.

Morgan explained that he realized circumstances now were different from those in June, 1922, when he was against making the loan. He considered the experts' plan a sane solution to the reparations tangle. He depended now upon the ability of the European Governments, particularly England and France, to come to an understanding over their obvious differences of opinion.

Impressed With Talk.

Barthou and Sir John, as a committee, had two chances to talk to Morgan, at dinner at Barthou's last night, and this morning again in an official setting. Barthou was sufficiently impressed with the banker's talk to inform Premier Poincare this afternoon that it was advisable to meet the British half way in consideration of the need for speedy action.

While the Barthou-Bradbury special committee is also expected to talk with the Bank of England on Monday, the conversation with Morgan has greater significance, it is believed here, because it has a direct effect on French policy. While Morgan was talking on the financial possibilities and aspect of the proposed loan, the effect of his remarks was to warn against prolonged interallied wrangling over putting the plan into action.

All the allied Governments have replied to the reparation commission's request for them to express themselves on the plan. The British made plain that they leave the matter of the total German debt to the reparation commission. The British reason for so doing is obviously because they do not wish to raise the question of interallied debts, which would be raised by the French if a total figure was talked.

Significant Passages.

Premier Poincare's reply to the commission has two significant passages. Bringing up the question of the Ruhr, he said the allied Governments must, before putting the plan into action, decide "under what conditions the securities held by France and Belgium will be merged into, or exchanged for" those that the plan provides. Poincare also insists that the reparation commission must first put the experts' plan and suggestion into "practical" form. He insists that "the Governments will not be able to take useful action until they have exact information as to the practical effects the Reparation Commission gives to the experts' proposals."

On this point British and French remain in active opposition. The British hold that the French have no right to tell the Reparation Commission what to do. The French hold that they cannot and will not act until the Reparation Commission turns the plan into set orders.

Premier Theunis of Belgium, who is talking with Premier Poincare Monday and with Premier MacDonald a few days later, is expected to try to be a go-between in an effort to harmonize the divergent views of London and Paris, which are at present the greatest obstacle to projection of the experts' plan into action. What all realize is the danger to the scheme as a whole should Poincare and MacDonald meet and fail to come to an agreement. That accounts for the hope being placed on Theunis' efforts to bring Poincare and MacDonald to an agreement before the interallied conference.

ALLIES' REPLIES ACCEPTING REPORT OF THE EXPERTS

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 26.—The replies of the four big allied Powers to the Reparation Commission's communication regarding the Dawes report all accept the experts' findings wholly.

France alone raises the question of procedure, while Italy declares the report to be "an indivisible whole," which should be taken in its entirety without condition or qualification.

Belgian Communication.

The Belgian reply says: "The Belgian Government is prepared to accept the experts' conclusions as a whole, with a view to a practical and equitable settlement of the reparations problem.

"The Belgian Government further hopes that the Reparation Commission will lose no time in preparing the measures, the details of which were entrusted to it by the report, so that when this work has been carried out, the plan recommended may be brought into prompt operation by common agreement among the allied governments."

The British reply says in part: "His majesty's Government, for their part, accept and will do everything in their power to give practical effect to the recommendation of the commission that the allied Governments should likewise adopt the conclusions of the committees with regard to matters falling within the jurisdiction of those Governments. The recommendations of the experts do not appear to involve any reduction in the total of the German reparation debt and the necessary modifications of the schedule of payments of May, 1921, appear to be within the competence of a unanimous decision of the Reparation Commission and not to require the specific authority of the several Governments represented on the commission under article 234 of the treaty of Versailles.

"If, however, there is any doubt on this point, his majesty's Government are prepared to grant such specific authority.

'Other matters arising on the experts' recommendations which appeared to be within the jurisdiction of the allied Governments are:

"(a) Restoration of the economic and fiscal authority of the German Government territories; (b) steps necessary to give binding effect to the new guarantees and controls in so far as these may not be clearly covered by the existing provisions of the treaty of Versailles; (c) the inclusion of all the financial liabilities of Germany under the peace treaty in a single annuity.

British Position Stated.

"On the first point his Majesty's Government are prepared to give full support to the experts' recommendation and to take, in consultation with the other Governments concerned, whatever steps may be necessary to effect full restoration at the earliest possible date.

"As regards the second, the agreement of the German Government having already been obtained all that remains to be done is to give formal effect to it. His majesty's Government will be prepared to proceed by whatever may be found to be the most convenient and effectual method of achieving this object.

On the third point his majesty's Government accept the experts' recommendation and are prepared for their part to ask the Reparations Commission to propose a scheme to put this provision into execution. Should any other of the recommendations of the experts be held by the Reparations Commission to require indorsement by or action on the part of the allied Governments, his majesty's government will for their part be prepared to take whatever steps may be necessary to give effect to them."

Italian Reply.

The Italian reply, after saying the Italian Government considers the experts' reports "documents of the highest value," continues:

"The contents of the two reports, being considered as an indivisible whole, the royal Government notes with satisfaction that the Reparations Commission adopted them in their entirety, and is sure the commission will be able now rapidly to continue its work.

"For its part the Italian Government is from this time disposed to adopt integrally, the conclusion of the experts, as well as the principles which inspired them, being persuaded that these principles constitute an equitable basis for the regulations of the question of reparations and the questions connected therewith in conformity with the line of conduct constantly pursued by the royal Government."

Note From Poincare.

France's reply was written by Premier Poincare. It says:

"The commission now is in a position to pronounce judgment and the governments have the right to expect from it a definite decision which will embody the conclusions of the experts' reports, support them with argument, and give them practical form (since in most cases they are drafted, as is only proper, in the case of reports from advisors, in the form of mere indications), and will complete them on certain points which the experts left to the commission itself to deal with, or on which they did not express any opinion.

"It is only when the commission has completed this work and thus has clearly defined all the matters coming within its competence under the treaty, and those not within its jurisdiction, that it will be in a position to communicate the latter to the Government concerned.

"The Government will not be able to take useful action until they have exact information as to the practical effect upon which the Reparation Commission gives the experts' proposals."

Poincare warns the Reparation Commission that it must be in a position to find out whether Germany has taken the measures necessary to carry out the commission's decision. He stresses the point that no decision can be taken until the commission has approved the drafts of laws and decrees it has requested Germany to submit for the execution of the plan, and he reiterated that only after that decision will the allies be in a position to arrive at their own decision.

"Under the circumstances, the German and the allied Governments cannot, in fact, be placed on the same footing," he continues.

Decision as to Securities.

"Germany is entitled to a just opportunity to be heard," the Premier's reply goes on, but afterward, he says, the Reparation Commission "must then give a decision with all the authority the treaty confers upon it."

Then, takink up the experts' opinion that the economic and financial unity of the Reich should be restored as soon as the plan is put into execution. Poincare says:

"Since the commission has decided to accept the conclusions of the experts as a whole, the French Government ventures to assume that on this point of capital importance it does not intend to modify these conclusions. The Governments will have to consider together under what conditions the securities now held by France and Belgium shall be merged into or exchanged for those which will be handed over as an undivded whole to the allies.

"These operations cannot, however, take place until Germany has effectively put the plan into execution, and it is for the Governments to determine by common agreement the guarantee these operations may render necessary.

"It is, moreover, understood that in the course of the conversations to be entered into, the French Government, which appreciates the work of the experts, as do the other allied Governments, will in a spirit of conciliation and mutual understanding make every necessary effort compatible with France's vital interests to facilitate the prompt execution of a definite decision to be communicated by it to the commission."

GERMAN PROCLAMATION SAYS EXPERTS' PLAN IS ONLY HOPE FOR NATION

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 26.—

IN a proclamation issued tonight, the Government warns the German people against the extremists who oppose acceptance of the reparation experts' reports and makes this one of the chief Government issues in the Reichstag electoral campaign, now at full tilt with the election date only eight days away.

The proclamation points out that rejection of the experts' plan would develop a crisis which might eventually involve Germany in a new war against the entire world. In the event the experts' report is turned down by the extremists, the proclamation declares, it would mean in the long run an unconditional surrender to Germany's enemies under conditions more grave than if the report were accepted. The statement concludes with the contention that the only means of saving the country from utter ruin is to abide by the policy outlined by Brigadier General Dawes and his colleagues.

The campaign is being bitterly contested and Chancellor Marx, Foreign Minister Stresemann and the other party leaders are having their speeches broadcast by radio throughout the country daily.

PINCHOT 'WILL NOT LIE DOWN' ON PROHIBITION

Defeat at Polls Will Not Keep Him From Insisting on Dry Enforcement, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 26.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania delved into governmental troubles in his own State and the nation, the conduct of public officials, and again challenged Federal prohibition enforcement, in an address tonight before the National League of Women Voters. "No defeat at the polls will prevent me from insisting on the absolute need for efficiency in law enforcement," Pinchot declared. "I will not be silenced, and I will not lie down."

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, a companion speaker on the same platform, condemned overcentralization by the assuming of the Federal Government of functions which, he maintained, might better be performed by the states. "Over-centralization," Gov. Ritchie said, "means that the Federal Government is taking away from the states the right to administer things which are by nature local."

Gov. Pinchot, in opening his address, said that "honesty in Government is a question of purpose. Honesty in Government means more than public servants keeping out of jail. There has been too much talking, as if all that was necessary to justify retaining a man in the cabinet was the failure to show, by legal evidence, that he ought to be in prison. Such a standard is wholly without excuse, and nothing could be more dangerous to the public service.

"A man does not belong in the cabinet merely because he has not been convicted of crime," he continued. "Honesty in Government goes far beyond the refusal to steal. No public servant is honest in any genuine sense who puts any other interest ahead of the interest of all the people.

Assails Fall and Denby.

"Too many men of high position and responsibility, like Fall, have betrayed and sacrificed the public interest to their own private profit; too many men, like Denby, in their muddle-headed carelessness of what the people need, have let slip the golden opportunity to check great losses and render conspicuous service; too many Government organizations fail to protect the public interests committed to their charge.

"The most conspicuous example in our Government, not only of failure, but of refusal to do the work committed to it, is that of the Federal Enforcement Service in Washington. Not only in Pennsylvania, where its scandalous breakdown floods the state with liquor, but in many other commonwealths, its wilful neglect to use the authority committed to its hands has brought degradation, disease and death upon the people.

"Since it refuses to do its duty, the Federal Enforcement Service must be compelled to do it. I cannot make Pennsylvania dry until the liquor its slackness allows to flow over the state is checked at the source.

"I would not have you believe that our national Government has sunk to the level of the enforcement service. It has not. But it needs today, as it has seldom ever needed before, a rebirth of genuine devotion to the public service."

THE 'ELITE CLUB' NEAR FOLEY HOME PLACE OF MYSTERY

Elite Neighbors at St. Louis Country Club Are Wondering Who Comprise Its Elect Membership.

FOLEY DENIES ANY CONNECTION WITH IT

Man at House Says It's Place for Recreation but 82 Members "Don't Go There to Read Voltaire."

Some of the elite who belong to the St. Louis Country Club, on Price road, are wondering who comprise the membership of the "Elite Club," which has sprung into existence half a mile north on the same road.

No one who could be reached yesterday seems to know much about the new place, but numerous persons in the neighborhood are speculating about it with varying conclusions.

This much is plain: On a sunkissed, green plateau rests the aristocratic Country Club, surrounded by fine homes. On an equally sunkissed but less conspicuously green hillside, in clear view across a valley, is the "Elite Club." Most of the homes in the neighborhood are cottages. Just a little farther north is the modest domicile of "Tony" Foley, ex-convict and erstwhile gambling house proprietor in Wellston, who is raising blooded horses on a small farm.

The aforementioned neighborhood speculators do not fail to point out the proximity of the Foley home and the "Elite Club." But Foley, who is a soft-spoken man, told a Post-Dispatch reporter last night that he had nothing to do with the new club and knew of no reason to suppose that it was not simply a social club. He had heard previously that his name had been mentioned in connection with the establishment, he said, but had pointed out that his interest was in his horses.

"Place for Recreation."

The reporter visited the new club yesterday afternoon and encountered leaving through the fancy gate a man who said he was connected with the establishment and who identified himself as H. Gray. Gray said the club had been formed by a group of men who wanted a place for recreation in the country, and who leased this three-acre place. The membership now is about 82 and the limit is 100, he said. Names of officers and members could not be given out without permission, he said.

He had heard Foley mentioned in connection with the place, but Foley is not connected with it, he said. Nor is it a gambling place, he said, but added, "You don't think we read Voltaire out here, do you?" Asked if it wasn't quite possible that "friendly games" took place, Gray assented, declaring that only members and their guests are admitted. There is a swimming room and a dining hall, he said, and there will be tennis courts and possibly a putting green.

A man who was putting the finishing touches on the sign over the gate, which had been delivered in the morning, was interested in the mention of Foley and came to the latter's defense. "Why do the papers always call him an ex-convict?" he asked. "He only got sent up because he wouldn't talk about a friend. Why do they complain about gambling? I don't believe in taking a working man's money away from him, but it's all right for those who can afford it."

The sign over the gate, in big letters, reads:

replacing a painted wooden sign. The short driveway to the plazza is shielded by new lattice-work fences, surmounted by bright lights. A gay striped awning shields the threshold. The windows of the second floor of the square brick house are of stained glass; they were installed that way by the contractor who built the place for his residence a couple of years ago. The place is scrupulously neat and there are indications of much care of the lawn, and so forth.

Lights Burn All Night.

Persons living in the neighborhood said that lights had been burning brightly in the establishment nightly, in the 10 days or more since it was opened, sometimes not being extinguished till daybreak. However, they said there were few signs of life about the place at night, and they had heard no disturbances. Some automobiles were seen coming and going. That's as far as neighborhood knowledge goes and the elite feel there's a mystery about the "Elite."

down. Beccard had been fired as a Sergeant, as a Sergeant he must return. That was the Golden Rule.

Commissioner Moore made a speech in support of an iron rule. He declared that the Beccard case was a test for department discipline. "You can't run a police department with the Golden Rule any more than you can maintain discipline in an army with such a milk and water policy," he concluded.

He was chided by Commissioner Howard for uttering such a characterization of the Golden Rule. Howard said he had built his steel company on the rule.

In vain Commissioner Howard pleaded with Brockman and Moore" to look at this thing in a great big loving way." He asked them to step into Beccard's shoes for a moment, and wouldn't they feel then that reinstatement was fair and just? "Just think how that poor man must feel," he said again and again.

Mayor Sits in Judgment.

Through it all Mayor Kiel sat in judgment and when his four colleagues were unable longer to talk, a vote was called for. The vote stood, as has been told: Ayes, 3, Noes, 2.

"That's the rottenest decision that was ever made in this board room!" Commissioner Moore said.

The Commissioners were silent and perspiring when they emerged from executive session. Howard and the Mayor walked together; the others single file. They had consumed so much time in reinstating Beccard—who, by the way, had not even applied for reinstatement—that the question of promotions had to be laid over until next Tuesday.

Commissioner Howard smiled as he stepped into the elevator. Back there, taking the count, was the Rule of Iron. The board had turned the other cheek; that is three members of the board. As for the other members, President Brockman and Commissioner Moore—they spoke as follows to a Post-Dispatch reporter:

Commissioner Moore: "I told them it was a rotten decision. I don't want this thing smoothed over. I feel very resentful about it. I do not see Mr. Howard's interpretation of the Golden Rule. Was it according to the Golden Rule to turn down some good officer with a clean record who might have been promoted to take the vacant Sergeantcy in order to put Beccard back?

"And I'd like to ask Mr. Howard this: 'Was it brotherly and loving to accuse me of being owned body and soul by President Brockman? He made such an accusation at the board meeting last Tuesday.' I don't know how the Mayor got into this today. I certainly cannot explain his reversing his own vote as he did.

"A Lot of Fluffy Talk."

"Mr. Howard made a lot of fluffy talk about the Golden Rule, but that doesn't go in a Police Department. Beccard called his chief a liar in the presence of the board. In a military organization it would have meant a court martial. A police department must maintain military discipline if we are to have any police department."

President Brockman: "I am convinced that the men who voted to reinstate Sergt. Beccard were terribly wrong. It puts Commissioner Moore and myself in a difficult position. We certainly are of the same opinion we have always held. You'll have to ask the Mayor why he voted as he did. I can't explain it."

It will be recalled that before Beccard's dismissal, April 8, Commissioner Howard attempted to "fix it up" by having Beccard apologize to Hoagland. The attempt failed and President Brockman laid the case before Gov. Hyde in a letter asking his support. The Governor has seemed inclined to hold off to await developments.

Neither Mayor Kiel nor Commissioner Howard nor Commissioner Young would discuss the case last night. All referred inquirers to President Brockman.

MRS. LERNER ASKS FOR SQUARE DEAL IN ENTRY TO U. S.

honorably discharged soldier of the United States Army. Not being able to withstand a temperature of 50 degrees below zero, I resigned from the colony with my husband, and went to Latvia to return to America. The United States consul refused to permit my return, even as an immigrant, and thus forced me to part from my husband.

"I waited three months, and not receiving mail from America (it being withheld some place) and having no money, I returned to Moscow, where I managed to get a little work at English typing, but with barely enough pay to live on.

"Through a Wisconsin friend, I appealed to Senator La Follette, who saw the inhuman injustice being done me and promised to help. Here I am in a foreign land, separated from my husband, where I have no relatives and but few friends. I speak no national tongue other than English and, excepting a few American and English people I meet, have none to talk to. I am terribly lonesome day and night. I dream of home. My poor old mother weeps for me; my sisters, brothers and other relatives are all in America wanting my return, but are helpless. My brothers and husband have sworn out affidavits of support. My brothers and uncles are United States citizens, but my father died before he was able to become a citizen. He was an old, feeble man. I am the youngest—the baby of a family of eight.

"I have never been arrested in America or Russia. I have never committed any crime other than loving my fellow men—if that is a crime. Yet the American authorities wish to sentence me forever to a lonesome life away from my loved ones.

"People of America, I appeal to you. Give me a square deal, so that I may go back home."

Recovering From Illness.

In a letter written in March and sent with the foregoing statement, Mrs. Lerner said that she was just recovering from an attack of influenza. Her wages for the month, she said, would be 9 chervonetz, or $44.

"Could you envy my existence—to live without reading newspapers; no books; no theaters?" she added. "Even the moving pictures have no pleasure for me, for I cannot read the titles. Once in a great while, however, a Charlie Chaplin film is exhibited. And to relish a Chaplin film one does not need to be able to read titles. I make no attempt to study Russian, for I am hoping, day by day in every way, to be going back to America."

Mrs. Lerner is living, she writes, at the Central Immigrants House, in a room occupied by other immigrants. She receives mail in care of the Hotel Lux, Moscow.

PATRONS TO BURY NEWSBOY

Henry (Dad) Mack, the 64-year-old newsboy, will have a real funeral. Newspaper readers and newspaper employes to whom "Dad" Mack was a familiar figure, have "chipped in" and he will be buried at 2 p. m. today at Valhalla Cemetery, after services at an undertaker's chapel at Twenty-first and Wash streets.

For 10 years Mack appeared daily, rain or shine, at his two posts—mornings at the southwest corner of Eighteenth and Olive streets, and afternoons in front of the Y. W. C. A. at Fourteenth and Locust stretes. Tuesday he appeared as usual and Wednesday his patrons learned he was dead of heart disease at city hospital. He has a sister in Cincinnati.

REPUBLICANS PLAN STRONGER PLANK AGAINST THE KLAN

matters to come before the convention.

It is the intention of the Governor, State Chairman Clements, and the others in control to have everything arranged in advance that the convention may pass off without a hitch and without any controversy.

Early in the proceedings there will be offered a resolution stipulating that no resolution shall be considered on the floor of the convention unless submitted by the Platform Committee. This means that any delegate who has any resolution to offer must submit it to the Platform Committee, and if the committee sees fit to pigeonhole it, it cannot be revived. This is a regular convention scheme to prevent any proposition which might cause discord getting onto the floor for debate.

The talk here today is that the early plan to give the negroes representation on the delegation at large is to be abandoned. It was proposed that three of the seven places should go to men, three to women and the seventh to a negro.

Since the election of one negro delegate in the Eleventh District and one in the Twelfth District, the disposition is to consider that sufficient representation for the negroes. Such a decision will enable the party leaders to take care of one more of their own number.

The slate, so far as it has been completed, for delegates at large, is Gov. Hyde, Senator Spencer and R. R. Brewster of Kansas City, nominee for the United States Senate in 1922. For women delegates the slate has the names of Mrs. Sylvester Wells of Kansas City, Mrs. W. R. Haight of Brandsville and Mrs. Frank P. Hays of St. Louis.

Cal Pierce Mentioned.

No decision has been reached as to the fourth man. Cal Pierce of Maryville, a member of the State Eleemosynary Board, and one of the Governor's closest advisers, wants to go as delegate at large. So does National Committeeman Babler, who is not a candidate for re-election, and Dr. J. C. Parish of Vandalia. If Babler can get the solid support of the delegation to the convention from St. Louis, it is probable that Hyde will permit him to be on the delegation. If there is a division as to Babler in St. Louis, the place probably will go to Pierce or some other Hyde Republican.

The leaders are looking over Southern Missouri for a likely man for the place, none of those on the men's slate being from the Ozark section.

It probably will all be worked out by Monday night in advance of the convention Tuesday. There is no sign of serious opposition to the slate makers, and whatever they do undoubtedly will be approved by the convention.

Soldiers' Home Surgeon Dies.

DANVILLE, Ill., April 26. — Dr. Guy A. Schultz, assistant surgeon at the Nation Soldiers' Home, died suddenly there Friday night, it was learned today. It was said there was nothing irregular in his death. Dr. Schultz lived in Lebanon, Ind., and served as assistant surgeon at the National Home at Marion, Ind., until all of the soldiers were moved in December, 1921. He graduated from the medical school of Washington University, St. Louis, in 1900.

JURY DISAGREES WHEN DITTMEIER GIVES ALIBI

Retrial Ordered in Damage Suit of Woman Hurt in Auto Accident.

Owing to an alibi presented by the defense, a jury in Circuit Judge Hartmann's court yesterday was unable to agree on a verdict in the damage suit of Mrs. Mae McIntyre, 5332 Cote Brilliante avenue, against Frank L. Dittmeier, 4929 Wabada avenue, and the Frank L. Dittmeier Real Estate Co. The jury was discharged by Judge Hartmann and the case will be retried.

Mrs. McIntyre sued for $7500 based on injuries suffered by her in an automobile accident. She alleged that on the afternoon of April 21, 1923, she was knocked down by a speeding auto at Elliot avenue and North Market street. The machine continued east without stopping, but a witness, Herbert Holtgrewe, 4930 Spalding avenue, testified that he and his father, who is now dead, got the license number and it proved to be the number of a license granted to Dittmeier Real Estate Co.

Another witness, Dr. Henry Greensfelder, who was driving his car in the vicinity, testified that the driver of the car which struck said plaintiff resembled Dittmeier. He said the car was going from 40 to 50 miles an hour.

However, Dittmeier and several witnesses testified that on the date of the accident to plantiff they were at Dittmeier's country home at O'Fallon, Mo., having left the city early in the morning and did not return until the next day. They had gone to O'Fallon for the purpose of stocking a lake with fish. Dittmeier declared he was not involved in any accident.

His wife testified that when a policeman called at her home in regard to the accident to Mrs. McIntyre, her husband was out of town and she so informed the officer. Another machine owned by Dittmeier was in the garage and had not been in use all day, she testified.

It developed that the witness, Holtgrewe, was a former neighbor of Dittmeier. He said his father wrote down the license number and gave it to him to keep.

BUDGET, SALARY AND TAX BILLS PASSED BY ALDERMEN

City Employes to Be Paid a Full Month's Salary on April 30—Increases for Many.

The budget, tax rate, and salary standardization bills were passed yesterday by the Board of Aldermen. The first two become effective with the signature of the Mayor. The third goes into effect on May 1. City employes, who missed their semi-monthly pay on April 15, will be paid a month's salary on April 30.

The budget bill appropriates $25,159,834.37 revenue to run the city this year. This sum is divided as follows: $18,877,424.37 for general operation and maintenance; $2,692,545 for Water Department; $3,228,855 for interest on public debt; and $350,000 for sprinkling streets. The money allotted to the Water Department and for sprinkling streets will return to the city treasury in the form of special taxes and assessments. The budget appropriation last year was $22,759,045.

The tax rate this year is set at $2.47 on the $100 valuation. The various items included in that rate are the same as last year except that for public schools which is increased from 82 cents to 86 cents.

The salary standardization bill fixes pay of city employes and grants increases aggregating $700,000 a year to 6000 employes, including city firemen.

MELLON TAX PLAN, DOOMED, BEGINS ITS DEATH MARCH

Old Guard Leaders, Foreseeing Its Fate, Make Their Plans to Abandon It by Degrees.

Post-Dispatch Bureau.
20-22 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The doom of the Mellon tax bill was indicated today, when yielding to the inevitable, old guard leaders in the Senate began plans to abandon the Mellon tax rate proposal by degrees.

Commencing Monday, Senator Smoot will bring up the schedule of rates included in the Mellon bill including the low 25 per cent maximum surtax and failing to secure approval of these rates will move to something better, continuing to abandon position inch by inch until a final point of agreement is reached.

This involves an offer to the progressive bloc to join with the regular Republicans in saving the situation and to pass a Republican tax bill rather than be forced to adopt a Democratic measure. In view of the attitude of Senate progressives in the past, and because of the recent onslaughts made upon them in the Republican party organ, the progressives are expected to accept the challenge to their Republicanism and to stand for an even higher surtax than is called for in the Democratic bill.

Democrats Plan to Stand Pat.

The prospect offers little encouragement for the administration program, and despite the present disposition to give ground, the Democrats are planning to stand pat with the expectation the progressives will give away on one side and the regulars on the other until Simmons rates with the maximum of 40 per cent on incomes of $500,000 is agreed to. This will throw the final contest in the conference committee, where the struggle will wage as between the Simmons and the Longworth compromise plans with the outlook favoring a final decision in the neighborhood of a maximum surtax of approximately 37 per cent and with some rearrangements of the normal rates and of the exceptions.

Admission that the regular Republicans were planning to give ground was made by Chairman Smoot of the Finance Committee who has insisted all along that what he aimed to get was the Mellon schedule or something as near the Mellon schedule as possible.

When the Senate takes up the rate schedules Monday, Senator Smoot will offer a series of compromises ranging from the 25 per cent surtax maximum already in the bill, then progressing upward with gradations, ranging from 30 per cent, 35 per cent, 37 per cent which is regarded as the last ground the Republicans plan to yield until compelled to do so.

Senate Using House Strategy.

This decision indicates the Senate leaders have accepted the Republican strategy adopted in the House as the best and propose to reach the House position by easy gradations so they will be in better position to have the Democratic surtaxes reduced in the final action of the conference committee.

Republican Floor Leader Longworth has said the House will not recede an inch from the position taken by it in adopting the so-called Lougworth plan and Representative Frear of Wisconsin has intimated his group is not disposed to withdraw from the position taken when the Wisconsin members voted for the House rates.

Progressives and Democrats are planning to unite in throwing out the tax on telegraph and telephone messages and on radio sets.

The Progressives will have to act "on their own" in standing for an inheritance tax, since the Democrats hold this tax should be left to the states and the Federal revenue derived from the income tax assessed against the beneficiaries of the inheritances.

Higher Exemptions Proposed.

Senator Harris (Dem.), Georgia, introduced an amendment today providing for an increase from $1000 to $2000 in the exemptions of single persons, and from $2500 to $3000 for heads of families, provided in both instances the income of the tax-payer is less than $5000. Otherwise exemptions in the present law would be maintained.

Committee amendments to the bill which were passed over by the Senate and over which some controversy is expected, include those dealing with earned income reduction, taxes on corporations, capital stock estate, gift, telephone and telegraph messages, automobiles, radio and drafts and checks; publicity of returns and the board of tax appeals.

BACKFIRING TAXI CAUSES SPECTACULAR FIRE

Garage and Automobile Storage Company on Olive and Vandeventer Burn.

The back firing of a taxicab in the Black and White Cab Company's garage at 3948 Olive Street is believed to have caused the spectacular fire which resulted in a general alarm being turned in at 1:30 A. M. today.

The flames spread rapidly through the two-story brick structure and soon the Metropolitan Storage Company, for automobiles, next door, had caught. Many machines were said to be in the latter garage, while several taxicabs were in the Black and White building. Firemen were wary because it was said a large tank of gasoline was in the cab company's garage.

Spread of the flames to the Arthur L. Anderson Laundry on the west was prevented by a thick fire wall.

Hundreds of persons appeared in automobiles and on foot to watch the progres of the fire. Automobiles lined the street for long distances in each direction.

Firemen and police were unable to estimate the probable damage.

2 Firemen Killed in Lowell, Mass.

By the Associated Press.

LOWELL, Mass., April 27.—Two firemen were reported killed by the collapse of a wall early today when fire destroyed the Associates and Mongeau buildings and the Academy of Music in the heart of the city. Militia companies were called out in an effort to prevent the flames from spreading. The loss was said to exceed $500,000.

FORFEITURE ORDER MAY HIT RAILWAY EXCHANGE TENANTS

Court Action Believed to Have Put Realty Company in Position to Cancel Low Rental.

Forfeiture of the lease of the Railway Exchange Building Co. on the land on which it stands, as ordered Friday by the Federal Court on petition of the Annuity Realty Co., is believed to put the latter company in a position to cancel the long-term low-rental leases of tenants, which have caused the Railway Exchange Building Company to operate at a loss for years.

The forfeiture, made possible when the building company went into bankruptcy last year, was held up for several months when railway companies occupying a large part of the building sought to prevent the realty company from getting possession. They contended that the building and realty companies had conspired to bring about the bankruptcy to enable cancellation of the low-rental leases.

The Federal Court recently decided against the railroads, as no attempt had then been made to cancel the leases. The ruling said that if such an attempt was later made, it would then be time for the railroads to bring forward their equities in the case.

MAN SHOT IN HOLDUP BY COMPANION IN POOL GAME

George Garbac in Serious Condition, Says Opponent in Contest Tried to Rob Him.

George Garbac, 33 years old, of 1703 Carroll street, was taken to City Hospital at 11:30 o'clock last night with a bullet wound in his left breast. He said he had been shot by a holdup man in a saloon at Eleventh street and Lafayette avenue a few minutes before.

The robber had been his opponent in a game of pool just before the shooting, Garbac asserted. They had finished the game and settled the charge without controversy. Garbac's opponent, described as a young fellow of medium build, rushed from the place and returned, wearing a handkerchief over the lower part of his face and holding a revolver. He came directly up to Garbac and ordered him to "stick 'em up." When Garbac was slow in complying the robber shot once and ran out.

Police are rounding up witnesses in an effort to verify the injured man's story. Garbac is in a critical condition.

CENTRAL COUNCIL DECLARES FOR MEMBERS' JURY SERVICE

Every citizen a voter, and a juror when called upon, was the prevailing sentiment of a conference held last night at Cabanne Branch Library, and attended by about 40 men, representing 12 or more churches. One Catholic church, St. Rose's, was among those represented.

The Central Council was formed, with W. W. Kay of 5540 Pershing avenue, as temporary chairman; B. M. Nevins as secretary, and P. M. Hanson, treasurer. John B. Edwards, chairman of the Election Board, spoke of neglect of the franchise by citizens, and Judge J. Hugo Grimm told of the evasion of jury service by many of those qualified to serve.

Kay said the organization later might decide to prepare reports on qualifications of candidates, but would not make recommendations as between candidates. Members of the Central Council obligate themselves to vote at every election, and not to evade jury duty.

Injury Fatal to Man.

Joseph Carr, 76 years old, of 1219½ Franklin avenue, died at city hospital at 6:45 p. m. yesterday from pneumonia, resulting from a fractured right hip, which he suffered on April 11, when he stubbed his toe and fell to the sidewalk at Ninth street and Franklin avenue.

DEPLORES DRIFT FROM REPRESENTATIVE RULE

Speaker at Safety Council Dinner Declares Nation Will Fail Unless Trend Is Halted.

The drift from strictly representative government, manifested during recent years in the United States, will cause this nation to fail as did other nations following similar tendencies in the past, Harry F. Atwood, of Chicago, president of the Constitution Anniversary Association, said last night at a dinner of the industrial section of the St. Louis Safety Council at Hotel Statler.

"The generation of which I am a part has been the most negligent in the history of the world and its treatment of its governmental opportunities has been the most contemptuous," he said.

Illustrating application of direct action methods, such as he said are involved in the initiative, referendum and recall and direct primary, he asked what would be the result if, in a baseball game, decisions of the umpire were referred to the bleachers. He said that a learned judge of whom he asked that question said the result would be that baseball would cease, without another game being played.

He declared reports of debates prior to adoption of the Federal Constitution reveal that the framers of the Constitution were more fearful of a Democracy than of any other thing.

He remarked that while intelligence once was a qualification for election to the United States Senate the public now elects men who openly boast that they have never read history and don't intend to do so.

"The drift in the United States is from representative government to direct action," he said. "Unless we halt that drift we are going the way of other great nations which fell to decay because of the same drift."

L. A. DeBlois, of Wilmington, Del., president of the National Safety Council, said that St. Louis leads in accident prevention work. He said that the world recognizes that America is a leader in such work. There are in the United States 58 active Safety Councils, he said, of which 38 have paid staffs as in St. Louis.

Diplomas were awarded last night to 300 men who have completed the St. Louis Safety Councils course of study on industrial safety work.

POLICE SAY JILTING CAUSED SUICIDE OF GIRL MURDERER

Man Sought as Wanda Stopa Slays Self After Killing Caretaker of Befriender's Home.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., April 26.—A repudiation by her pseudo-Russian nobleman husband is the theory advanced by Detroit police as the motive that actuated Wanda Elaine Stopa, former United States Assistant District Attorney, and a bright light in Chicago's latin quarter, to take her life in a hotel here yesterday.

Theodore Glasgow, who, police say, has a checkered career, is now being sought for his explanation of the tragedy, which had its inception in the fatal shooting of Henry Manning, caretaker of the estate of Y. Kenley Smith, Chicago advertising man, and befriender of Miss Stopa. Glasgow is believed to be in hiding in Detroit's foreign section.

The body of Miss Stopa was scheduled to be placed on a midnight train for Chicago. It was to be accompanied by several artist friends who came here earlier in the day.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Wanda Elaine Stopa's farewell letter to her mother, written yesterday in a Detroit hotel, while she contemplated suicide as the climax to her plan of vengeance against a Chicago advertising man with whom she was infatuated, was received here today. The letter, written in Polish, contained only four words, "My dear, dear mother," it read. It was signed "Mammanino." The signature is a Polish term of endearment, freely translated as "Mother's darling."

POLICEMAN IS BADLY CUT IN LEG IN STABBING AFFRAY

Officer Slashed By Man Wounded by Adversary in Knife Fight in Street.

Patrolman Charles Beckman, 28 years old, of the Central Police District, suffered a severe cut in his right leg at midnight, when he was stabbed by Ralph McReynolds, 29, a laborer of 1245 South Seventh street, at Seventh and Chouteau avenue. McReynolds and an unknown man were fighting with knives, when Beckman came up and attempted to stop the trouble.

McReynolds fell, wounded by his adversary, and as he lay on the ground struck out with a pocket-knife, wounding the policeman. McReynolds, who was cut about the head, and Beckman were taken to city hospital.

MEN HIGHER UP AIM OF BREWSTER IN DRY VIOLATIONS

Kansas City Prosecutor to Present Evidence to Grand Jury That May Bring Indictments.

GOVERNOR'S BROTHER INTERESTED IN CASE

One of De Hart's Men Says He Was Beaten by Deputy Marshal and Agents for "Snitching on Ring."

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, April 26.—Evidence that may result in the indictment of four Federal prohibition agents, and may involve higher officials in the Government service, will be presented to the Federal Grand Jury here next week by R. R. Brewster, who has been appointed special prosecutor by the Government in charges that brewers, moonshiners and bootleggers have been operating openly in Kansas City and western Missouri, under protection of men higher up.

This evidence has been gathered over a period of three months by special agents of the Department of Justice, and the Intelligence Unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, and will be placed in the hands of Brewster next week. The Government agents have been assisted by L. F. DeHart, director of prohibition enforcement in Missouri, four of whose men are definitely involved in the charges.

The only evidence thus far is the sale of 83 gallons of alcohol, confiscated in a raid, by four agents, one of whom has confessed that the alcohol was not destroyed, is reported, but was given to a bootlegger to be sold. At the home of one of these agents, there was found 27 gallons of moonshine whisky, which he said he found in a school house yard, and was keeping until someone claimed it so that he could arrest the claimant.

Dry Agent is Beaten.

Another interesting bit of evidence will be how three of these agents, and a United States deputy marshal, took the fourth agent to the basement of a whisky drug store and, after binding him to a chair, beat him into unconsciousness for "snitching on the ring."

One Government official, who asked that his name be withheld, said the grand jury investigation here would make the St. Louis investigation, where Charles B. Prather and R. B. Griesedieck recently were indicted, look tame.

Gov. Hyde is co-operating with the Government officials in the Kansas City inquiry. A man close to the governor said he is not only taking this opportunity to assist in getting at the grafters in prohibition enforcement, but to pay off a little political score, dating back into the Harding administration.

The original Harding men in Kansas City, among them United States District-Attorney Madison, were politically opposed to everything undertaken by Gov. Hyde while President Harding lived. In other words, the original supporters of Harding for President belonged to a different faction than Hyde's. "And," said the Post-Dispatch informant, "they were like some men, who, when they want to get at a man, they kick his dog around."

Governor's Brother in Case.

The Governor's dog in this case is his brother, Edward C. Hyde, of Kansas City, who had a practice in the Federal Court here that netted him an average income of $2000 a month. He has lost this practice, and he believes it was due to certain local Federal Court officials discouraging clients who employed him in whisky cases.

In the evidence gathered by the special agents will be cases that were started in the Federal Court here, and, after a change of attorneys, dropped, with the record showing no disposition. Charges that a local lawyer, with an unsavory reputation at the bar, also aided and abetted the bootleggers and others to defeat the ends of justice in the Federal Court, will also be a part of the Government's case.

Harry Rosenfeldt, who was employed under DeHart, is the agent who was assaulted in the drug store basement. In a report to his superiors, Rosenfeld said one of the other agents at first offered him $100 and two gallons of alcohol if he would tell that they had turned it over to a bootlegger to be sold.

When he rejected the proposal, he said, three agents and the Deputy Marshal, all of whom he named, seized him in a furniture store, whisked him off to a drug store on Twelfth street and whipped him. They then sent for a policeman and charged him with having stolen the automobile he had been driving. He was arrested, but established the fact that he owned the car.

Bootlegger Accuses Agents.

On information furnished by Rosenfeldt and others, the alcohol was recovered from the bootlegger, who was arrested. He is said to have confessed his part in the deal and to have involved the accused agents. The Federal agents say their evidence is so voluminous that it may require more than a week to present it to the grand jury. They scrupulously avoid discussing what they have, and who it may affect.

"We cannot afford to allow our information to leak," said one of the investigators. "That would give the enemy an opportunity to prepare his alibi. We have an amazing story to unfold before the grand jury, and it involves some prominent men."

All that Brewster would say was "we are not concerned so much with the little fellow in this investigation. We are going after the big fellows, higher up. Those who make the operations of the little fellow possible."

Brewster's appointment as special prosecutor is said to have been suggested to the Government by Gov. Hyde.

Hollywood Looks For Their Marriage Soon

MISS THELMA MORGAN

CHARLES CHAPLIN

CHARLIE CHAPLIN MAY WED THELMA MORGAN

Engagement to Twin Sister of Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt Rumored.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 26.—Charlie Chaplin may wed Thelma morgan, twin sister of Mrs. "Reggie" Vanderbilt, and former New York society belle, now movie luminary and Hollywood's latest recruit for film glory.

It is one of those affairs about which he won't talk and she won't talk, but they go to parties together, dine together, dance together—all that sort of thing—and Thelma is wearing a diamond on the third finger of her left hand since she met Charlie.

It will be a wedding, says Hollywood unanimously. Miss Morgan, who is only 20 years old, was divorced from her first husband, James Vail Converse, several months ago.

Nations Fails to Find Prohibition Heads in Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Gus O. Nations, head of the field force of Federal prohibition agents in Missouri, who came to Washington this morning to give his version of the alleged beer "protection" case in St. Louis, was aided by the enforcement offices here in his attempt to keep his presence a secret.

Nations intended to report to E. C. Yellowly, chief prohibition agent, this morning, and again this afternoon, but Yellowly was not at his office. Neither was Commissioner Roy A. Haynes, chief of the prohibition unit. H. T. Davis, chief clerk in Yellowly's office, when asked this afternoon if Nations had reported, said that Nations had just departed for the Capitol. To all other questions he answered, "I don't know." The intricate red tape at the prohibition offices, which necessitates the giving of reasons for interviews, would enable Davis to tell Nations, if he were in the building, what was sought of him.

At the Capitol it was learned that Nations had called at Senator Seldon P. Spencer's office in the morning, only to hear that the Senator, who was largely responsible for his appointment, was in New York. A telephone call to the prohibition office revealed that Nations was there. When he finally was reached by telephone he said,

"I have made it a rule for the last year to make no statements whatever to the Post-Dispatch."

When asked what his plans were, he said that he intended to leave Washington tonight. Asked if he would return to Washington Monday when Commissioner Haynes is due to return, he said that he would return whenever ordered. He said that he did not know whether he would return to St. Louis tonight. In reply to the question had he seen Yellowly, Nations first replied, "No," which was quickly followed by, "You are trying to make me talk against my rule. I have nothing more to say."

John C. Dyott, special assistant to the United States attorney general, who has been handling the alleged beer "protection" case, is still in Washington conferring with Department of Justice officials. He said today that he could make no statement at this time as to what has developed from these conferences.

ILLINOIS JURY FREES MOTLOW FOR ST. LOUIS AUTHORITIES

Millionaire Distiller Who Shot Pullman Conductor to Face Prosecution Here.

St. Louis authorities are to be unhampered by the State of Illinois in prosecution of Lem Motlow, millionaire Tennessee distiller, who fatally shot a Pullman conductor on an outbound train after a whisky spree in St. Louis, March 17. The St. Clair County Grand Jury yesterday voted no true bill in his case, thus terminating criminal prosecution in Illinois.

Motlow, it will be recalled, shot the conductor, Clarence T. Pullis, of Kirkwood, on an L. & N. train moving through the Eads Bridge tunnel in St. Louis. Motlow was arrested when the train reached East St. Louis and Pullis died there. Motlow was held for the St. Clair County Grand Jury under $25,000 bond, which he furnished. State's Attorney Lindauer had announced he would ask no true bill in the case, so St. Louis authorities might prosecute.

Circuit Judge Hamilton admitted Motlow to $40,000 bail here April 4, over protests of Circuit Attorney Sidener. The latter contended that Motlow was being held under a first-degree murder charge and could not be admitted to bail. The Judge ruled that the Motlow case bore indications of manslaughter. Eight members of the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange furnished bond for Motlow and he was released the same day he surrendered, without being locked up here. He was held in St. Clair County from the time of the shooting until after the Inquest, the next day, when he was released on bond.

Which Line for You?

Old-fashioned sharp corners have always meant labor. They are the hardest places in the house to clean. The modern curved corner used in the Kitchen Maid stands for cleanliness—easy cleaning—a corner which you can wipe as quickly as a cloth slides around the inside of a cup.

The modern corner construction of the Kitchen Maid shows how carefully and completely the whole cabinet has been planned to make it superior.

78 dirt-catching corners are eliminated by the rounded inside corner and no-panel doors of the Kitchen Maid. "as smooth as a table top."

Who wants to dig out an old-fashioned corner when the Kitchen Maid has all inside corners rounded, like the inside of a bowl?

YOU will find more things about a Kitchen Maid which delight you than you could ever believe possible until this cabinet is really in your home.

First comes its cleanliness—but this is only the starting point. There is a drawer space and shelf space for almost two hundred different ingredients and utensils—yet nothing seems crowded. The drawers and work top slide out together, giving you a working space larger than an ordinary kitchen table. And, in keeping with the increasing desire for beauty in the kitchen, these cabinets are finished with an attractive and enduring finish, either white or golden oak.

HUNT FOR PAYROLL ROBBERS YIELDS BURGLARY CLEWS

Sheriff Identifies Prisoners as Men He Stopped in Town as Suspicious Characters.

The police roundup after the $82,000 payroll robbery in Granite City Friday morning in which robbers took two mail bags containing the cash from a bank employe under fire from two amateur guards, has so far failed to gather likely suspects, but it may have solved another robbery case.

Friday detectives arrested three men who were riding in a Hudson touring car in North St. Louis. A while later police of Madison, Ill., arrested two men in an automobile there. All five were held at police headquarters here.

Robbery at Flat River.

It happened that Sheriff W. E. Washer at Flat River, Mo., was looking for five suspicious characters who drove through that town early Friday in a Hudson touring car. He had stopped the men at that time, but they had explained they were o ntheir way to Cape Girardeau and in the absence of any overt act, the Sheriff let them go. He did not discover until daylight Friday that the safe in the office of the St. Francois Motor Co., at Flat River had been cracked. Negotiable bonds amounting to $4000 and $250 in cash had been taken. The burglars had left behind an automobile jack handle.

Sheriff Washer was certain then that the five men in the Hudson he had stopped and questioned had pulled this "job." He was glad he had taken note of the license number of their car. It was Illinois 454453.

Upon notification that St. Louis police were holding five suspects, three of whom had been arrested in a Hudson touring car, the Sheriff started for St. Louis. He arrived yesterday afternoon and the suspects were led before him.

Identifies Prisoners.

"Those four were in the Hudson Thursday night!" exclaimed the Sheriff.

He pointed out Randel (Slick) Norvell, 21 years old; Paul Ferena, 32 years old, an Egan gangster; Frank Douglas, 31 years old—the three arrested in the Hudson—and William Hrebrec, 25 years old, one of the two men taken in by Madison police.

To follow up the case the Sheriff compared the license number

HUNT FOR PAYROLL ROBBERS YIELDS BURGLARY CLEWS

Sheriff Identifies Prisoners as Men He Stopped in Town as Suspicious Characters.

The police roundup after the $62,000 payroll robbery in Granite City Friday morning in which robbers took two mail bags containing the cash from a bank employe under fire from two amateur guards, has so far failed to gather flimsy suspects, but it may have solved another robbery case.

Friday detectives arrested three men who were riding in a Hudson touring car in North St. Louis. A while later police of Madison, Ill., arrested two men in an automobile there. All five were held at police headquarters here.

Robbery at Flat River.

It happened that Sheriff W. E. Washer at Flat River, Mo., was looking for five suspicious characters who drove through that town early Friday in a Hudson touring car. He had stopped the men at that time, but they had explained they were o ntheir way to Cape Girardeau and in the absence of any overt act, the Sheriff let them go. He did not discover until daylight Friday that the safe in the office of the St. Francois Motor Co. at Flat River had been wrecked. Negotiable bonds amounting to $4000 and $250 in cash had been taken. The burglars had left behind an automobile jack handle.

Sheriff Washer was certain then that the five men in the Hudson he had stopped and questioned had pulled this "job." He was glad he had taken note of the license number of their car. It was Illinois 654453.

Upon notification that St. Louis police were holding five suspects, three of whom had been arrested in a Hudson touring car, the Sheriff started for St. Louis. He arrived yesterday afternoon and the suspects were led before him.

To follow up the case the Sheriff compared the license number in his notebook with the license on the Hudson touring car. They were the same.

"Now let's see if a jack handle is missing," he remarked. Detectives went through the car's tool kit and found a jack but no handle. The Sheriff produced the handle picked up by the "jimmied" safe and it fitted the jack.

Warrants charging the four with burglary were issued at Flat River last night on the Sheriff's identification.

All the prisoners deny they ever were in Flat River.

200 STUDENTS ARE DROWNED

Ship Carrying Koreans to Visit Japanese Destroyers Wrecked.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, April 26.—Two hundred Korean students were drowned off the west coast of Korea, near Chinnampo, when a steamship taking them for a visit to Japanese destroyers anchored off shore collided with one of the destroyers and capsized, according to dispatches today from Seoul.

The steamer sank quickly and, owing to the rough seas, only a small number of the students could be rescued.

GRADE TEACHERS WANT FLAT SALARY INCREASE

Claim Present Salaries Inadequate to Increasing High Cost of Living.

The St. Louis Grade Teachers' Association, which has a membership of about 1450 kndergarten and grade teachers in the public schools, at a meeting Friday at Central High School, petitioned the Board of Education for a salary increase.

The association, speaking for all those teachers beneath the grade of high school instructors, asked for "a flat increase," the increase to be the same for all, as opposed to a percentage increase. Speakers at the meeting, which was described as "enthusiastic," avoided mentioning any specific increase, as reflecting their wishes, on the ground that it was a matter for the decision of the board. It is known, however, that many of the teachers are hopeful of an increase of about $300 annually.

The resolution, adopted unanimously, was as follows:

"Whereas, the teachers in the grades and kindergartens of the public schools of the city of St. Louis, have neither asked for nor received an increase in salary in the last four years, in spite of the fact that the present salary is inadequate to the constantly increasing high cost of living, and that it is generally conceded that the salaries of the St. Louis grade teachers do not compare favorably with the salaries of teachers of other large and many smaller cities; and,

"Whereas the Superintendent of Instruction and the Board of Education have heretofore shown a kindly interest in the Grade Teachers' Association, and a willingness to consider with fairness all problems presented by this association,

"Therefore be it resolved, That the Grade Teachers' Association, in meeting assembled April 25th, 1924, do petition the Superintendent of instruction and the Board of Education for an increase in salary, and further petition that the system adopted be one of a flat increase, thereby giving equal benefit to all ranks.

"Respectfully submitted,
"ST. LOUIS GRADE TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION,
"By Clara Belle Ortmann, President.
"By Agnes L. Staed, Secretary."

High School Teachers Discuss Interests of Education.

An "undemocratic attitude" on the part of the Superintendent of Instruction and the Board of Education is charged by the St. Louis High School Teachers' Association, in a statement issued yesterday as to the high school teachers' demand for increased pay. The statement continues:

"The interests of the high schools alone, to say nothing of the question of the teachers' personal welfare, demand that the teachers be paid adequately. The adverse effects of under pay is reflected first in the personality of the teaching staff, and in turn in the efficiency of the schools. It cannot be expected that many men and women of outstanding ability will wilfully enter upon a profession which offers such meager promise of economic reward for so important service rendered society. Moreover, it is certain that the few who do will seek the most fertile fields, which, under the present conditions, does not include the St. Louis system.

"The question that is up for decision at the present time involves two fundamental policies of administration. The one is, shall the public schools of St. Louis be kept abreast of those of other progressive cities, or shall retrogression be allowed to set in because of unwise economy of funds? The other is, shall the high school teachers be granted the consideration which is ordinarily accorded men and women, or shall their appeals be lightly passed over as childish prattle?"

Cooling—Soothing—Healing

Use Kora Konia for all skin troubles

SO many things rub or irritate or inflame the skin! It may be corsets, collars, shoes, bandages, or tight clothing. Or surgical belts and braces. Perhaps internal disorders have affected the skin.

Muscles chafe each other where limbs join the body. Then the poisonous acids in perspiration burn the raw spots. Poison ivy, insect bites and sunburn are other irritants.

The search for a remedy

Doctors asked the Mennen Laboratories to compound a skin remedy that would quickly soothe and heal all types of skin injuries due to external causes and relieve skin eruptions caused by internal ailments.

It has taken seven years to perfect the final formula. The wonderful prescription is now offered under the name of Kora Konia.

Many medicaments

One therapeutic ingredient is put in Kora Konia for its cooling effect; another to absorb moisture and discharges. One constituent overcomes acidity; one is an astringent; one protects from chafing; one is an antidote to certain skin poisons and one is a deodorant.

Another substance in Kora Konia protects the skin while the healing antiseptic elements are acting to restore the skin's health and smoothness.

It had to be a powder

Kora Konia is in powder form because many types of skin ailments need to have moisture and discharges absorbed. Then, too, a clean powder does not stain clothes or bedding and is not sticky and smelly as salves are.

To make a powder that would cling and not rub or dust off easily, presented a great problem. Finally the Mennen chemists evolved a new product which makes Kora Konia adhere to sore skin in spite of rubbing or moisture.

Kora Konia is a soft, white, absorbent powder, but it contains no Stearate of Zinc and it is not a talcum.

One application keeps your skin comfortable for hours—for a day's shopping, an afternoon of sport or a long automobile ride.

FATHER
Kora Konia keeps his skin free from itching and smarting. It relieves boils, sore feet, collar-chafing, and all skin ailments

READ THESE LETTERS

"I wish you could have seen my baby's skin—all raw, sore and ugly. Three days after using Kora Konia the skin was healed and comfortable."
—Mrs. R. A. S., E. Orange, N. J.

"My skin is so tender that almost everything makes it red and painful. But now I use Kora Konia and never suffer a minute."
—Mrs. M. T., Buffalo, N. Y.

Keep it always ready

Keep Kora Konia in the bathroom, the club locker, your traveling bag—surely take it on your vacation for insect bites and sunburn.

The costly ingredients in Kora Konia—the wonderful relief it gives—would justify a high price. But we prefer to put it within the means of millions. Kora Konia costs only 35c at drug and department stores. The Mennen Company, Newark, N. J.

ARREST IN DIVORCE CASE

John Delucer Accused by Wife of Making False Affidavit.

A warrant charging him with making a false affidavit in that he alleged in a divorce action that he had lived in St. Louis for one year before the filing of the suit, was issued yesterday against John Delucer, 39 years old of 2615 Sublette avenue.

He was arrested Thursday at the request of his wife, Mrs. Catherine Delucer, of Boston, who said that she followed him from Boston and found him at the Sublette avenue address with another woman and his son, Jack, 7 years old. GAMBLING BY PERMIT IN ITALY

Government to Sanction Resorts in Small Towns.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 26.—The Italian Government, according to the Daily Mail's Rome correspondent, has decided to allow gambling in a limited number of small towns which have been recognized as resorts for the last 10 years, provided they are not in proximity to cities of more than 20,000 population.

The gambling places will be under severe restrictions, nobody being allowed to frequent them without a permit. This is a complete departure from previous legislation, the correspondent remarks.

HYDE MAY DRAFT NEW CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNORSHIP

Prospects of Support of Machine and Federal Job-Holders Interests Republican Officials.

MERRILL E. OTIS IS URGED TO ENTER RACE

Viewed With Considerable Favor as a Harmony Aspirant; Hackmann's Course Undecided.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 26.—Prospects of a new candidate being drafted to receive the support of the Hyde administration machine and Federal job holders in Missouri, for the Republican nomination for the governorship are regarded with increasing interest by Republican State officials who are leaving Jefferson City on their pilgrimage to the Republican State convention at Springfield Tuesday.

Appointees of the Governor are noncommital on gubernatorial alignments and by no means are sure that the field of Republican aspirants will be limited to three who have already filed—Lieutenant-Governor Hiram Lloyd, former State Superintendent of Schools Sam A. Baker, and Victor J. Miller, former president of the St. Louis Board of Police Commissioners.

It is known that strong overtures have been made in recent weeks to Merrill E. Otis, chairman of the State Public Service Commission, and that many Republicans have written to Otis from various sections of the State urging him to seek the nomination.

From Sources Close to Hyde.

It is understood some of the suggestions that Otis get into the race have emanated from sources close to Gov. Hyde. Otis has been viewed with considerable favor as a harmony candidate, it is said, since the banquet given in St. Louis last February by the Young Republican Association of Missouri, at which Otis made a Republican harmony speech that carried off a large part of the honors of the evening.

Otis, however has declared he has no desire to enter the race and prefers to remain where he is. Membership in the Public Service Commission carries an annual salary of $5500, and Otis' term does not expire until April, 1927. He did not close the door entirely but stated his view at present was one of not seeking the nomination.

Plans of State Auditor Hackmann on entry into the gubernatorial race, if any, are veiled with secrecy. His friends, who declared several weeks ago that Hackmann would fet in the race, now say they do not know what he will do. Hackmann declines to comment on his plans and will neither admit nor deny that he is an aspirant.

Hackmann and Congress.

Administration appointees, who realize the chance open to a fourth candidate, with the primary vote split among that large a field, seem to view favorably a rumor that Hackmann will seek the Republican nomination for Congressman from the Ninth District, in which his home is located. Such a candidacy would eliminate him from the field of gubernatorial possibilities. In fact, they predict Hackmann probably would carry the Ninth District, whereas his chances for the governorship might be less certain. The Democratic incumbent in the Ninth Congressional District, Clarence Cannon carried the district in 1922 by a majority of 7005 votes, said to be the largest majority ever given a candidate in that district.

Attorney-General Barrett, who has been suggested as a harmony candidate, repeatedly has declared he plans to forsake public office at the end of his term and return to St. Louis to practice law.

Gov. Hyde, who was out of the State the latter part of this week, making speeches in Cleveland and Louisville, will return to Missouri tomorrow and will reach Springfield tomorrow night. Lieutenant-Governor Lloyd, now here as acting Governor, will go to Springfield tomorrow.

Exodus of other Republican officials from Jefferson City for the convention will continue today and tomorrow, leaving the Capitol offices bare save for minor officials, clerks and the handful of Democrats who hold places on bi-partisan boards.

HOUSE PASSES NEW CHILD LABOR RESOLUTION

Efforts to Modify Proposal for Amendment Which Now Goes to Senate Defeated by 297 to 69.

CHILDREN'S AGE IS LIMITED TO 18

Garrett Loses Fight to Require Legislatures Rather Than Conventions to Ratify Issue.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—A resolution proposing a child labor amendment to the Constitution was passed late today by the House. Every effort to modify the measure, which now goes to the Senate, failed. It would enpower Congress to limit, regulate or prohibit the labor of children under 18 years of age. The vote was 297 to 69, or 53 more than the two-thirds required for passage.

Thirteen Republicans and 56 Democrats voted against the resolution. The Republicans were:

Andrew, Bixler, Brand of Ohio; Connelly of Pennsylvania; Darrow, Free, Graham of Pennsylvania; Hill of Maryland; Merritt, Moores of Indiana; Tinkham, Underhall, Watson.

The Democrats were Abernathy, Allgood, Aswell, Bankhead, Bland, Blanton, Bowling, Brand of Georgia; Browning, Bulwinkle, Busby, Connally of Texas; Crisp, Deal, Dominick, Doughton, Drewry, Driver, Fulmer, Garner, Garrett of Tennessee; Goldsborough, Hawes, Hill of Alabama; Hooker, Hudspeth, Jeffers, Kerr, Lanham, Larsen of Georgia; Linthicum, Lowry, McAfee, McSwain, McField, McMartin, Montague, Moore of Georgia; Moore of Virginia; Oliver of Alabama; Park of Georgia; Perry, Pou, Raybur, Sandlin, Smithwick, Steagall, Sumners of Texas; Tucker, Tidings, Vinson of Georgia; Williams of Texas; Wilson of Louisiana; Wingo, Wright.

Affirmative Vote.

Voting in the affirmative were 167 Republicans, 127 Democrats, 1 Socialist and 1 Independent. Paired against the resolution were Representatives Fairchild, McLeod, Snyder, Vare and Walsh, Republicans and Bell, Buchanan, Humphreys, Lee of Georgia; Stephenson and Ward, North Carolina, Democrats.

Representative Longworth of Ohio, the Republican leader aided Representative Foster, Republican, Ohio, author of the resolution in conducting the fight for the measure.

The opposition was directed by Representative Graham of the judiciary committee, Representative Garrett of Tennessee, the Democratic leader and Representatives Sumner of Texas, and Montague, of Virginia, Democrats.

Opposition was based chiefly on the ground that the proposed amendment, made necessary if Congress is to have authority to deal with the problem, by the action of the Supreme Court in twice declaring Federal child labor laws unconstitutional, would constitute an invasion of state rights.

On the other hand, proponents, of the resolution contended that a Federal standard must be set up to bring certain states which have been backward in the enactment of child labor legislation, to a more rigid requirement. The resolution would enable Congress to set a minimum standard beyond which states would be free to go in controlling the problem.

Amendment Defeated.

An amendment to make the resolution apply to children under 16 instead of 18 years of age, as originally provided for, was proposed by Representative McLafferty, (Rep.,) California, and was adopted by a teller's vote of 148 to 136. Later, however, a roll call was demanded, and the amendment eliminated by a vote of 199 to 169.

Determined efforts were made to exempt from the provisions of the resolution children employes on farms. A series of amendments to this end were rejected in rapid order votes of more than two to one.

Representative Garrett lost a fight to require State conventions, rather than Legislatures, to ratify the proposed amendment, while Representative Linthmicum, Democrat, Maryland, sought unsuccessfully to require ratification within seven years.

A last minute attempt was made by Representative Montague to exempt farm and home labor, and to require ratification within seven years by State conventions, but the amendment was lost on a viva voce vote.

As the House approached a final vote the session grew turbulent, and before debate closed Foster charged that Chairman Graham had attempted to block the amendment from being reported by the Judiciary Committee. The latter declared the charge was "utterly untrue." The amendment, he said, was treated "without any obstructive acts on my part."

Longworth declared that what Graham had said was absolutely true" and that he knew Graham had "expedited the matter in all possible ways."

Sues for $25,000 Damages.

Austin Flint O'Kelly, who lives at the Laclede Hotel, yesterday filed suit for $25,000 damages for an alleged unprovoked assault on him by Constantine Papageorge, proprietor of a poolroom at 508½ Market street. The petition states that the defendant used a soda water bottle, fracturing O'Kelly's skull and then stabbed him in the left leg with an ice pick. The assault is alleged to have taken place April 15 as plaintiff was leaving the poolroom. O'Kelly states he was in the mail order business and as a result of his injuries has been forced to abandon it.

More Than $1,000,000

invested by St. Louisans in Cahokia 6% in 60 Days

What does this outpouring of money by the city's savers mean? Undoubtedly, it means solid confidence in Union Electric Light and Power Co. because approximately half of the purchasers of shares in Cahokia are savers who have bought and now hold other shares of Union Electric. From experience they know that all Union Electric shares have unfailing, liberal return and ready negotiability at par for cash—which means that they can get their money if they should need it. Some have bought as many as 10 times. They bring their savings to Union Electric as fast as they accumulate.

Undoubtedly, it means, also, that St. Louis savers rapidly are recognizing the extraordinary qualities of Cahokia 6%. They have learned that there will be dividends for Cahokia Preferred as long as Union Electric can pay its rental for use of Cahokia. Union Electric can pay the rental as long as it makes operating expenses. The state has a self-assumed obligation always to allow rates that will at least produce proper operating expenses. So savers reason quite properly that Cahokia has maximum certainty of producing dividends for them.

They know, further, that Cahokia is an industry necessary to the welfare of a public that is increasing by leaps and bounds its demand for the thing that Cahokia produces.

They know that there is not and can never be any "water" in Cahokia because the state alone can authorize issuance of shares and the state makes sure that each dollar of shares is backed by a dollar in income-producing property.

They recognize in Cahokia management the management that has given to St. Louis the lowest average electric rates among the 15 large cities of the country. They are now endorsing the assertion of that management that it believes that there is no safer place for savings than Cahokia 6% and that no other so safe an investment offers so large a return.

GRIDIRON CLUB NOMINATES "MAN IN THE IRON MASK" TO OPPOSE COOLIDGE

Washington's Organization of Newspaper Correspondents Holds Political Convention Set to Music—President Attends.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—A national political convention, set to music, was convened by the Gridiron Club at its spring dinner at the New Willard Hotel tonight. Before it had adjourned that hodge-podge of song and satire had reduced the forthcoming assemblages at Cleveland and New York to the category of nonessentials.

The Republican nomination was accorded to Calvin Coolidge. The perplexities of the Madison Square Garden convention were dissolved. The Democratic standard-bearer was introduced to the club's guests. He proved to be the most famous "dark-horse" in history—"The Man in the Iron Mask."

In accordance with the best practices of present-day Washington, the famous dinner club, composed of Washington newspaper correspondents, delved into the pages of history to produce an Inquisitor-General. He conducted the principal skit of the evening for the enlightenment of the guests, who included the President, members of the Cabinet, Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, Senators, Representatives, party managers and other national figures of politics and business.

Portrait Time Can't Soil.

Scarcely had the distinguished guests been seated when lights were extinguished. A picture of "Uncle Sam" was flashed on the screen. The Gridiron Singers gave the keynote of the dinner. To the tune of "Sixty Seconds Ev'ry Minute," they sang:

"We do not intend to show a picture done in oil;
We've turned that one to the wall;
We'll display, instead, a good old portrait time can't spoil,
One that smiles upon us all.
Smiling still through all this stricture
Is your Uncle Sammy's picture—
It's a portrait scandal cannot soil."

A rattling chorus brought out, among other things, the snappy lines:

"Uncle's never in a jam—don't get the blues, don't give a damn;
The country's safe—three cheers for Uncle Sam."

A moment later, two club members became involved in a noisy argument over the first course of the dinner.

"Our guests didn't come to a Gridiron dinner to eat pork and beans," shouted one in anger. "They can eat beans at home—and probably do."

"The pork and beans course was intended as a delicate touch for the occasion," responded another. "We have a Boston man to inaugurate as president of the Gridiron Club and a man late of Boston is President of the United States."

It developed that the chairman of the inauguration committee also was a Boston correspondent and that Robert L. Norton of the Boston Post was to be initiated as a new member of the club.

"I protest," insisted a third member, "there's too much Boston."

"Better that than too much Johnson," argued one.

Brigham New Club President.

William E. Brigham, Washington correspondent of the Boston Evening Transcript, was installed as president of the club. He bantered with his hecklers over "too much Boston," but amid the applause of the guests and the "so, say we all" of the club members, who have passed through the scandal era in the national capital, Brigham recited in his "articles of belief":

"I believe in respect for and obedience to all law; in Government under the Constitution and in the fine traditions and institutions of this, our, country; I believe the Government of the United States is sound; I believe in the probity and integrity of its public servants; and, finally, I believe that now, as in the past and as it always will be—that where stands the President of the United States there honor comes and stands beside him."

The club had little difficulty in picking the Republican nominee. The problem of the Democratic convention was much more perplexing. From his place in history, the Inquisitor-General was called to issue subpenas for a number of distinguished personages. He brought with him his Executioner. The first witnesses called were "The Three Musketeers."

Expert Political Swordsmen.

They proved to be Al Smith of New York, Thomas Taggart of Indiana, and George E. Brennan of Chicago. The trio identified themselves as "expert political swordsmen," having headquarters at French Lick Springs, Ind. Asked what they intended to do in the forthcoming campaign, they announced in chorus, "McAdoo." They admitted, under cross-examination, they had a candidate.

"Who is he?" demanded the Inquisitor-General.

"We decline to name him," they replied.

"Why?"

"We do not intend to incriminate ourselves," said the Tammany leader.

"Besides, we want him to be nominated," declared Brennan.

Taggart contended "nobody can compel us" to name the candidate. The Inquisitor-General, speaking wrathfully, advised the "Three Musketeers" that if they refused to answer he would send for a "questioner more ruthless than the Inquisition, a professional Senate investigator." The Musketeers fled, shouting "Good-night."

A cowboy, who proved to be William G. McAdoo, rushed in, to inquire, breathlessly, whether the "Three Musketeers" had departed. He established himself as an historical figure by asserting he was "William the Conqueror," appearing as a voluntary witness and announcing he would be nominated on the first ballot, "even if I have to claim residence in every state in the Union."

"James the Just" turned out to be James M. Cox, of Ohio, who professed his right to the title on the ground that his fortunes "just" depended on the "Three Musketeers." William the Silent" was identified as William M. Butler, the Coolidge campaign manager, who spoke not a word, but offered a deposition in the form of a weather forecast for Cleveland in June: "Coolidge—fair and calm." "Frank, the First," was Frank H. Hitchcock. Hiram Johnson's manager, who was unable to produce his candidate because the latter "missed his train."

Question "Man in Iron Mask."

Convinced that the "Democratic ticket to date reads like a John Doe warrant," the Inquisitor-General decided to subpena "the most famous John Doe in history—The Man in the Iron Mask."

"Who are you?" demanded the Inquisitor-General.

"The Man in the Iron Mask" replied:

"Some men think I am Samuel M. Ralston and serenade me with 'The Moonlight's Fair Tonight Along the Wabash'; I have been addressed as John W. Davis, and asked to trade fat retainers for a nomination. Some call me McAdoo and ask whether I am from New York or California. I have been toasted as James M. Cox and assured that seven million aren't so many after all. I have been feted as Oscar W. Underwood, while the band played 'Dixie,' as some others said 'Hello, Al,' and sang 'The Sidewalks of New York.' Some believe my name is Houston and dub me the leading residuary legatee. I am identified also as Copeland, the medicine man of the Tammany tribe. Colonel Harvey thinks I am Senator Joe Robinson, of Arkansas. They called me Reed before Jim tried to show 'em in Missouri. Some even think I'm a college president—I've forgotten his name. I have only one consolation. Nobody has suggested that I am Bryan."

The inquisition was dissolved when Banquo's ghost entered as the third party movement, with a prophecy of a deadlock over the presidency in the Electoral College, the House of Representatives and the Senate, resulting in Secretary of State Hughes becoming "acting President till God knows when."

President Coolidge, Sir Esme Howard, the new Ambassador of Great Britain to the United States, and John W. Davis were the speakers at the dinner. Under the Gridiron rule that "reporters are never present," their remarks were not published. When Representative Clifton A. Woodrum of Virginia, known to his colleagues as "the troubadour Congressman," because he "sang his way into Congress," was called on to speak, he burst into a song full of significance to seekers after public office.

The satire of the dinner ran the gamut of the "Bobbed-Hair Bandit" to "Hamlet in 1924," touching the "Colored Delegate" to the Republican convention, soviet recognition, the "murder" of the World Court, Hiram Johnson, Secretary Mellon, the recent Cabinet changes and "Miss Democracy on Broadway."

Third Party Idea Dramatized.

The Gridiron players dramatized the Third Party idea in the form of a 1924 version of Hamlet. Assisting the "Melancholy Dane" of present-day politics were two grave-diggers — the Nonpartisan Leaguer and the Farmer-Labor partyite—who were preparing graves for the coffins of the "Grand Old Party" and "Miss Democracy," visible in the shadows of the stage. After one grave-digger had abjured the other to "get thee gone to the bootlegger and fetch me a stoup of liker, but be careful or you may be shot for a Senator," he turned up a skull.

It was not that of Yorick, however. Hamlet learned on inquiry, but, as told by the grave-digger:

"A pestilence on him for a mad rogue. He rambled through the tall timbers like mad bulls in spring. There was thunder in the feet of him. Ask Taft, he knows. This same skull, sir, was Bull Moose's skull. Yes, sir; Old Bull himself."

"This," exclaimed the shocked Hamlet of 1924.

"E'en that."

Hamlet, taking the skull, said:

"Alas, poor old Bull Moose; I knew him well. A fellow of infinite roaring. He might have borne me on his back, but Roosevelt beat me to him. Here hung those very lips I tried to kiss. I know not how oft. Where be your songs now? Your 'Onward, Christian Soldiers' that made the well-known welkin ring in the days of Roosevelt and Armageddon? Where are your bands and banners that were wont to set the country in a roar? Not one now to mock your own grinning."

Turning to the grave-digger, Hamlet inquired:

"Dost think another Third party might come to look so and to smell so?"

To Bolt or Not to Bolt.

"E'en so," the grave digger replied casually.

Hamlet: "To what base uses shall we come at last. May not the imagination trace the noble dust of all my blocs and all my handfed Farmer-Laborites, till it finds them stopping up the gaps in Democratic party hopes?"

The grave digger: "It has happened so."

Early in the evening the "bobbed-haired bandit" caused a great furore. The club president called for a policeman. Brigadier-General Smedley D. Butler, director of Public Safety in Philadelphia, was summoned from his seat, but before he could make an arrest announcement was made that the "bobbed-haired bandit" had departed with an apology:

"She has been pursuing Frank A. Vanderlip for some time, to get him to give her a job, and she thought she saw him coming in here."

"Too Much New England" Plank.

When "Miss Democracy" appeared on Broadway she encountered an obliging Tammany policeman ready to guide her about New York. She dropped her satchel and began applauding "Dixie" as the "Democratic national anthem," only to be reminded by the Broadway "copper" that Al Smith's favorite tune, "The Sidewalks of New York," was to be the "Democratic national anthem."

"Miss Democracy's" concern over some of her "dry" delegates from Kansas drew from the policeman the fact they were assembled in the "Boiled Owl Cafe." From her satchel Miss Democracy drew a number of platform ideas, but it developed she had two on the prohibition question. She was unwilling to explain that contradiction aloud, but she whispered it to the Tammany policeman, "if he promised not to tell." She had also a "we-view-it-with-alarm" plank and a "too much New England" plank.

MOURNERS FILE PAST MURPHY BIER IN STEADY STREAM

Funeral Procession to Start From Home at 10 A. M. Tomorrow—Many Notables Among Honorary Pallbearers.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—A steady stream of mourners, including political associates and women and children he had befriended and aided, today filed past the bier of Charles F. Murphy, Tammany chieftain, who died yesterday, in the parlor of the Murpy home on East Seventeenth street.

Mrs. Murphy, suffering from nervous collapse, lay abed on the second floor of the house, attended by two nurses. Dr. Herrity, family physician, who attended the dying chieftain, said, however, her condition was not serious.

Secretary Daniel F. Ryan of Tammany Hall announced that the funeral procession would leave the Murphy home at 10 a. m. Monday and proceed up Fifth avenue to St. Patrick's Cathedral. The procession will proceed to Calvary Cemetery. There will be no parade. Mounted police will escort the cortege, however, and 100 policemen will be stationed along the route.

Among the honorary pallbearers selected for Monday's services are: Gov. Alfred E. Smith, Mayor John F. Hylan, United States Senator Royal S. Copeland, Norman E. Mack of Buffalo for the National Democratic Committee, Bernard F. Baruch, George E. Brennan, political leader of Illinois; J. Sergent Cram; former Sheriff Thomas F. By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., April 26.—The world's fastest man," Charlie Paddock of Pasadena, Cal., shattered a world's record of 35 years standing and made himself holder of his tenth world's mark when he raced the 125-yard dash in 12 seconds flat, in the outstanding attraction of the Drake Universal relay carnival today.

The famous Californian clipped four-tenths of a second off the record established by Charles Sherrill of Yale in 1889. Paddock was credited with having run 125 yards in the same time he made today in 1922; but the mark, after controversy with officials of the National A. A. U., was not allowed. Paddock made a claim for the record which was established in a special trial in California, and in which he was timed for five distances in the same race. Owing to the fact that the timers at the 75 yards caught him only one-fifth of a second slower than those at 120 yards, the 125-yard record was thrown out, while the mark at 120 yards was allowed.

Record Will Be Accepted.

Today's record, track authorities said, undoubtedly would be accepted as the course was officially measured and found accurate and the timers were experts of 20 years or more experience.

The track, drenched after last night's downpour, dried out rapidly under the rays of a hot sun, making it springy and fast. Paddock's effort. Paddock, giving his three contestants a handicap of four yards, beat them to the tape by at least three yards. He ran into the tape in full stride instead of breaking into a short, jerky jump which usually characterizes his finishes. He got away to a perfect start and caught his competitors before the 75-yard mark was reached.

After an hour's rest, Paddock came out the showing he made yesterday when he beat the gun in the 100-yard dash, raced another century, stepping the distance in :9.9. He got away to a fine start in this dash and said he stepped into a slight pocket which retarded him for a fraction of a second.

Other Records Broken.

In addition to the world's record, a national interscholastic mark and four records for the Drake classic were broken. The fast Central Rapids, Ia., relay team clipped three and two-tenths seconds off the interscholastic quarter-mile record, winning the event in :45.6. The former mark was established by the University High School team of Chicago 14 years ago.

The Drake relay records to fall were the pole vault, the two-mile college relay, the shot-put and the broad jump. McKown of Kansas State Teachers' College of Emporia smashed the pole vault record with a leap of 12 feet, breaking the former record of 12 feet, 10 inches, made by Brownell of Illinois in 1922.

Purma of Kansas State Teachers College of Pittsburg, Kan., set a new record for the shot-put with a toss of 42 feet 8¾ inches, beating the record of 42 feet ¾ inch established by Hartman of Nebraska in the trials yesterday.

Resignation of Tilden Accepted By Committee

Action Is Latest Development in Controversy Over Player-Writer Rule.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The resignation of William T. Tilden II, of Philadelphia, as a member of the United States Olympic and Davis cup tennis teams, has been officially accepted by the Davis cup committe of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The action of the committee is an outgrowth of developments in the association's controversy with Tilden over the player-writer resolution following which Tilden tendered his resignation from the two teams.

The contributing causes of the resignation and its consequent effect on the outcome of the international matches from an American standpoint were considered carefully by the committee before unanimously accepting the withdrawal. The committee had previously invited Tilden to sit in the special conference called to consider his resignation, but the national champion declined the invitation.

In officially notifying Tilden of the committee's action, Julian S. Myrick, chairman of the Davis cup committee, said that Tilden's eligibility to play on either team had never been questioned. He added that in deference to Tilden as well as other prominent tennis players who are now writing newspaper articles for remuneration, the enforcement of the player-writer resolution had been held up until January, 1925.

Members Express Regret.

While no official statement was issued by the committee other than to make public its letter to Tilden, regret over Tilden's action in submitting his resignation was expressed by individual members. However, in the face of existing conditions, the individual members said they did not see any other course of action for the committee to take and still retain its prestige.

Several other questions concerning Davis cup plans for the coming season were also considered and passed upon at the meeting. These included the appointment of a committee to consider playing data and to suggest to the Davis cup committee, the personnel of the team which will defend the international team tennis championship trophy at Forest Hills next September.

This sub-committee will consist of Bernon Prentice, chairman; Karl H. Behr, Harold H. Hackett, Holcombe Ward and Gardner Peabody.

Dwight Davis On Committee.

Among those who sat in the committee week, which accepted Tilden's resignation, were: Dwight F. Davis, assistant secretary of war, and a former president of the association; George T. Adee and Henry W. Slocum, also former presidents; George W. Wightman of Boston, present executive of the association; Julian S. Myrick, former president and present chairman of the Davis cup committee, Jones W. Mersereau, vice president of the association; Holcombe Ward, chairman of the amateur rule committee; Louis B. Dailey, treasurer of the association and Edward F. Torrey, Utica, N. Y., former vice president.

The letter informing Tilden of the decision of the committee which sat to act on his resignation said:

"My dear Mr. Tilden.

"Replying to your letter of April 22, the Davis Cup Committee regrets that you were unable to attend its meeting.

"As previously advised, you are eligible to compete for your country. The national association at its last annual meeting settled the matter for 1924—the January, 1925, date of enforcement of the player-writer resolution having been set out of fairness for you and others who had previously made newspaper contracts to be performed during 1924.

"This committee invited you to be a member of this year's Olympic and Davis cup teams but must, of course, leave to your decision as to when, where and for whom you will play. Accordingly, your resignation as a member of the American team is accepted.

"JULIAN S. MYRICK,
"Chairman, Davis Cup Committee
"U. S., L. T. A."

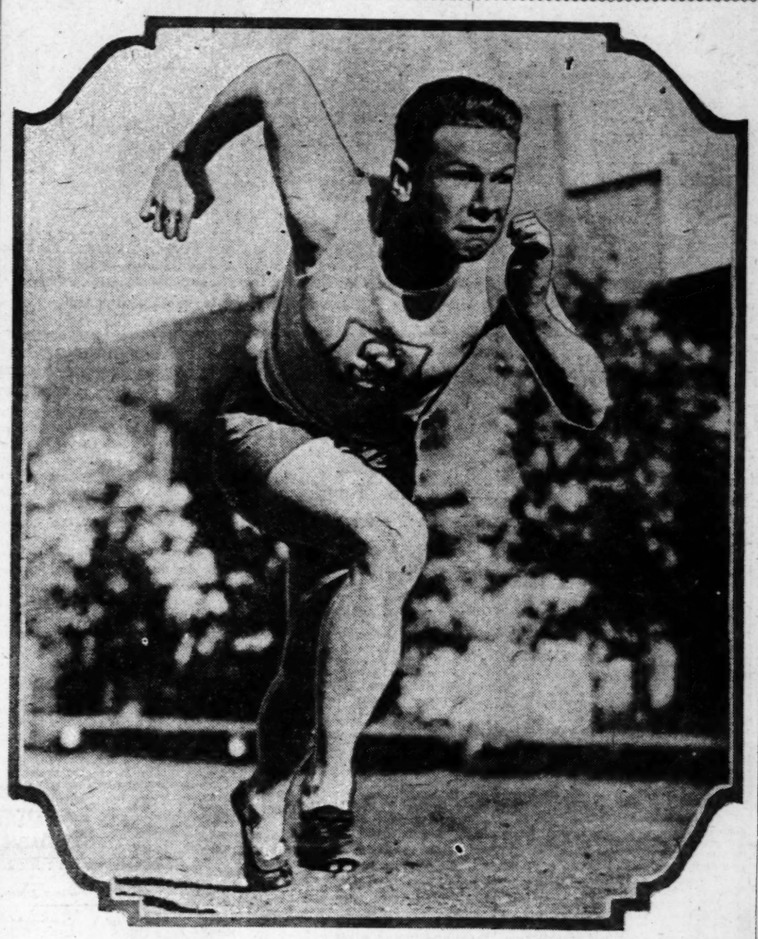
Set World's Record at Drake Relay Games



CHARLES PADDOCK

So-called fastest human, whose first appearances after a long rest resulted in two remarkable races. Yesterday he broke the 35-year-old record for 125 yards when he ran it in 12 seconds. The day before he was timed in 9 3-5 seconds for the 100-yard dash, but "beat the gun" and the mark was not allowed.

40,000 Persons at Penn Games See Boston College Relay Team Break World's Two-Mile Record

Quartet Clips 1 1-5 Seconds From Old Mark—One American Record Broken and Several Carnival Marks Beaten—A Thrilling Meet, Loren Murchison Writes.

By Loren Murchison,
National Sprint Champion.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 26.—The second day of the Penn relay carnival was without a doubt the greatest track and field contest ever held. With a crowd of close to forty thousand in the stands and Franklin Field dressed in real holiday style one world's record was broken, one American record was broken, four relay marks fell by the wayside and one carnival record was equaled. The old record book took one of the worst beatings it has ever received.

I have watched many track contests, but today's really was about the best I have ever seen. Even though the sprints which always draw my interest saw no new records, the other events, gave me plenty to think about. I doubt if the Olympic games in Paris will give me more of a thrill.

Four runners of Boston College who came as dark horses in the tmo-mile relay staged a wonderful race, breaking the world's mark in this event and beating a choice field from both this country and England. The men from the Hub beat Georgetown, Cambridge and Penn State in royal style.

Boston College ran in the following order: McKillop, Mahoney, Welch and Cavanaugh. This team ran the two miles in the wonderful time of 7 minutes, 47 3-5 seconds, which removed just 1 and 1-5 seconds from the former mark made by Penn State last year.

The defeat of the Penn State team came as a surprise. Three of the four men who ran for the Nittany Lion last year were on the track and all did well. The extra runner, Fitzpatrick, was knocked down as he took up the second relay. The runner never recovered for he fell behind, leaving the efforts of Schuyler, Enck and Allan Helfrich to be in vain.

As far as Olympic prospects go I think Enck, Marsters and Bowe, the Englishman, looked by far the best. Allan Helfrich, the intercollegiate half-mile champion, was not up to his usual self and although he ran a good half Lowe managed to pass the champion in the last stretch. This man Lowe is a beauty, having all kinds of power and grace on the track.

Chester Bowman, Louis Clarke and Frank Conway made the English sprint champion, Eric Liddell, look mighty bad in the international hundred yard dash. Bowman, with a wonderful start that never ended, led the select field to the tape in the good time of 10 flat.

Bowman of Syracuse was so fast off the gun that he led by three feet at 40 yards with Louis Clarke a poor third. Clarke staged his usual come-back, breaking into second place in the last 20 yards with Frank Conway a good third. Liddell fought hard, but was unable to get up with the field, finishing fourth under a blanket.

Two Fine Sprinters.

Bowman and Clarke seem to be two of the best sprinters in the country. To let Chester get away from you will spell defeat for any sprinter, I don't care who he is.

I think the University of Virgina's win in the mile relay, while not a record-breaker, was one of the best races of the afternoon.

ST. LOUIS U. HIGH WINS FROM COUNTRY DAY, 4-2

St. Louis University High School defeated the Country Day nine, 4 to 2, yesterday afternoon, when the ninth igning rally of the county nine fell short. Billy Day, pitching for the Blue and White outfit, held his opponents well in hand. The play of both teams in the field was ragged.

Yesterday's game marked the openings of the St. Louis University High School season. Next Wednesday afternoon the Billiken Juniors play Cleveland High.

Sisler With 4 Hits Leads Attack Which Ends Losing Streak

Ray Kolp Is Pounded Hard, but He Hurls Effectively in the Pinches and Pitches Team to Third Victory—Tobin Hits Home Run.

By Dent McSkimming.

You can measure Ray Kolp's curve with a foot rule, but it takes a yard stick to measure his nerve. Ray has more self assurance and confidence than all the rest of the Brown's pitching staff combined. When he is sent in to pitch against the Cleveland Indians he thinks he is the best pitcher in the American League. After almost every other hurler on the staff had failed in efforts to bring the team out of the rut, Kolp went in yesterday and defeated Tris Speaker's tribe of hard hitters and helped the Browns to their third victory of the season.

The tribe slammed Kolp's dinky out shoot for 11 safe hits but they couldn't do a thing when hits meant runs and the Browns overwhelmed them, 11 to 2.

In addition to getting almost a dozen safe hits, they chased the outfielders after 11 putouts. Still, Kolp knew he was good enough to beat the Indians—and he did beat them.

However, he couldn't have won his game without runs and that is where George Sisler, Tobin, Robertson, Gerber and the rest of the team came into the picture. Sisler lead an attack upon Stanley Coveleskie which resulted in 16 hits, including a home run, a triple and a pair of doubles. George obtained 4 hits in 5 trips to the plate and scored two runs.

Indians Put to Rout.

The wear and tear of trying to knock down hard drives from the bats of Brownies finally told on the Cleveland infielders and the Brownies had the run of the game after the sixth inning. Joe Sewell and Lutzke and Pitcher Drake were guilty of fielding blunders and the game took on the appearance of a rout.

The worm showed evidence of wanting to turn in the very first inning. Gene Robertson, who is batting at a .400 clip for 20 times at bat, drove a single to center. Sisler poked a grounder toward third base. Luztke thought it would roll out for a foul and he gave it lots of room. Lutzke figured wrong for the ball stayed well inside third base and Sisler slid into second as Robertson dived into third. Robby scored when Williams bounced a hard drive off Coveleskie's glove for a hit and Sisler also counted when Lutbke tossed out McManus. The worm was a worm no longer.

Coveleskie got by the second but Tobit hit the ball out of the park in the third.

The Browns had a bad inning in the fourth, when they failed to score on two hits, but they came back in the fifth and counted 3 runs on 4 hits. That was Coveleskie's last inning. In justice to the great Cleveland pitcher it must be said that singles by McManus and Jacobson in this inning were mere pops over the infield, too short for the outfielders, who played deep for both sluggers. They were not hard hit drives.

Drake, who relieved Coveleskie in the sixth, yielded 2 runs in the sixth and 2 in the eighth. It was in the sixth that the Cleveland defense wobbled.

Gerber was hit by a pitched ball and Kolp bunted for a sacrifice. Drake muffed the ball and both runners were safe. Tobin then singled, scoring Gerber. Robertson sacrificed, putting runners on second and third with Sisler at the bat.

Sisler hit a hard grounder at Sewell and the shortstop collided with Tobin as he attempted to field the ball. Kolp and Tobin scored and Sisler reached first and was given a hit on the play.

Hurrah for the Umpire!

Cleveland players protested to Umpire Ormsby, who was stationed at third, claiming that Tobin had interfered with Sewell. Ormsby declared the runs legal. He later explained that it appeared to him that Sewell was probably as much to blame as Tobin for he had run into the base runner.

Manager Tris Speaker, after the game, said that he believed the umpire "missed one" inasmuch as the rules place the burden of avoiding a collision upon the base runner. The Browns claimed that Sewell "tackled" Tobin. From the stands it appeared that the ball, the base runner and the fielder came together at the same moment, leaving a great scramble of legs and arms.

"The play may not have changed the course of the game," said Speaker, "but, I believe the umpires overlooked a bet."

No definite announcement of a pitching selection for today's game was made by either manager but it is very probable that George Uhle will oppose either Dave Danforth or Hubert Pruett.

Uhle in his last game defeated the Detroit Tigers, 6 to 5, allowing 12 hits.

In this afternoon's game, Frank Taberski, Detroit, Mich., won from Andrew St. Jean, Minneapolis, 125 to 60.

The final round of the play for the title will begin Monday at Detroit.

JAVELIN RECORD BROKEN AT SOUTHERN CARNIVAL

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 26. — One American record was broken and several new Southern Conference marks were set in the second annual Georgia Tech relay carnival at Grant Field here this afternoon.

Priester of Mississippi A. and M. College broke his own Southern record and lowered the American record when he hurled the javelin 205.04 feet. The present national record, which has stood for a number of years, is 203.5.

The meet was not under the supervision of the Amateur Athletic Association and therefore the records established today will not displace the former ones.

Mississippi A. and M. was the sensation of the meet, winning every relay and placing in every other event.

Gonzales Solves Catching Problem Rickey Believes

Cuban Hit .303 in 146 Games With St. Paul Last Year.

BEL. NOT UP TO MARK

Toporcer Goes to Short Today in First Game Against Cincinnati Reds.

By Herman Wecke,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Miguel Gonzales, Cuban catcher, who several seasons ago was a member of the Cardinals, is again with the team as the result of a trade completed yesterday between the Cardinals and the Brooklyn Superbas. Gonzales comes to the Rickeymen in exchange for Milton Stock, third-sacker, who has failed to report to the St. Louis club. Manager Rickey made the announcement late this afternoon, following receipt of a telegram from Charles Holiday Ebbetts, owner of the Superbas.

Immediately following the announcement, Manager Rickey wired Gonzales to join the club at Cincinnati, where the Cardinals open a two-game series with the Reds tomorrow.

Should Help Team.

While Gonzales is no youngster, Rickey is certain that he will greatly improve the Cardinal team. Weak catching has been one of the chief faults of the aggregation this season, with Clemons on the injured list, and the duties left to three youngsters—Vick, Niebergall and Holm. The Cardinal leader is now confident that his catching troubles are at an end.

Gonzales last season played with the St. Paul club of the American Association. He had a batting average of .303 in 146 games. He averaged one hit a game and his safeties were good for a total of 221 bases. They included 26 doubles, 14 triples and seven home runs. He drove in 84 runs and struck out only 29 times. That Gonzales is a "speed-merchant," as catchers go, is evinced by the fact that he pilfered 17 bases. As a fielder he was the leader in the American Association. He had a percentage of .988 with 407 putouts, 75 assists and but six errors.

Toporcer to Play Short.

While the addition of Gonzales has added strength to the club, Rickey is not yet satisfied. He admits that there is another gap. That is at shortstop, and in the battle with the Reds at Cincinnati tomorrow, George Toporcer, the bespectacled infielder, will be at the position, according to an announcement tonight by the Cardinal leader. Rickey has not yet given up entirely on Lester Bell, the youngster who came up highly touted from Houston last fall, but Bell has not yet hit his stride at the plate and this seems to have affected his fielding.

There is a possibility that there will be several other moves in an effort to strengthen the short-stop position. According to Rickey, Ray Blades, Wattie Holm, who Rickey considers one of the best catching prospects he ever had and Taylor Douthit, the former California University star, will be given workouts in the infield during the club's practice both on the road and at home.

Holm was originally a shortstop and came from Iowa U. Douthit came to the club, primarily as an outfielder, but he really does not know where he belongs, so Rickey is not at all certain but that he will make a good infielder. Blades has played on the infield.

Freigan a Fixture.

However, Rickey is not worried over the other infield positions. Bottomley and Hornsby, he asserts, are fixtures for years to come and he holds the same opinion in regards to Howard Freigan, the youngster who has gone through the first 11 games of the season at third base without a fielding error. Rickey considers Freigan one of the best fielding third-sackers the Cardinals have ever owned. In addition he should hit close to .300 for the season.

It is because of Freigan's success as a far corner guardian that Rickey is certain that the addition of Gonzales, a man badly needed by the team, will more than offset the loss of Milton Stock. Stock is a veteran in years as well as baseball, while Freigan is just 21 years of age.

Well Pleased With Trade.

"I was never more enthused over the completion of a trade than over the one I have just made," commented Rickey last night. "I think my catching worries are at an end. Gonzales I consider one of the greatest throwing receivers in the game.

"I rank only Mickey O'Neil of Boston as his equal. I have never considered the Cuban a great hitter, but he has batted more than .300 for the past two years while a member of the American Association. If I am able to successfully fill that position at short, I am certain the club will be in the running before the year is over."

Yesterday's Game Postponed.

The final game of the series between the Cardinals and Cubs yesterday was washed away by rain and will be played off on June 23, an open date for both teams.

For the opening clash with the fast driving Reds tomorrow Jeff Pfeffer, the husky right-hander, will without a doubt draw the hurling assignment. Johnny Stuart, the former Ohio State right-hander, is another possibility.

Sherdel Has Tonsilitis.

Bill Sherdel, the little left-hander, departed tonight for his home in St. Louis. Sherdel has an attack of tonsilitis that will keep him out for at least four days. The club is without a southpaw, as Eddie Dyer, the other left-hander, suffered a split hand in the team's final clash at home with the Pittsburg Pirates.

Firpo, Born With Fighting Physique, Never Had His Heart in Fight Game

Wild Bull of Pampas Became a Boxer by Accident Rather Than by Inclination, Mayer Writes.

By Alfred Mayer.
(Copyright, 1924.)

NEW YORK, April 26.

BORN with a remarkable physique and every natural advantage for the ring, Luis Angel Firpo became a boxer more by an accident of fortune than by inclination. He had roamed throughout South America, earning a precarious livelihood, when suddenly the appearance of the American fleet in South American waters and its subsequent holding of boxing bouts determined Firpo to take up fighting seriously. He had boxed before, but without much enthusiasm, primarily because of the poor purses offered in South America. After the visit of the American fleet and later the visit of American boxing stars to Buenos Aires in 1916, Firpo discovered that huge sums of money could be earned in America.

Firpo never really had his heart in the fight game; he hates training and everything that goes with it.

Firpo's return to South America has proved beyond doubt how his popularity has waned. His matches in Buenos Aires have been failures, not only from a financial point of view but from a popular viewpoint as well. Vastly different was Firpo's fight against Jim Tracy in Buenos Aires in 1922. After that fight the whole of Argentina spoke of him as the next world's champion. When Firpo saw the effect his taking American citizenship papers had caused in his native land he was desperate. He roamed about the streets of New York aimlessly and cried like a child. He spent sleepless nights and even Father Time, that great healer, had not been able to smooth over the most unfortunate step that Firpo ever took in his careful career.

Very Rich Young Man.

TODAY Firpo is a very rich young man, and with interest waning at home, he doesn't care to face another summer here even for $500,000. He doesn't want to read of what his people would say if he was again knocked out by Dempsey or anyone else. Many South Americans believe that Firpo can never wrest the championship from Dempsey, that any further attempt to do so would be futile and that if it was attempted it would be done merely to enrich Firpo further. Thus, Firpo for a time planned to retire. He has learned the bitter lesson of the ring that popularity only goes with the fighter who is climbing up the tree of success, but once the top is reached he becomes a very much disliked mortal whom everyone wants to see knocked out.

Furthermore, when Firpo first came to America he was determined to make a success in the roped arena, but he also had the good sense to realize that it was possible for him to be knocked out. Later on, as he progressed, and the papers began to talk about him as a superman, he believed this himself. His friends had much to do with this and after his fight with Bill Brennan he felt convinced that no man living could defeat him. His right arm became his greatest delight and he never tired of looking at it. While he was barnstorming last summer he frequently used to sit on the edge of his bed, roll up his sleeves and gaze with admiration at his tremendous right arm. He also did this while training at Atlantic City. He seemed to sense its enormous dormant power and marvel at it. This was frequently noted by his right arm the same as some men are fascinated by revolvers and the silent power of death they carry.

Firpo never uttered a word while this semireligious ceremony was going on, but it was easy to realize what an impression his admirers had made upon his mind when they told him that nothing human could withstand that mighty right. Many say he doesn't want to fight Wills. I do not believe this. He has frequently told me he had no fear of Wills and that he was confident he could defeat him. I think myself Firpo would win over Wills, but that is not his object. The only match that holds any attraction for Firpo is the Dempsey match, because if he could lift the championship then he would be sure of a hearty welcome home. Everything he might previously have done to injure his popularity would be forgotten. The Argentinians would be so proud of having produced a heavyweight champion of the world that everything else would become of secondary importance. It must be realized that the competition between Argentina and Chile to produce a boxing champion, in any division, is such that many things would be overlooked.

Will Not Risk Setback.

I DO not believe, however, that Firpo would risk another setback. If he felt sure of defeating Dempsey it would be another matter, but he doesn't. The only influence that could make Firpo change his mind would be that of Bunge. If this young amateur sportsman, who built a luxurious gymnasium in his palatial home at Buenos Aires specially for Firpo's use, was again to undertake to guide him in his endeavor to defeat Dempsey, then I feel sure that Firpo would regain the enthusiasm which he has lost. It has often been said that Firpo was money mad. Many believe he wouldn't pass up the easy money he can make here this summer. But to those who really know Firpo, such a viewpoint is erroneous. He has always insisted, and frequently with the tenacity of a Shylock, for what he considered his share. But even before the Dempsey fight, when surrounded by intimates whom he could trust, he opened his heart and frequently said he had enough money and that he was through with the fight game.

Firpo hates to be opposed. He dislikes to have his slightest wish contradicted and it must be admitted that his wishes were not considered when he was made to fight Dempsey last year. He didn't want to fight Dempsey then. He insisted he should fight him this year when he would be sure of winning. Why, nobody knows, except that he had that conviction rooted at the back of his mind and no one could tell him anything different. He feels that his chances of winning the championship were spoiled by Rickard, who insisted that Firpo live up to his contract.

Firpo never has given any consideration to the fact that it was Rickard who made it possible for him to make a fortune. Firpo's contention has always been that Rickard never would have promoted a single match in which Luis appeared unless the promoter was reasonably sure to make a substantial profit. To those who have pointed to Rickard as the man who made Firpo's fortune Luis has always replied that it was Rickard's business to promote successful fights while it was Firpo's business to win them so as to obtain others; a fifty-fifty arrangement from Luis' standpoint.

ALFRED MAYER, the writer of the "Experiences of Firpo in America" was with the South American champion from the time he landed in the United States until he departed and therefore probably knows more about the Wild Bull of the Pampas than any other man in the United States. Mayer accompanied Firpo on his exhibition tours and was with him when training for his various bouts.

Failure to Knock Out Spalla Quickly May Have Caused Luis to Lose His Confidence.

May Have Lost Confidence.

YET another reason for Firpo's present state of mind may be found in his recent match at Buenos Aires with Erminio Spalla, the Italian heavyweight champion. I know Luis; he never has faked a match in his life, and if he really couldn't knock out Spalla before 14 rounds of fighting he may have lost there and then a great deal of confidence and admiration in that mighty right arm of his. Firpo, like many of us, is vain. It may have been a warning to him, a sort of coming events casting their shadows before them. He doesn't care to see himself lying helpless on the canvas. It has only happened to him twice in his career and he doesn't relish the sight. I saw him watching a private showing of the Dempsey-Firpo pictures in his apartment and Luis' usual poker face betrayed hurt vanity and pride when he saw himself lying there while the fancy he could hear the shouting of thousands of fight mad fans screaming for the killing. Firpo has too often been in the other fellow's shoes to appreciate the sensation.

TIGERS TAKE LEAD BY TROUNCING WHITE SOX

DETROIT, April 26.—In the wildest game of the season, Detroit knocked the props from under the Chicago Sox and assumed first place in the American League standing this afternoon by gaining a 16 to 7 verdict.

Chicago hurlers could not hold the Tiger batsmen in leash while players on both sides showed a decided penchant for throwing the ball all over the lot.

Johnny Evers shot Blankenship, Cvengros and Leverette into the firing line and one was effective. Cobb used Whitehill and then Holloway, the latter going in only because a pinch-hitter was sent to bat. With the game standing 16 to 4 in the last inning and two men out, Archdeacon rolled to blue who made an attempt to tag him. Thinking he had retired Archdeacon Blue threw the ball into the Detroit dugout and Falk scored from third while Archdeacon went all the way around on the error as the crowd swarmed into the field. Umpire Owens ruled Blue had failed to touch Archdeacon.

Missouri Pounds Piker Twirlers And Wins, 10-4

Waters Pitches Fine Game for Tigers, Holding Washington Team to Six Hits.

The University of Missouri Tigers split their conference series with the Pikers by winning the second game at Francis Field yesterday afternoon by a score of 10 to 4. The Tigers drove one Piker hurler to cover and collected a total of 14 hits, including a double, a triple and two home runs.

Waters pitched a strong game for the Tigers, holding the Pikers to six hits and striking out 12 batters. He held Washington hitless until the fifth inning when Gragg sent one of his shoots into left field for a home run. Waters' only bad inning was the sixth, in which the Pikers made four hits to score three runs.

Charley Levy, Washington's star hurler, was scheduled to pitch for the Pikers, but he had a sore arm, and Schlingman took over the task. The Tigers prospered on the left-hander's offerings, getting at least one hit in each of the six innings he worked. Three hits, two walks and three errors gave Missouri six runs in the sixth inning, and Heist then took up the pitching burden for the Pikers. Heist yielded three hits, but prevented further scoring.

Tigers Score Early.

The Tigers started their scoring in the second inning, when Smith planted a home run in center field. Singles by Anthony and Faurot and a home run by Marselek, together with two errors, gave the Tigers three more runs in the fourth. The Tigers batted around in the sixth inning to score six runs. Singles by Denny and Smith, and a triple by Waters, mixed with walks and Piker miscues, did the damage.

After Gragg's homer had scored for the Pikers in the fifth the Washington players came back in the sixth to score three runs. Singles by Thym and Starkloff, Levy's double and Gragg's triple accounted for the runs.

Cleveland Blanks Soldan; Yeatman Trims McKinley

Gene Hobbs Holds West End Team to Three Hits, Striking Out 13 Men.

Opportune hitting and the steady pitching of Norman Engler sent Yeatman High into first place when the North Siders triumphed over McKinley in the final and feature game at High School Field yesterday, by a 6—2 score. Gene Hobbs hurled effectively for Cleveland in the first game and shut out Soudan, 5—0.

The ability to bunch hits while Engler was keeping McKinley's well scattered was the deciding element in Yeatman's victory. McKinley took the lead in the first inning but had to relinquish it in the fourth period when Yeatman tallied three times. The North Siders remained on the heavy end of the count and strengthened their lead when they added three more runs in the eighth. A home run by Blumenkamp in the fourth began the Yeatman hitting and another slugfest in the eighth, when three runs were scored, proved Hell's downfall.

Yeatman gives every promise of duplicating last year's feat, when it won the title. None of the other teams seems able to conquer this veteran outfit.

Hobbs Fans 13 Men.

Gene Hobbs, Cleveland star, featured his team's victory both by his pitching and slugging. He fanned 13 men, shutting out Soldan with but three safeties and accounting for two of his team's nine hits. The entire Cleveland machine seems to be much improved over last week, when it bowed to McKinley High.

Soldan was completely baffled by Hobbs' curves and was unable to connect until the sixth inning when Harwitz singled over second base.

By winning yesterday, Cleveland managed to climb out of the cellar and now is tied with McKinley for second honors. If Fenenga's boys continue to improve the team should give Yeatman a hard battle when they clash next week. The scores:

INTERESTING MEN ON HARVARD BASEBALL TEAM

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 26.—One of the most interesting figures on the Harvard baseball squad this spring are Phil Spaulding, the Crimson's veteran pitcher who started off last season with a fine performance against Boston University, and June Iyakawa, the Japanese catcher who has been doing very nicely in the early work of the Cambridge nine. Spaulding also was one of the few varterbacks on the football team last fall.

PARADE AND CONTESTS FEATURE DEDICATION OF BICYCLE TRACK

Bicycle enthusiasts dedicated the new bicycle track at Sherman Park yesterday afternoon with various contests. Preceding the dedication exercises, the riders paraded from Twelfth boulevard and Olive street to Sherman Park. The riders had decorated their bicycles and five prizes were awarded for those adjudged to present the best appearance. Donald Rehm was given first prize, Clifton Hill, second, James Smith, third, Edmund Burke fourth and Delbert Melton, fifth.

The girls' awards were made separately but so well did Krensing Haverstick, a boy of 15, impersonate a girl that five judges voted to give him first prize, second prize went to Ruth Wagnitz, 8 years old, and third prize to Marie Wagnitz, age 7.

Prizes were also awarded to messenger boys and others to those having the more comical costumes. Otto J. Boehmer received a prize for the oldest rider and Louis Biegey, 8 years old, the youngest boy.

Trick riding and a slow race closed the program.

Sarazen Leading Havers, Three Up

American Out in Front After Half of Match With British Open Champion.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, April 26.—Gene Sarazen, American professional golf champion, will begin the second half of his 72-hole match with Arthur G. Havers, British open title holder, tomorrow at Rye, N. Y., with a lead of three up, gained today over the Cedar Brook Club course here.

Sarazen, who defeated the Englishman on the Pacific Coast last January, today again showed his heels to his opponent, leading from the sixth hole in the morning to the end of the afternoon round. He scored 76-75—151 over the par 71 course, five strokes better than Havers.

Havers' principal fault was uncertainty with his putter. Several times in the afternoon he lost chances to win or to halve holes by failing to sink short putts. The driving was about equal for the day, each player averaging about 265 yards.

BRITISH RUGBY TEAM DEFEATS AMERICANS

By the Associated Press.

TWICKENHAM, England, April 26.—The American Olympic rugby football team was defeated by the British Harlequins today, 21 to 11.

The local team paid the visitors the compliment of putting its strongest team in the field.

It was a hard fought game, the tackling throughout being tremendously keen. Profiting by their previous experiences in England, the Americans made four changes in their team and adopted the British formation. Thus fortified, they played better than previously but still were not clever enough for the skillful back division of their opponents and the critics pointed out that their backs had still much to learn in the matter of combination.

A heavy rain in the morning had made the ground wet and hence the ball was greasy.

A bad accident occurred in the first half, J. M. Currie of the Harlequins breaking his leg in a collision with one of his opponents.

RED SOX LOSE TO YANKS 4—3, IN ELEVEN INNINGS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The Yankees won a thriller from the Red Sox today, 4 to 3, scoring twice in the tenth after the Boston team apparently had won the game, and putting over the winning run in the eleventh on Hofmann's double, a sacrifice by Hoyt and Witt's perfect bunt on a squeeze play.

Boston scored twice in the tenth on a home run by Veach and hits by Harris and Boone, after two were out. In the Yankee half, Ruth, who had been intentionally passed three times by Quinn, flied out but Meusel doubled and Pipp hit a home run, tying the score.

Balance and Timing Essentials Of Golf Swing, Sarazen Says

Good Players Always Set The mselves for the Swing Before They Start the Club Back, Champion Points Out—Avoid Swaying and Shifting of Weight Too Soon.

By Gene Sarazen.
American Professional Champion.

A husky young man came to me the other day for a lesson in driving. "Occasionally," he said "I get a very long drive. But more often than not I top the ball or do some other fool things. I wish you would tell me what my trouble is."

We went out to the practice tee, and as soon as I had seen this fellow swing the club I wondered that he ever got even a single good drive. As he swung the club back he would shift his entire weight to the left leg and on the down stroke he would try shifting to the right leg. He was completely off balance. Apparently he had been reading something about shifting the weight of the body or else he had a wrong idea of body sway and balance.

Balance and timing are two of the essential fundamentals of a good golf swing. And in this article I am going to stress the necessity of getting a proper balance before starting the swing.

Having gripped the club properly—in the manner described in last week's article—you want to make sure you are comfortable and balanced, as we say, on your feet before you start the club back.

Watch Your Stance First.

Assuming that you are addressing the ball with the square stance, which is the kind I advise the average player to use, make sure you are set firmly on your heels with your body fairly erect. Do not hold yourself stiffly but on the other hand do not stand up to the ball in any kind of slack manner.

As you start the club back you must also start to pivot. You do this by bending the left knee gradually in toward the ball, while crooked slightly when you were addressing the ball is gradually straightened so that most of the weight is on the right foot when the club is at the top of the swing.

In this position you should have a feeling of security and of proper balance. You should not be leaning too far to the right nor the left but should be in such position that your head is directly over the ball with the left eye looking down upon the sphere.

On the down-swing the left foot gradually settles to a solid position while the right knee and the right shoulder, or the right side of the body, are turned towards the ball. Just before the ball is struck, when the wrists are snapped into play, the right knee is bent rather quickly and the right shoulder dipped so the full force of the body is put into the stroke.

Constant Practice Necessary.

All this of course, should be done smoothly and rhythmically and without any jerking or hurrying. And the only way to do these things mechanically is by constant practice.

The things to avoid on the backswing are the swaying of the body to the right side and the shifting of the weight of the body from the right foot to the left too quickly. This change or shift should not be made until you are about to make the strike, when all of the weight is transferred to the left foot.

It is very important that you remember to get balanced properly and firmly on both feet before starting the swing. More shots are ruined because players are not balanced or set before making the swing, than for any other single reason I know of. You never see a star batter swing and hit while off balance, and you'll never see a good golf shot made by any player who hasn't taken the trouble to set himself for the swing.

The next time you see any of the good players in action, notice the manner in which they set themselves for the swing before they start the club back. You will observe they are standing firmly with both feet solidly on the ground and in perfect position to make the strike.

STYMIE A REWARD FOR A POOR PUTT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The recent golf tournament at Pinehurst has once more revived the discussion about the stymie. Those opposed to the rule have always pointed out that the stymie proves to be a reward for a poor putt. This was the case at Pinehurst when Knight missed a two-foot putt and Merriman, rather than take the chance of jumping his opponent's ball, knocked it into the cup, and Knight won the hole.

The stymie has always been a fundamental play of golf, and rule makers on both sides of the Atlantic are reluctant about any changes which will affect the traditions of the game. Meanwhile, the opposition to the rule grows.

KANSAS AGGIES DEFEAT KANSAS U. TEAM, 4 TO 2

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MANHATTAN, Kan., April 26.—Playing on a muddy diamond, the Kansas Aggies defeated the University of Kansas baseball team here today by a score of 4 to 2 for a clean sweep of the series. The score of yesterday's game was 4 to 1.

The Aggies won the game in the third inning when two costly errors by the Kansas team and a single by Barth, center fielder, netted three tallies. The first score came in the opening inning as a result of a single by Barth and two sacrifice hits.

The Jayhawkers scored their two runs in the second inning on three bunched hits and an Aggie error. They threatened again in the fourth but a throw by Aikin from deep left field cut off the runner at the plate for the third out and stopped the rally. The fielding was fast despite the wet grounds. The Aggies turned in two double plays, repeating their performance of yesterday.

KREMER DEFEATS MAYS IN PITCHING DUEL, 2 TO 0

PITTSBURG, April 26.—Ray Kremer, Coast League recruit, shut the Reds out in a dual with the underhand shoots of Carl Mays here today, 2 to 0. Although his support was wobbly in the first stanza, Kremer was given gilt-edged support in the pinches, two lightning double plays cutting off runs.

He allowed seven hits, four of them clustered, in two innings. Mays allowed but five hits, three of them in the first inning, when two runs were scored. Maranville opened with a single and went to third on Carey's safe blow; Max stole second, Bigbee failed and on Traynor's rap to Mays, Maranville got back to third safely, Carey being run down. Traynor stole second and Barnhart scratched a single off Mays' glove on which both Maranville and Traynor scored the only runs of the game.

SWEENEY MAKING GOOD AS BIG LEAGUE UMPIRE

NEW YORK, April 26.—J. Monroe Sweeney, graduate of Doak Roberts' school of umpiring, is getting away to a good start as a major leaguer, according to reports received by the Texas League president.

Sam Crane writes in the New York Journal concerning Sweeney's debut. He says in part: "Umpire Sweeney, who officiated behind the plate, showed that President Heydler has a very competent man on his staff. We hasten to give our congratulations to Umpire Sweeney. He had as difficult a game to work in as he probably will have all season. His judgment was quick and he was so forceful in making his decisions that he surely made a big hit."

Boston College Team Breaks World's 2-Mile Relay Record

With Bohannon running anchor, the Southern four beat out Yale, the favorite, in the last lap in the fast time of 3 minutes 19 1-5 seconds. As I have said before, this Bohannon is a real Olympic prospect, being one of the greatest quarter milers I have ever seen.

The American record that was broken came among the schoolboys when Huntington School of Boston broke the old mark by over five seconds. The four schoolboys from the Hub came right along with the Boston college men, winning from a large field. The new time of the Hub schoolboys was 8 minutes 17 1-5 seconds.

Among the other noteworthy performances that showed either new records or splendid competition was in the pole vault. Here Brooker of Michigan, who has much ability with the long pole, sailed over the bar at 12 feet 10¾ inches. This mark stands as carnival record for it erased the former mark held by Foss of Cornell and Newstetter of Pennsylvania made back in 1915. The old mark was 12 feet 10 inches.

Oberst Wins Javelin Event.

Oberst, of Notre Dame, was another man who broke into the limelight. Oberst threw the javelin 196 feet, 2 5-8 inches which is the second longest heave ever made on Franklin Field. The throw was a new carnival record and was only outdone by the throw of Stoors of Yale last year in the intercollegiates.

Lawson Robertson did not go without a victory, for the Pennsylvania half-mile relay team won the event equaling the relay record. Occidental from the Pacific Coast was second, and gave the Red and Blue a fight from start to end. The Pennsylvania four was composed of George Hill, the sprinter; Mattie Keough, Pete Martin and Ray Wolf. Occidental ran the Eastern champions man for man, but could not pass the Red and Blue. Robbie's victory came as a surprise.

Snyder of Ohio State, won the 120-yard high hurdles on the grass, showing a fast field his heels in a thrilling battle. Ivan Riley of the Kansas Aggies, who won the 400 meters yesterday, took the second honors in the contest. Charley Moore, the Penn State hurdler, who won the event last year, made a poor showing. Moore was disqualified for knocking down three hurdles but he would have been shut out anyway. The time was not so fast, being 15 2-5 seconds.

Dowding, of Georgetown, surprised Rose, of Pennsylvania, in the broad jump, while Bruno Hills easily won the shot put with a heave of over 47 feet. Robusch of Pittsburg had a big day taking first place in the high jump with a leap of 6 feet, 2 inches and fourth in the pole vault.

GIANTS POUND TWO PITCHERS AND WIN 5-2

BROOKLYN, N. Y., April 26. — New York made it two out of three today winning 5 to 2 and regaining the lead in the National League race. Gearin held the ten hits of the Dodgers scattered except in the sixth and eighth innings. Henry started his first game of the season was knocked out of the box in the sixth inning and Long making his major league debut was taken out for a pinch hitter. Both sides made some sensational plays, the work of Frisch and Jackson excelling. Frisch ran out into center in the fourth and made a circus catch of a fly from Wheat's bat.

President Ebbetts announced that Milton Stock had accepted terms and would report to the Brooklyn team Monday. Score:

First Colts and Fillies Sired by Man O'War to Be Seen in Races, This Year

Twelve Highly Bred Racers Are Now in Training—Quality of Youngsters Still Uncertain — Famous Thoroughbred Will Not Meet Epinard.

By G. F. T. Ryall.

NEW YORK, April 26.—When old Exterminator finished third in the Coffroth Handicap and thus passed the $250,000 mark in money winnings, there was some talk which was since officially denied that Man o' War would come back to the races, if only to meet Epinard in the series of international sweepstakes this fall.

Such a thing would have been unfair to what probably is the greatest runner this country ever has known. Man o' War started 21 times and won 20 races, the one in which he was beaten being the result of—for fear of a less charitable word—racing luck. At the height of his fame in 1920, Man o' War held five world's records, several of which still stand.

At the end of his 2-year-old year, the son of Fairplay-Mahubah was retired to the stud in Kentucky and this year the first of his sons and daughters will come to the races. Samuel D. Riddle, the owner of Man o' War, does not court the limelight for his horse. The dozen 2-year-olds that racegoers are looking forward to seeing have wintered well and are being prepared for the races at the Riddle farm at Berlin, Md., a most inaccessible place, under the care of Gwynne Tompkins.

As Impressive Looking as Sire.

Word, however, has come to the outside world of these 2-year-olds, some of whom will make their first appearance under colors at Belmont Park. Those who have seen the colts say that they are a handsome lot, as impressive looking as their sire when he came to the races.

Riddle, who is an Irishman, has spared no expense in buying mares to stock his breeding farm. Four years ago he sent a carte blanche order to one of the leading agents in England to buy half a dozen of the best brood mares offered at the December sales at Newmarket. The order was carried out and certainly the blood lines of the purchased mares were fashionable enough and the prices high enough even for a millionaire beginner.

The first foals of Man o' War were twin fillies which died shortly after birth. The other 12 have developed and trained on. Riddle told the writer last winter that all showed remarkable speed in their yearling trials, but while they were a fine-looking lot, there were several better looking ones by Golden Broom, a young sire owned by his nephew, Walter M. Jeffords, which as a 2-year-old, used to beat Man o' War when they were worked together in the morning.

The sons of great horses seldom race to the reputations of their sires. Most of the get of Colin have never risen above the selling plater class, but again, as he was in racing, Man o' War may be the exception.

Good Horse Always Well Named.

They say a good horse is always well named. By the same token the first crop of Man o' War should run away from the Sadie Ma, the Eddie Da, and the Abe Sabcolatmkys. One of the sons of Man o' War has been named Himself, another American Flag and another Friendship Two, who is owned by J. K. Maddux, who picked Man o' War out at the sale of the August Belmont yearlings and induced Riddle to bid on him. And still another is named Homerics. The last named is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Jeffords. Homeric's dam is Batanocea by the sire of The Tetrarch—Roi Herod—Pink Clover by Melton, the sire of Sysonby. The mare is a half sister of Gowan, winner of the grand prize of Brazil. Batanocea was the prize of the lot purchased in England. She cost $15,000.

Himself is a brown colt out of Collete by Collar-Disdair II by Hanover. American Flag is a chestnut colt out of Lady Comefy by Rol Gerbes-Snoot. Snoot, by Perigord, is a well-known brood mare.

Seaplane is a bay filly out of Bathing Girl, by Spearmint-Summer Girl, a full sister to Over-There, one of the Sledmere winners bought by W. R. Coe and who was disqualified after finishing first in the Lawrence Realization in 1919. Flotilla is a chestnut filly, whose dam is Santissima, by St. Angelo-Duisant, by St. Frusquin. The third dam of this mare is St. Marguerite, by Hermit, which was the second dam of Rocksand.

Flagship is a chestnut colt, by Understudy. First Mate is a chestnut colt out of Shady, by Peter Pan; Maid at Arms, a chestnut filly, out of Thrasher; Florence Nightingale, a brown filly out of The Nurse; Gunboat, a chestnut filly out of Star Fancy, by Star Shoot, and there is an unnamed brown colt whose dam is Miss Starlight, by Watercress, a full sister to Boots, which was one of the best handicap horses in the East a half dozen years back. Three or four weeks ago there were nothing but good horses in training at Belmont Park, with the season about to open. The bugle will sound on Tuesday. The trainers say nobody has any good horses. It is true that, with the early spring and much rain, training operations have been delayed to a considerable degree.

Wise Counsellor and Worthmore Will Both Start in Preakness

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 26. WISE COUNSELLOR, John S. Ward's Derby hope and a favorite to capture the great Kentucky classic, left this morning at 11 o'clock in company with his two stablemates, Indian Trail and Worthmore, for Pimlico.

Both the sturdy son of Mentor and Worthmore are booked to race under Ward's colors in the Preakness May 12.

Extra precautions were taken with the racer in shipping him and he will be guarded well during his trip on account of an alleged plot to dope Wise Counsellor and destroy his chances of winning the Preakness and the big race here on May 12.

Wise Counsellor and his stablemates were loaded on a special horse car at the Downs. His workout of a mile in 1m 41 3-5s yesterday was the fastest trial of the season at the local course.

Eddie Reith, Abe Sincoff, Mike Sansone and several other amateur boxers who have starred in Western A. A. U. and Municipal A. A. exhibitions of the past season have been invited to participate.

Amateurs who desire to file entries for the preliminaries and special events of the show are requested to communicate with Matchmaker Cook at the Business Men's Gymnasium or with Jimmy Solari, room 408 Oriel building.

Professional boxing may also be revived at the Battery arena during the summer season, according to the Business Men's Club officials. Announcement was made last night that the club plans to present a professional card on or about May 20.

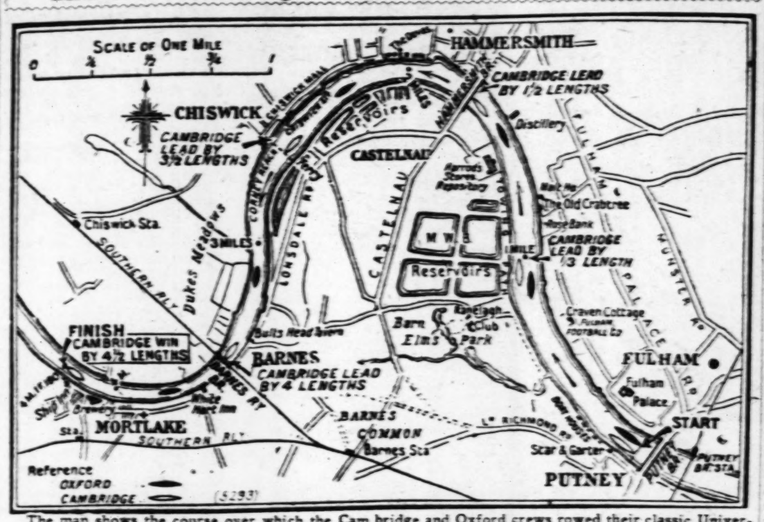
Navy Crews Beat M. I. T.

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 26.—Navy won both boat races from Massachusetts Tech today by the same margin—three lengths—over the Henley distance of one mile and five-sixteenths. The races were between varsity and junior varsity crews. The Navy varsity time was 4m 44s, Massachusetts Tech, 4m 54s. The junior varsity time was: Navy, 4m 53s; Tech, 5m 11s.

Chart of Cambridge-Oxford University Boat Race



The map shows the course over which the Cam bridge and Oxford crews rowed their classic University boat race. Few persons who have not seen the course realize there is such a pronounced bend in the river, the bend constituting virtually the entire four and one-half miles over which the race is contested. The map also shows the relative positions of the crews during the race. Cambridge, which won, chose the inside station at the start, which gave the crew the advantage over the bending course.

Singlefoot Wins Aberdeen Stake At Havre de Grace

Big Crowd Sees Griffith's 2-Year-Old Take Feature Race From Fine Field.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 26.—J. E. Griffith's Singlefoot won the Aberdeen stakes for 2-year-olds at four and a half furlongs here today and incidentally showed that he was just about the best juvenile that has carried colors on the Maryland tracks this season. The son of Wrack-Virginia L. picked up 116 pounds and taking the track stepped the distance in :56, equaling the mark set by Mother Goose, the fast Whitney filley several days ago.

Primrose chased the pace all the way but never could close the gap, while Sombre, well fancied because of her recent showing, finished third. Quite the best field of 2-year-olds that has gone to the post this season paraded for the race, which had an added value of $5000 and was worth $3410 to the winner. Singlefoot paid $4.60, $4.10 and $3 in the $2 Mutuels.

One of the biggest crowds of the meeting turned out today. McLean, making his first start of the season, won the Eclipse handicap, at six furlongs, which shared the honors with the Aberdeen stakes as the feature of the card. The 3-year-old son of Meelick-Donna Hamilton was away forwardly and after racing Comixa, into submission, held his field safely all the way. New Hampshire, which was rated off the early pace, closed gamely in the last furlong but was beaten by two lengths. McLean paid $64, $18.80 and $8.50 in the $2 Mutuels.

Golden Rule ran back to his good race of several days ago and beat Klondyke, one of H. P. Whitney's candidates for the 3-year-old fixturer, by a length. It was Klondyke's first start of the year.

750 MARES NOMINATED FOR KENTUCKY FUTURITY

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 26.—Announcement that 750 mares have been nominated in the Kentucky Futurity, $21,000, for foals of 1924, was made by the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association today.

This is the thirty-fifth renewal of the famed classic and since its inception $657,930 have been paid to its money winners and to the original nominators of the dams to the present time. The nominations received last year, while slightly in excess of this figure is a difference that may reasonably be expected either way, up or down, from year to year, J. W. Williams, secretary, commented.

Walnut Hall Farm, Donerail, Ky., which has headed the list almost without exception, within the last 20 years, again leads with 70 blue-blooded mares and it has also named 14 others which are being farmed, practically all being in foal to its trio of wonderful sires, Guy Axworth, San Francisco, and Peter Volo, he said.

"This year, for the first time, W. Harry Orr, of Reading, Pa., occupies second place with 29 choicely bred mares in foal to his good young sire Ortolan Axworth," he said.

"T. D. Taggart's Laurel Hall, of Indianapolis, follows closely with 28 grand matrons in foal to the young horse Peter Pluto, successor at the farm to his illustrious sire, Peter the Great, and to David Guy. Paul Kuhn's Forest Park Farm, Terre Haute, Ind., follows one nomination behind Laurel Hall with 27, nearly all bred to the ex-champion, The Harvester, 2:01. There are 237 nominators, of whom 32 have named five or more mares each."

MORRIS CALLS FOR FORD TELEGRAMS ON SHOALS DEAL

Gets Messages Between Manufacturer's Secretary and Washington Representative of His Paper.

SUBPENAS LEIBOLD TO APPEAR MAY 2

Senator Recently Charged That Ford Had Understanding With Coolidge on Power Project.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, April 26. — Senator Norris of Nebraska sprung a surprise before the committee on agriculture today that promises another series of sensational developments. Unknown to most members of the committee, Norris had subpenaed overnight the local manager of the Western Union and obtained a batch of telegrams exchanged between E. G. Liebold, private secretary to Henry Ford, and William J. Campbell, editor of Ford's Dearborn Independent, and James M. Miller, who represented that publication in Washington.

Beyond admitting the telegrams relate to Ford's negotiations to obtain Muscle Shoals, Norris declined to divulge their contents. Immediately after examining them, however, he issued a subpena to require Liebold's appearance before the committee on May 2.

Norris recently made the open charge that Ford's conversion to President Coolidge's camp implied some definite understanding between the President and the Detroit manufacturer over the disposition of Muscle Shoals. Norris has also made known that he was strongly disposed to inquire into the series of circumstances beginning with the sale by Secretary of War Weeks of the Gorgas Steam plant, one of the Muscle Shoals units, to the Alabama Power Co.

Ford's Attack on Weeks.

Ford, as Norris emphasized, bitterly attacked Weeks and inferentially, if not directly, Coolidge. Weeks responded with a sharp retort to Ford. Then Ford came here on a visit, had a conference at the White House and announced shortly afterward he would support Coolidge's candidacy. In his message to Congress shortly afterward, Mr. Coolidge implied by his language that he would favor granting Muscle Shoals to Ford and the McKenzie bill was introduced in the House for that purpose, reputedly with Mr. Coolidge's indorsement. It was that bill which passed the House by a heavy majority. Out of this chronology of events grew the charges of a Coolidge-Ford agreement, but Norris at least ascribed it to political partisanship until recently, when information placed in his hands led to his obtaining authority to issue, subpenas, and secondly to today's events.

A few days ago Norris caused some surprise by stating before the committee his belief that Ford had driven a bargain at the White House on Muscle Shoals.

Weeks On Stand Monday.

Norris has not decided when he will press this inquiry, at open committee hearings, but probably not until Liebold arrives here. Meanwhile Secretary Weeks is to be the chief witness on Monday but at this time, at least, only with reference to the War Department's supervision over and data on the Muscle Shoals project. W. B. Mayo, Ford's chief engineer, has wired the committee he will arrive here also Monday.

Former Secretary of the Interior James R. Garfield was the principal witness today and piled up still more evidence in unqualified condemnation of the Ford bid, declaring it to be against public policy and public interest.

He pointed out how Roosevelt had vetoed the first bill that attempted to turn Muscle Shoals over to private interests. Norris, commenting today on the Ford proposition, said it would be "a national crime" if executed.

"I can't help but feel the Ford proposal violates in every sense the general principles of the Federal Water Power Act," Garfield said. "The future value of this grant is undeterminable, but it will be vastly greater than the millions spent on it so far.

"Biggest Power Trust in History."

"If the Ford offer is accepted, it will create the greatest power trust in history, and the South will be at the mercy of the lessee. Ford is not a philanthropist, but is seeking this as a business proposition."

Garfield detailed the failure of the McKenzie bill to guarantee any public benefits, and called it a gift "that Ford is getting under his own terms."

"If you give this to Ford," he said, "you may as well scrap the Federal Water Power Act." It was his view that "the glamor of a name has attracted the country" and led to the widespread misconception of what Ford is proposing.

E. C. Dwells and T. L. Kirkpatrick, representing a Charlotte (N. C.) citizens' organization, also testified against the Ford bill. They objected particularly to its failure to allow the waterpower developed at Muscle Shoals to be distributed to the public, Ford having insisted upon keeping entirely for his own contemplated industrial uses. They also objected to the violations of the Federal Water Power Act involved in the Ford proposal and to the lack of adequate assurances that Ford would even make any fertilizer.

Fresh-Air Baking

—the secret of many a noted cook

THE success of many women famous for their fine cookery is largely due to the fresh-air baking method used in the Estate Gas Range.

This range heats and sterilizes fresh air flowing into the oven itself, while the air from the burners, laden with the fumes of gas combustion, cannot possibly enter it.

The advantages of the Fresh-Air Oven are absolute uniformity, extra capacity, more wholesome foods, less shrinkage, and a saving in gas.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Irregularity with a tendency toward firmness characterized the markets during the past week. The bears started with a show of boldness and attacked values sharply after Judge Gary had addressed the stockholders at the Steel Corporation's annual meeting. They were not sufficiently sure of their position to abstain from covering commitments as the week wore on. With respect to the immediate future, the markets are awaiting publication of the Steel Corporation's earnings and dividend action as next Tuesday's meeting, for the longer pull they are waiting to see what Congress does with the tax and bonus legislation and what the national political convention brings forth. A certain amount of good buying seems to have been brought in by the recent reaction. Despite the mild rallies of the last 10 days, technical positions seem to be stronger.

"Industrial reports indicate that the recession in activity which began a month or six weeks ago has continued in a normal manner. Steel production is down to perhaps 80 per cent of capacity. Railroad traffic is smaller, although the loss is due principally to the great slump in coal production, and although the movement of general merchandise and less than carload freight still holds up well. The late spring has retarded buying of automobiles, but the larger makers are running at high rates and demand is reported to be picking up. The volume of building construction is extraordinarily large. The picture is one of a period of recovery from the effects of a burst of over-production during which the volume of consumption has remained high.

Ease in Money.

"More attention has been given to the depressed condition of the coal business, although its effects on railroad traffic have been apparent for about two months. The unsatisfactory state of affairs, which confines output that only about 60 per cent of normal, and the product selling below the cost of production, is due partly to anticipations of a strike on April 1. Large stocks were accumulated which now hang over the market. Beyond this, however, is the under-development of the industry. It is trite to say that there are too many mines and too many miners; but it is interesting to note the condition has arisen partly through the development of their own mines by the large steel companies, this leaving the independent mines with a narrowing market. Perhaps the present depression will lead to some of the eliminations and consolidations of which the industry is so greatly in need. An economic readjustment is needed.

"Renewed ease in the money market finds expression in 3½ per cent call money and a 4¼ per cent rate for short loans on time. Gold imports again are heavy and continuous, of course, to the supply of loanable funds. Despite the rally in the foreign exchanges, the westward movement of the metal shows no signs of slackening. It is maintained by Britain's necessity for remitting large sums to cover payments on debt to our government; it is likely to continue until European export trade recovers or until large American investments are made in Europe. For the rest of the ease in the money market heavy deliveries which have been made on industrial orders probably are responsible. Payment for these materials has released large sums previously tied up in inventories.

Foreign Developments.

"Developments in the European situation continue to be encouraging. The Dawes plan seems to be genuinely acceptable to the several parties to the reparations dispute. Some changes in details undoubtedly will be made, but the general principles laid down are recognized as just and the chances for a working agreement seem good. President Coolidge's speech shows that our government is anxious to exert its moral influence on the side of a settlement. Under these circumstances the shorts in foreign exchange futures have watched the approach of May 1, which is settlement day for many of them, with much agitation. The closing out of these contracts brought sharp rallies during the past week and further strengthened the exchange position of such countries as France.

"Activity and a fair show of strength continued in the stock market as trading came to an end for the week. Comparative quiet in the railroad group with a larger turnover among the industrials was an accompaniment of a further retreat by the shorts. Short covering, induced by the failure of the market to break under pressure earlier in the week, is at the bottom of the rally. In addition, however, the market is giving evidence of buying here and there of another kind. The result of the day's trading was an advance of a good sized fraction to a point in the market leaders and a sharp run in one or two specialties. Bonds also were unusually active with prices moderately higher.

Exchange Market Strong.

"European exchanges were active and strong in the short session both here and at London. Further indications of an early acceptance on the part of France and Germany and putting into practical effect of the reparations plan helped sentiment. Buying of francs and sterling was vigorous and other rates moved up in sympathy. Sterling rose 2¼ cents to $4.39⅛, while francs rallied 18 points to 6.46 cents and then settled at 6.44½ cents. Shorts in the market apparently were anxious to cover their commitments before the May 1 settlement.

"A decrease of 12.5 millions in surplus reserve brought that item down to 18.6 millions as shown by the weekly statement of the Clearing House. Loans and discounts increased 12.6 millions while time deposits rose 12.2 millions. Circulation was slightly lower."

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange review says:

"Movements in the European exchanges during the past week were easily explained by the changed international conditions resulting from the general acceptance of the Dawes plan for solving the German reparations problem. For a time early in the week there was only a scant supply of the leading exchanges, and general demand from many quarters for various purposes carried sterling partly and other exchanges in part to their highest levels for the year. This movement was followed by a natural reaction on which the gains, extensive as they were, were more than wiped out. Interest was concentrated on both the advances and reactions in French exchange, partly because of the urgent demand that came from the speculative element committed to the short side to cover their contracts. This buying added to the regular commercial requirements carried the rate for French cables up to 6.84 in this market and to 6.90 in London. Finally, doubling the value of the franc since it sold at 3.45 a little over a month ago. From the time these rates were established until the end of the week a reaction was in progress.

"The demand for French exchange was steadily filled by bankers supposed to represent Government agents, carrying the rate down to below 6.30. It was insisted in some quarters that this artificial check was antagonism on the part of the French financiers to a further advance in

$10,000 FUND DRIVE TO SAVE GRANT'S HOME

Movement Instituted on Birthday of General — House Now Unoccupied.

The old brick house at 700 South Fourth street looks like any other house in a tenement district to the casual passerby. Rats—and perhaps a cat or two—have been the only occupants for years. Its front enjoys new decoration each week, thanks to the bill posters.

And yet, undaunted by the advertisements, there is a little, rusty sign on the wall which announces that, in this building, Ulysses S. Grant and Julia Dent were married and resided for some time. And, surely, even the foreigners along South Fourth street must know the Grant referred to was a great General and a President of the United States.

Today being Grant's birthday annversary—he was born in Ohio April 27, 1822—several civic-minded organizations have initiated a movement to raise a fund of $10,000 to be used by the Grant-Dent Memorial Association to restore the old brick building and set it aside as a shrine to the memory of the famous man and his wife. In addition to necessary repairs, it is proposed to install cases such as are now used at Jefferson Memorial to display relics and heirlooms of the Grant and Dent families.

The home is now owned by the Grant-Dent Memorial Association, having been turned over to that organization by its president, John H. Gundlach, who acquired it at aucton several years ago. Gundlach made the presentation in the hope it would be preserved as a historical spot.

Organizations which are co-operating in the $10,000 campaign are the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Eighth District, Federation of Women's Clubs; St. Louis Chapter D. A. R.; M. A. E. McClure Chapter, Daughters of the Confederacy; Tenth Ward Improvement Association, Neighborhood Association, Shoe and Leather Club and the Grant-Dent Memorial Association.

CONTEMPT ACTION AGAINST THREE IN M'KENNA CASE

Witnesses Failed to Appear for Depositions in Hearing as to Hidden Assets of Alton Estate.

PROPERTY SAID TO TOTAL $1,000,000

Mrs. Marie Matthews, Who Is Seeking Evidence, Has Only Until May 13 to File It in West Virginia Court.

Contempt citations will be asked for tomorrow at Edwardsville against three witnesses who failed to appear yesterday, as ordered by the Madison County Circuit Court, to give depositions at Madison in an attempt of Mrs. Marie McKenna Matthews, former Alton social leader, to uncover hidden assets in the estate of her father, C. W. McKenna, who died four years ago in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va. She believes the estate to be in excess of $1,000,000.

The witnesses, Harry B. Matthews, Jr., from whom Mrs. Matthews seeks separate maintenance, and David W. Wycoff, president, and H. E. Bousse, cashier, of the First Trust and Savings Co. of Alton—failed to appear Thursday, when Police Magistrate Henry Connole as notary was to take their depositions. Since Mrs. Matthews has only until May 13 to file her evidence in court in Lewisburg, W. Va., her lawyers got an order for the three witnesses to appear yesterday, but none appeared.

Mrs. Matthews testified yesterday that her father died "very suddenly." He had made a special trip to Alton to have Wycoff protect her share in his estate, she said. She said that Mrs. Retta McKenna, her stepmother, who was named executrix, listed the assets in Probate Court as $30,000, but that Wycoff had told her, after an investigation in several states, that he had found $167,000 and showed her proof of it.

One Question Brought No Objection.

One question in the first 25 minutes of her testimony passed without objection by Joseph B. Uniacke of New York, attorney for Mrs. McKenna. It was the first asked by her lawyer, C. B. Cushing of Covington, Va.—"Are you the plaintiff in this case?"

Uniacke said it was only for the sake of "newspaper notoriety" that she was led to testify that her father's money gave Matthews his start in business, that Mrs. McKenna was a Chicago vocal teacher before she "married money," and especially that she and her husband and she and Wycoff were not now on good terms.

"I submit that defendant's counsel is not a mind reader," Cushing said, and, smiling a little, added, "If he does not see the relevancy of those facts to the case, I shall be glad to explain to him for the record."

A. L. Chamblin, former St. Louis County Justice of the Peace, a principal of the People's International Secret Service, testified to having copied a telephone office record of a 40-minute conversation between Matthews here and Mrs. McKenna in White Sulphur Springs on the evening of April 19, the day the West Virginia court gave permission for the taking of depositions. Mrs. Matthews corroborated this testimony.

Chamblin said Wycoff told him on April 14 that he found considerable assets which did not appear in the inventory of the estate, but that Mrs. Matthews owed him $6500 in that connection, and indicated he was "in a quandary as to whether he would produce the information he had."

Missed Few Chances to Object.

Uniacke's objections continued unabated after he had overlooked one question in the middle of Mrs. Matthews' testimony. He missed hardly another until former Circuit Judge Garesche of Mrs. Matthews' counsel asked him a few. He answered without objection that he had not talked with Bousse or Wycoff, but intended to, and that he had talked with Matthews for an hour, but when Garesche asked what they said he did object and did not answer.

Garesche was sworn and related that a man who said he was William P. Boynton, attorney for the bank, called him by telephone Wednesday and tried to "beg off" on the appearance of Wycoff and Bousse before the notary, upon grounds that the attorney had to be in Edwardsville. He said Boynton mentioned the $6500 bill and said he thought Wycoff ought not be compelled to testify, although he had valuable records. When Garesche took the opposite view, he said, Boynton said that Wycoff could not "come in" and he didn't think court action would compel either of them to come.

Mrs. Matthews' suit is for an accounting by the executrix, her stepmother. The estate is to be equally divided between them under an order given in the West Virginia court April 19. Wycoff's bank originally was the trustee of Mrs. Matthews' share and a defendant of her suit, but another trustee has been appointed.

Lloyd George Praises the Dawes Report; Says Success Depends on Goodwill of Nations Involved

Britain's Former Premier Gives Warning of Possible Hidden Reservations to Apparent General Approval and Discourages Over-Optimism.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE, O. M., M. P.
(Former British Prime Minister.)

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch. (Copyright, 1924.)

LONDON, April 26.

THE report which is the result of the searching examination to which the allied and associated experts have subjected the German assets and prospects is a remarkable document from every point of view. Its thoroughness, its lucidity, its impartiality, its sanity, its breadth of vision, all contribute to make it a memorable state paper. Apart from its political importance, it will have a permanent value as a contribution to the study of international finance. No political economist in future can write a treatise on that subject without reference to the arguments and conclusions of this great report.

It must henceforth be the basis of all further discussion on German reparations. Before entering into a consideration of its probable effects, I feel I am entitled to call the attention of readers of these articles to the fact that the first suggestion of the appointment of such a committee appeared in the third article of this series, written in December, 1922. Discussing the best method of dealing with the problem of reparations, I then wrote:

"How are you to arrive at the exact figure of the annuities Germany can reasonably be expected to pay without creating these intolerable conditions for her people? That is the question—the answer was given in the treaty as signed, by setting up a commission to inquire and determine. That commission has been weakened and its character almost destroyed by the defection of the United States of America." * * * "The only hope of a fair and final decision is to secure the presence of a representative of the United States of America on the adjudicating body, whatever it may be. Is that impossible?" * * * "If America reappears on the arbitrating tribunal, she need not accept the rest of the treaty. Then a fair and enduring settlement would soon ensue, this irritating sore would rapidly heal and the condition of the world would steadily improve."

Hughes' New Haven Speech

The famous speech of Mr. Hughes at New Haven, containing a similar suggestion, was almost contemporaneous. That was, unfortunately, completely ignored. The allied conference met in Paris on Jan. 2, but took no notice of Hughes' proposal. It broke up without making a real effort to reach an agreement and M. Poincare invaded the Ruhr. Then followed months of confusion and exasperation, each of them reducing perceptibly the debtors' capacity to pay. Germany accepted unreservedly the American proposal to refer the question of the sums she was expected to pay to examination by a body of experts and she promised to abide by their decision. The Pope also urged such an inquiry. Some day it may be of interest to examine the reasons why these proposals were rejected with violent disdain throughout the year and then accepted at the end of it.

"I told you so" is the most obnoxious implement of torture in the naggers' arsenal. It should therefore be used sparingly if at all. I feel, however, that I am entitled to indulge in this solitary reference to a revelant piece of counsel, the timely adoption of which would have saved much trouble.

Now for the report. For those who expect large sums of money in the immediate future towards repairing the damage inflicted by the German armies, the report must be a disappointment. The commissioners are emphatically of the opinion that the payment for the current year cannot exceed 1,000,000,000 gold marks. This sum is to include payments in kind and to cover the cost of the armies of occupation and of all the commissioners appointed under the treaty of Versailles. Four-fifths of the sum is to be covered by an international loan. In the year 1922 the German payments on all these accounts considerably exceeded this figure. I have taken some trouble to find out what the payments of Germany under the treaty aggregated in 1922. Taking all payments in kind of every description (including not only coal, dyes, timber, scientific instruments, etc., but substantial amounts collected under the customs recovery act)—taking the payments made in gold to the Reparations Commission and the sums paid directly to the armies of occupation towards supplies Germany paid over 1,400,000,000 gold marks to the allies in 1922.

Now, compare this with the sum which, two years later, becomes payable under the experts' report, which has been accepted by all the allies. For the elaborate reasons they set forth, the experts come to the unanimous conclusion that 1,000,000,000 marks is all that can now be expected of Germany during the first year. Out of that reduced amount, 800,000,000 is to be advanced to Germany by means of an international loan. The 1,400,000,000 gold marks paid in 1922 were found by Germany out of her own resources. In 1924 she is only called upon to find 200,000,000 marks. The rest she borrows. This is the cash result of the Ruhr coup, that was to give Germany the will to pay. The authors of that brilliant idea forgot to inquire into her capacity to pay. They evidently considered that a superfluous detail. That detail has now been furnished by the committee of experts, and they find it so battered and impaired by recent events as to need a long time to recover.

> "If Wise Use Is Made of Opportunity Given, Peace and Goodwill Will Reign in Europe"
> —Lloyd George

THE statesmen of Germany, as well as those of France, Belgium, the United States of America, Italy and Great Britain today seem to be all of one mind. The experts seem to have solved all their differences. The Reparations Commission have not only accepted their recommendations, but are taking steps to operate them. But do they all mean the same thing? Are there no hidden reservations and conditions which, when they are revealed, will disturb this genial serenity? The atmosphere is so clear as to make one feel suspicious."

"Both Dr. Marx and M. Poincare are breathing gently on this report and unless there are cyclonic disturbances in connection with the coming elections, we are in for a spell of good weather. That is all to the good, but we have not yet reached the harvest. And in the uncertain climate of Western Europe, it would be wise not to reckon too confidently on what will happen in the course of the next two or three months."

"The report . . . is a remarkable document from every point of view . . . . It must henceforth be the basis of all further discussion on German reparations."

"For those who expect large sums of money in the immediate future towards repairing the damage inflicted by the German armies, the report must be a disappointment."

"It is not too much to say that the future of Europe depends on the handling of this report. If wise use is made of the opportunity it gives, peace and goodwill will reign in this troubled continent. If the door is slammed, either through frenzy or fumbling, the prospect for this generation is dark."

World Goodwill Necessary

What is the next move? It is not too much to say that the future of Europe depends on the handling of this report. If wise use is made of the opportunity it gives, peace and goodwill will reign in this troubled continent. The door it opens reveals an alluring vista of tranquility, unbroken except by the melody of an incessant hammering on the anvils of industry. If that door is slammed, either through frenzy or fumbling, the prospect for this generation is dark. The scheme is necessarily so complicated that it cannot work except through the goodwill of all the parties concerned. The authors of the report take the same view as to the capacity of Germany to pay reparations as did the framers of the treaty of Versailles. They both came to the conclusion that it cannot be assessed in advance and that it must estimated from time to time, according as Germany prospers. This is an interesting fact which ought to be noted, for it is the best answer to those who claim that a fixed sum ought to have been inserted in the treaty.

But the experts have gone beyond the negotiations of the treaty in one important respect. They have attempted to establish a number of tests by which the capacity can, in

12 World Political Leaders Brought To Ascendency by 5 Years of Peace

MAKERS OF HISTORY SINCE THE VERSAILLES TREATY WAS DRAWN

Poincare Stinnes

BY FERDINAND TUOHY,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World.

ROME, April 26.

THE "peace" has lasted one year longer than the war. As bewildering a period this second span as its forerunner—a nervous wreck of humanity trying to get going again in the old style, seeking to construct some sort of an edifice on the ruin of yesterday, and failing, miserably failing.

Nothing seems to have been settled with any degree of finality, the one great heritage of the war continuing to attract but the scoffing and contempt of the majority. We remain, as the French say, "en pleine crise" with currency gone daft, vast territories rumbling, and neighborly sentiment varying from distrust and animosity to open arming for "all eventualities." But the picture is too familiar to call for further sketching. For four and 60 months it has confronted us, growing ever more chaotic under the brush as our artists fashioned new curves and coloring. My object here is rather to sketch the artists.

Who have ascended the seats of the mighty since Versailles cast its fateful spell over the scene? Who are the men that have come to the surface in succession to the war leaders? It is an interesting study, perhaps instructive, since there can hardly be a surer indication of the way the world is trending than by a gathering or survey of the personalities of those who are at the fore of its affairs.

I recall, five years ago, writing a similar study for this page entitled, "The 12 outstanding figures of the war." Foch, Wilson, Hindenburg, the Kaiser, Lloyd George, Venizelos, D'Annunzio, Clemenceau, the Grand Duke Nicholas, Lenin, Northcliffe and Albert of Belgium. To choose 12 men in a drama of hundreds of millions was to set a standard of extraordinary exclusiveness, yet the war was so very clear-cut an affair side by side with this terrible mess, the "peace," that selection was a simpler task; those attaining the peaks stood out in bolder silhouette than the figures who have come after, to obstruct, construct, distrust. But let us first take farewell of that gallery of ghosts set down above. For that, too enlightens.

Three have passed on, Northcliffe, Wilson and Lenin, the first spent by the excess of his temperament, the other balked and disappointed; the two former discredited, the Russian prevailing to the end. Of the living, Clemenceau, Venizelos, the Kaiser and Lloyd George, have been rejected even by their own countrymen. Of the others, Nicholas lives at Cannes, a cypher; Hindenburg has retired to his beer garden, an honored old soul. Albert is back to kingly estate, a rather more than ordinary "royal"; D'Annunzio has sunk into an infirm hermit, receding before an incoming giant, and Foch still struts the stage, shadow-like. Such were the men who soared in the conflict or laid the foundation stones of what was to be the new order.

Now to scout around for those who have carried on, for the 12 outstanding figures of the "peace" (and here let me define "outstanding" as a fresh force appearing on the scene with fresh creative intent and effort). This permits me to omit the only great war figure who deserves inclusion still—Lenin—since it can hardly be said of him that since 1919, though successfully combating encircling assaults, he materially added to his doctrine of 1917.

The arbitrary nomination of 12 new men as greatest history-makers of the period is bound to invite disagreement. For instance, one is unable to find room for Lord Curzon who straddled European policy for years. Nor for little Ismet, who played with them at Lausanne. Nor for Benes, creator of the Little Entente. Nor for Sir John Bradbury, sole bulwark against the French on the Reparations Commission. Nor for that brain of many Marshals in the war, Von Seeckt, of whom one is persuaded lots more will be heard. Excluded, too, the wily Tchitcherin of Genoa fame; the successful President Masaryk ruling the first new state to find its feet; the lamented Rathenau who was not allowed the stage long enough to show his true Europeanism, and Smuts and Jasper and Ford and Borah and Cuno and Horthy and Branting and Pius IX and Primo de Rivera.

An analysis of the survivors at once develops certain interesting points. As in the war period no women of great dimension have emerged. The Queen of Rumania who has tied up the Balkans more or less politically by a system of clever marriages, and Lady Astor, with Mmes. Kemal and Zaglul, who have both helped their husbands considerably, are a long way behind the caliber of our male dramatis personae. Of the latter, only two were prominent five years ago—most of them had not then been even heard of. Their average age works out at 50, as against 58 with the war leaders. Three are open dictators. One is spoken of a Saint. Another is a priest. Two are ardent League of Nations apostles. Another is a king of industry, another an economist. A sober and severe lawyer, one of the most inspiring young figures of the century, and a wise old man from the East complete our mixed grill.

1. CECIL.

Viscount Cecil accepted the mantle of Woodrow Wilson, most burdensome of garments. For five years he has fought a thankless, uphill battle for the League of Nations. More than any man he is today to be praised, derided or cursed, as the future may dictate, that this sole growth from 8,000,000 graves is still a living organism. Health, too, he has given—today he is a broken man, his nervous system consumed. It is almost enough to say of Cecil's work that it has drawn upon its author the antagonism of the Rothermere press.

When this disinterested son of a former Premier was combating Mussolini's Corfu outrage last September and challenging the com-

WHO THESE OUTSTANDING FIGURES ARE AND WHY

LORD ROBERT CECIL—British statesman, son of the third Marquis of Salisbury, was parliamentary Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs during the war years 1915-1916. In 1918 he became Minister of Blockade and Assistant Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

MICHAEL COLLINS—Sinn Fein leader; rose from obscurity between 1916 and 1918, when he became a member of the Dail Eireann. When he was killed from ambush on Aug. 22, 1922, he was Minister of Finance in the Dail Cabinet and Commander-in-Chief of the Irish National Army.

MAHATMA GANDHI—The inspiration of the idea of "passive resistance" to British control in India and the idolized leader of millions of Hindoos in that movement. He has done more than any other individual to thwart the imperial exploitation of his country.

CHARLES E. HUGHES—Secretary of State in the Cabinets of Presidents Harding and Coolidge. Has been Governor of New York State for two terms; Associate Justice in the United States Supreme Court, unsuccessful candidate for the presidency in 1916, and guiding spirit, as "Commissioner Plenipotentiary," of the international conference on the limitation of armaments at Washington in 1921.

MUSTAPHA KEMAL PASHA—Beginning as a military leader of the Young Turks, distinguished himself at Gallipoli and later organized the Nationalist Army, as the commander of which he put himself at the head of the Nationalist Government of Angora, where he has ruled with absolute power.

JOHN MAYNARD KEYNES—Britisher, whose books, "The Economic Consequence of the Peace" (1919) and "A Revision of the Treaty" (1922) caused sensations. He was principal representative of the Treasury at the Paris peace conference, and deputy for the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the Supreme Economic Council in 1919.

RAMSAY MACDONALD—England's first Labor Prime Minister. Has been chairman of the Parliamentary Labor party and leader of His Majesty's opposition since 1922. Educated at a boarding school, he became secretary to the Labor party in 1900, and rapidly rose to leadership.

BENITO MUSSOLINI—Two years ago led his "black shirt" Fascist army on Rome and dramatically established himself as Dictator-Premier of Italy. Since then he has ruled with an iron fist, compelling work and obedience to his autocratic regime.

RAYMOND POINCARE—Now Premier of the French Government; has since 1912 been the leader of the most aggressive force in the international policies of his nation. He was President of the Republic from 1913 to 1920.

MGR. IGNAZ K. SEIPEL—Is the first Catholic priest ever to head the Government of Austria. For years he was the virtual leader of the "Christian Socialists" party, while professor of theology of the Vienna University. He was appointed Federal Chancellor in May, 1922.

HUGO STINNES—German industrial magnate; beginning in 1890, with a small coal business, he rapidly accumulated the fortune of a multimillionaire, controlling mines, industries and 40 newspapers. Early in the war he was retained as a governmental expert on production, and was elected to the Reichstag in 1920. His influence was tremendous until his death, on April 10 of this year

SAID ZAGHLOUL PASHA—Egyptian Nationalist leader and agitator for independence from Great Britain. He has been vice president of the Legislative Assembly and Minister of Justice. After outbreaks in Cairo and Alexandria in 1921, he was banished and imprisoned at Gibraltar, but released in March, 1923.

petency of the conference of Ambassadors to intervene, the Daily Mail and company barked and bit until Baldwin, running England from Aix les Bains, was constrained to have Cecil over and so tie the latter's hands that the Ambassadors were subsequently able to allot Mussolini his £2,000,000 of flesh. I remember visiting Cecil at the Metropole, Geneva, next day.

"If we get up a memorial service here for the 15 League of Nations orphans killed in the bombardment of Corfu, will you attend?" I ventured. Cecil's eyes lit up for a second then: "Come, let's get to business. What is it you require of me?" And we got onto the treaty of mutual defense, that latest of Cecil's activities. It did one good to see Cecil, day in and day out quoting from the covenant of the league last September and demolishing the arguments of his opponents one by one. I have since seen one other so quoting from rejected document, but the difference between Poincare and Cecil is that one is of 1914 and the other belongs to the future. If one may criticise this crusader and firm believer in a saner posterity, it is that he wants to do too much now. Events are showing more and more that the doctrine of slow, continuous pressure is the thing. With overweening vanity the Big Four chiseled the finished relief, patted each other on the back and went off home to the cheers of the multitude. Now the business has got to be done all over again.

2. COLLINS.

Michael Collins changed the history of England in its relationship to the world and more particularly to the remainder of the British empire and to the United States. Some will say, "Yes, but Griffith was the brain," or "What about De Valera?" Yet I question if ever the treaty creating that refreshingly free Irish state would have reached the council board without the vision and enthusiasm of Collins, who should remain enshrined in the hearts of the Irish long after his colleagues are but a memory. That the continued occupation of Ireland by a foreign race after England's entry into the war in defense of the independence of a small nation nearer to her shores than Ireland and twice as numerous in population, was fast poisoning Anglo-American relations and might quite conceivably have ultimately contributed to war is ancient history; what is not so well known is Collins' reasoning over the situation. It is wrong to say he sacrificed the republic. What he once told the writer in Dublin was this: "Let's first put ourselves on an equality with Canada and Australia and try this dominion home rule out. If we like it we'll keep it. If we don't * * * Now, tell me: Supposing the Canadians or Australians decide to secede would the English go off shooting guns after them? Then why in h—— should they come over and shoot us if we want to secede?" And he added, "The Canadians and Australians wouldn't let them." Collins was statesman as well as fearless soldier and joyous quaffer of the bowl that cheers, greatest Irishman of his time and one who by the combination of a magnetic

The Immigration Problem.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE immigration problem must be solved with regard for the future America as well as the America of today. Time was when the earth held but a mere handful of the race, abundantly supplied with the necessities of life by the luxuriant valleys of rivers in the East. The people multiplied until Italy and Gaul became their coveted land of promise, and, breaking from the irksome bondage of an overpopulated land, they streamed out to conquer until they enveloped the known world to the western shores of Britain. Africa, North and South America were next invaded, and today, 200 years after America's settlement was begun, we feel our liberty more and more constricted by swiftly increasing humanity. Europe has belched from her crowded lands a population of 110,000,000 people to wring sustenance from the soil of the United States, and swarming millions to Canada, Mexico, Africa and South America, yet the pangs of her burden are not lessened.

Nations have outlawed armed conquest, but in its stead has been launched what must eventually accomplish the same result—the peaceful conquest by emigration. A slow but sure fusion of peoples is going forward. A total fusion of all the peoples of earth is the ultimate goal toward which we are wandering. All individual peoples and nations must be destroyed by their own expansions, and that product in turn destroyed by the same cause. Witness the conglomerations of France and Spain, of South America, and, above all, our own continent. The eyes of the world are turned unbelonging toward our place in the sun.

For years we have had a law restricting immigration, and the quota has been eagerly filled. Yes, and hundreds of thousands have slunk across our borders in defiance of that law—in defiance of our laws against race, and are maintaining themselves within our borders and against our expressed wishes. Shall not anybody say what it will assimilate? Then why not the nation?

Our revolt at overpopulation is finding expression in the idea of birth control, but this is a false step, for we restrict the good material we use in the national structure and continue unabated to assimilate a more doubtful foreign element. The Commissioner-General of Immigration and border inspectors say that smuggling of forbidden foreigners has become a greater problem than smuggling of narcotics and all other foreign goods; that Canadian and American border guards are unable to control the situation; that the Mexican border has seen two concerted efforts by Japanese to enter our country; that Cuba has received 30,000 of the yellow race in the last two or three years, who make no effort to find employment and are being secretly smuggled into Florida. The situation in California is evident to the entire nation. A bill has been passed to provide $1,200,000 for more border guards, and the time will come when an armed guard must be stationed every hundred yards along our borders, and greater precautions taken on the coasts.

Had the law not been broken there would not be a Mongolian in the country, but they have penetrated to its very heart and we find hundreds in the City of St. Louis. Judge to what extent this violation of our national right has been carried by people of our own color!

Not by birth control, but by stopping immigration, shall we mitigate the evil of over-population and perpetuate our race.

CHAS. J. SCHUSTER.

A Young Mother's Testimony.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

CONCERNING the article about birth control: R. F. Bellock, you are wrong. The welfare of the race can be viewed from several angles. Yes; but you forgot one, perhaps not thought important by you—the health of the mother who does not use caution in such matters. We women are not made out of iron that we can endure everything, as your letter would indicate. If we do not begin to use a little common sense there will be more nervous breakdowns of mothers than there are now, and after one you are no good for anything, let alone raising a family of little ones. I know. I have had one for two years and am broken in health in my middle twenties. I have had four children in four years. This is the cause of it all.

Birth control is no evil if used when actually needed in regard to the future health of the mother. If our State is so agnoids to class birth control as evil and immoral, also some of its leading citizens, let them furnish decent houses and wages to the parents who have to struggle on raising such a family. How many landlords want children on their premises? None. Only the places that aren't fit to live in allow children. I have been trying to find a place with a yard for the children; they are only eligible to adults—"no children"—and they are the ones most against birth control, and shun parents of children as if they had the plague. I am for it heart and soul, and my heart tells me I will be doing right if I raise the children I have now properly as well as I can.

A MOTHER.

THE PARTING OF THE WAYS.

President Coolidge cannot much longer postpone a decision upon which his political hopes for the future may hang. However painful either alternative may be for him, he will soon have to make a choice between that wing of his party represented by the Republican National Committee and the wing represented by such men as Senators Borah and Norris, whom the other faction is endeavoring to read out of the party. In the case of Norris, this excommunication already has been pronounced. In the case of Borah, it is said to await only that time when the committee leaders become convinced that he does not intend to "smear" the Democratic Senator Wheeler, whose indictment, now admitted to have been obtained by the National Committee, is being investigated by a committee of which Borah is chairman.

In recent months the National Committee, or its authorized officials, have been discovered in some strange postures. They have been revealed collecting large sums of money from men who had obtained rich concessions from a Republican administration. They have been disclosed in the act of furnishing aid and comfort to discredited public officials whose conduct was under investigation. They have been uncovered hounding such public servants as Senator Walsh, because of his invaluable work in the oil inquiry and in the case of his colleague, Wheeler, actually brought about an indictment. But in all this work of open and furtive malice and obstruction, they have done nothing so preposterous as to calculate that a sense of party allegiance would prompt Senator Borah to join in any plan to "railroad" a Democratic Senator.

Borah, according to Washington advices, will shortly lay the entire situation before the President, and demand a showdown between himself and the agents and officials of the National Committee. He is expected to say that if he is to be harassed, sniped at, and eventually denounced as a party traitor solely because he declines to become a party to a sordid, base scheme to defame a too-active member of the opposition, then he proposes to anticipate his judges, and do a little reading on his own account, from the floor of the Senate. It is a thoroughly commendable intention, and will have the approval of every decent voter in the Republican party—which, of course, constitutes all the party except the professionally political part of it.

Obviously, the President can be expected to take only one course. The honesty of such men as Borah and Norris is the greatest and, many are beginning to suspect, the only element of popular strength remaining in the party. That Mr. Coolidge can repudiate their high-minded conduct in favor of the activities of such characters as Blair Coan and George Lockwood, is incomprehensible. Nevertheless, these men and their cronies have control of the actual machinery of the Republican party. John T. Adams, faithful defender of Daugherty, employer of Coan and Lockwood, and author of the venomous assaults upon Walsh, Wheeler and every other Senator who has endeavored to purge the public service of corruption and gross waste, remains at the helm.

The President, as soon as his leadership of his party became assured, should have cleaned the party house. But he has been as cautious and procrastinating in the matter of getting undesirables out of the National Committee Headquarters as he has been in getting them out of the Government departments. Coan remains in the National Committee Headquarters after publicly and impudently admitting that he went to Montana to "dig up something on Wheeler." W. J. Burns also remains at the head of the Bureau of Investigation after admitting that he sent special agents and Government spies out there for the same purpose. Daugherty is gone, but the department is full of the sort of people with whom he surrounded himself.

If Senator Borah, through a demonstration of the independence and spirit which he undoubtedly possesses but too seldom displays, forces President Coolidge to make a decisive choice between good and evil, between political honesty and political expediency of a rarely malodorous sort, he will not only have done himself and the President a conspicuous service but he will have infused new life into his now rapidly degenerating party.

Emma Goldman is conducting a campaign in Germany against the soviet government. You never can tell where Harry Daugherty may pick up an ally.

THE ORIOLE OF THE OZARKS.

Gov. Hyde of Missouri appeared in person before the Republicans of Cleveland the other night and demonstrated to the weary and heavy-laden how much stranger fiction is than truth, how much lovelier and more comforting the lyric is than logic.

Turning rhetorically to that City of Dreadful Night (for that is what Washington has become to so many of the grand old partisans) our Governor found no noisome alleys, no forbidding walls behind which ghastly secrets lay, no gardens of Proserpina with poppies nodding death. Scanning the capitolian plat the Governor of Missouri beheld parterres of lotus and of palm and bright, inviting paths of asphodel. Let there be no anxiety from a political viewpoint, he exclaimed. Politically, the Republican party has emerged from the furnace of unscrupulous Democratic wrath unblistered and unscarred—at least comparatively. In the magical equilibrium of Gov. Hyde's processes Daniels balances Denby, McAdoo offsets Fall, and Gregory and Daugherty are equals in glory or transgression, as the case may be. Swinging gallantly on, Missouri's Governor achieved the radiant climax that the Democrats were the original rascals, the Republicans awkward imitators.

It wasn't a speech that the Governor of Missouri delivered in Cleveland; it was an aria—a song of joyous thanksgiving from an overflowing heart. It was a poet those Republicans of Ohio listened to, not a politician. It was not the Governor of Missouri that entranced them—it was the oriole of the Ozarks.

THE MUSCLE SHOALS SCANDAL.

The get-rich-quicksters have discovered a new Eldorado. Oil is passe. Muscle Shoals is now the vogue—Muscle Shoals and Henry Ford. Trading on the magic of the Ford name real estate boomers, operating in various parts of the country, are spreading the net and seining the suckers.

In the judgment of Senator Norris of Nebraska, who has gathered the evidence, hundreds of persons have already invested in lots near Muscle Shoals, convinced by the extravagant promises of the fakers that this is the short road to affluence.

Moreover, the fakers are apparently being unwittingly assisted by the action of the American Farm Federation Bureau, which is circularizing the rural sections with statements to the effect that Ford will produce cheap fertilizer and that the Fertilizer Trust and Wall Street are conspiring to prevent Ford from getting the property. The object of this propaganda, of course, is to create sentiment among the farmers in favor of the Ford offer and thus stampede Congress into granting the concession without examining it. That the propaganda has been effective in creating such sentiment is obvious, while the investors in lots naturally are violent champions of the Ford proposal.

The exposure of both schemes, neither of which has Mr. Ford's sanction, makes it incumbent upon the Senate to proceed cautiously before acting favorably on the bill which the House passed hurriedly and without consideration. Further, Senator Norris raised a pertinent question by his observation that the real estate boomers ought to be prosecuted for using the mails to defraud. Here is an opportunity for Attorney-General Stone to demonstrate that the Department of Justice is again functioning.

THE TOURIST CAMP PROBLEM.

Kansas cities are getting "fed up" on maintaining free camps for the thousands of motor tourists that traverse the State annually. No inconvenience was felt when the State first began entertaining tourists from far and wide. Merchants were pleased with the prospect of trade from the passing wayfarers. Every town aspired to loom large and to be remembered favorably by the travelers.

Now mercantile opinion holds that the trade of the tourists is inconsiderable. The passing machines have multiplied several hundred per cent, and the chief value of the camps has come to be their protection of public health by providing sanitary facilities. A case is cited in which one traveler left in his trail 31 cases of typhoid.

The disposition of the League of Kansas Municipalities is to improve the camps, provide necessary service and charge a small fee to cover cost of entertainment. This would seem to be the reasonable solution. Touring will increase. It is a form of diversion beneficial to the individual and also to the public if not made a burden. Tourists would prefer good facilities at a fee rather than suffer discomfort and risk of health.

THIM DAYS IS GONE.

FROM Melsheimer's down near the levee
To Cicardi's out Delmar way,
From the "Broken Heart" and "Von der Ahe's"
And the "Golden Lion Caffay," O'ive searched 'till me legs are weary
An' the heart widin me is lead;
Fer the most av thim's gone and forgotten,
While the ould crowd is vanished or dead.
Say, it makes me t'roat swell to burstin',
While the tears wet me cheeks like rain
Fer the ould times are gone foriver,
An' only me memories remain.

Ah, where is the steamer Spread Eagle,
The Bell of the Bends, an' the rest?
The "Wm. McChesney Jr."—
Have they steamed to the land av the blest?
Where's the ould racetrack at the Fairgrounds?
Where's "Faust's" and Havlin's show?
What's become av "Hell's Half Acre"?
—Ah, divil a bit do OI know.
There's none av the ould crowd at Tony's,
An' O'ive been to the City Hall.
"Kerry Patch" is full up wid nagurs,
An' OI can't foind the "Hole in the Wall."

Where's ould Mofke Murphy, the wonder,
Thot stayed wit Fitzsimmons four rounds?
An' "Boss Kelly" thot bought out the bleachers
Whin Lowdermilk pitched fer the Browns?
An' where is the chef av the Southern,
An' tell me fer ould toime's sake
Is there annyone left on Sixth street
That can grill ye a Lazarus steak?
An' where's me ould loves an' their laughter,
Where's the lure av the barroom lights?
What's gone wid thim German gardens,
The spell av thim lost summer nights?

Yer near-beer forms clabber widin me
An' sours all me sweet Irish blood.
An' OI dream av the days av the growler
Wit Griesedieck, Stifel an' "Bud."
The days av gin fizzes an' highballs,
Martinis and juleps as well;
Ol'd loike thim back wid their sherries,
Their Rhine wines and muscatel.
Ol'd loike to meet Grogan's bartenders,
Oi knew thim as "Eddie" and "Bob,"
An' they'd credit ye up wid good whisky
As long as yer wolfe held her job.

An' no one remimbers "Headquarters,"
The home av the famous "ould guard."
The hangout av Tim Riley, the "Captain"
An' his b'ys av the Sivinteenth Ward.
'Twas Riley himself thot wad greet me
Wid his handshake an' door open wide,
An' give me the wink as he whispered,
"The boss wants to see ye inside."
Ah! many's the toime whin in trouble
On some charge loike "disturbin' the peace,"
'Twas Riley again who wad free me
By fixin' the Chief av Police.

OI wonder if somewhere beyant here
The ould croud is waitin' for me?
An' whin OI arrive there all weary
They'll welcome me aisy an' free?
An' Riley will holler, "Ah, Jimmie,
Bust open a fresh keg av beer!
Put out the seegars an' the whisky,
Fer now all me ould gang is here.
O'ive fixed it up wid St. Peter—
An' say, OI'm domn glad thot ye died;
Come on in, ye big rummy! Don't stand there—
The boss wants to see ye inside."

RIP VAN WINKLE AWAKES.

RIP VAN WINKLE stirred and sat up. He rubbed his eyes until he was quite sure that someone was watching him, and then asked:

"How long have I slept?"

"Twenty years," answered the bystander.

Rip whistled.

"Twenty years! Then the investigations at Washington must have ended."

"Yes. They ran only 10 years."

"Was anybody ever jailed?"

"Yes. Several investigators were jailed."

"Nobody who stole anything was ever locked up?"

"No."

Rip sighed heavily, as if about to doze off again.

"I knew it," he said, making out as if to go back to rest.

He looked wistfully at the greening earth.

"It's a pretty place," he finally said. "What ever became of Coolidge?"

"He went back to farming in Vermont."

"Was he re-elected?"

"No."

"Did La Follette run?"

"He did."

"That left Coolidge New England, didn't it?"

"Yes—and Utah. You know when there are three candidates the man running last always carries Utah."

Rip nodded. He remembered that.

"Did Ford ever get Muscle Shoals?" he asked.

"No."

"Who did get it?"

"Nobody has it as yet."

"You don't mean that issue is still raging?"

"It is hotter than ever."

"What did Ford do when they refused to let him have it?"

"He reduced his bid, as he always does."

"He will likely get it for nothing in the end."

"It is quite likely."

Rip stretched out again with his head on a stone.

"You can wake me when something is done about it," he said.

REPARTEE AMONG THE DRYS.

(Monroe County, Mo., Appeal.)

Henry Yowell, down at Gose, is spreading the news around about a party of bone-dry women who, he says, thought they had discovered a still along the railroad tracks east of there while out walking one day, until one of them whose husband had once used a silo, recognized the scent that was being wafted to their suspicious nostrils as that of the fermented juices in the silo on the J. L. Rives farm.

The women involved are coming back with the rejoinder that such a mistake was not worse than to go to a banquet and get up for a speech, only to discover that he had absentmindedly worn one black and one brown shoe to the affair, an act which they accuse him of.

Howard Carter, discoverer of the tomb of Tutankhamen, says he has found this inscription upon many ancient tombs:

> Let all those who love life and hate death wish thousands of geese, loaves of bread and beer to my soul.

So it has been known for centuries that the people who want to make life perfect have never loved it.

HOLLAND'S COMPLAINT.

From the New York Times.

HOLLAND has formally called the attention of our State Department to the apparent contradiction between the terms of our shipping law and the treaty of 1852 between Holland and the United States. Section 28 of the shipping law creates a preference in rates for exports in American bottoms, since it requires that the Interstate Commerce Commission should take such action on certification by the Shipping Board that American tonnage is available. The treaty requires, in the opinion of Holland, reciprocal equality of treatment regarding the maritime interests of the nationals of both countries. If Holland should discriminate against our nationals by giving preference to exports in Dutch bottoms, it is probable that we should object. Passing over for the moment the accumulating protests by American traders against the preference, it is interesting to look further into the foreign protests. There is a section of American opinion which resents foreign protests because they are foreign, and which would rally American opinion as though commerce were war. Is an act of a purely economic nature wrong when done by foreigners, and right when done by American governmental agencies? Our shipping law is doing something besides establishing an American marine. If American exports must go in American bottoms, our imports must come in foreign bottoms. Our shipping law starts by offending foreign traders in a manner so flagrant that three Presidents have declined to enforce it for the very reasons now urged by Holland.

VOLSTEADING SHAKSPEARE.

From the Los Angeles Times.

CLUB women in a thriving suburb are about to give a regular performance of Shakspeare's "Twelfth Night," but out of consideration for the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act they have left out the characters of Sir Toby Belch and Sir Andrew Aguecheek. Apparently it is their belief that it would never do to offer this pair of drunken rascals for the contemplation of a virtuous and sober people. It is true that most of the comedy centers about Sir Toby and in the past eminent Shakspearean performers have made it a star part, but that was in the days before prohibition and the tendency of the hour is to cut out all recollection or reference to bibulous times. If the inspiration of these club women extends it may be essential to banish the so-called immortal William from the home. Look what a reformer he made of Sir John Falstaff. Surely authors in these times would care to be associated with that fat and frolicsome scoundrel. It will take an awful lot of editing to bring Shakspeare down to the half-of-one-per-cent permitted by the Volstead act. But it is feared that the residue would not be very palatable to ancient students. Perhaps it would be safer to cut out William altogether. He certainly did not write for prim and immaculate citizenship.

His settlement with England enabled that country to face the world anew freed of a great hypocrisy and disgrace which was preventing her co-operation with others on the lines she is now doing as disinterestedly and usefully as most. Michael Collins, one might say, freed England as much as he freed Ireland. Only the English will never understand that.

The future of a kaleidoscopic race outnumbering the joint populations of the United States, England and France, one might say the future relations of the East to the West, hinge more on Mahatma Gandhi, attorney-turned-holy man, than any other living soul. Gandhi, flap-eared, diminutive ascetic—many called him saint—makes no bones about what he wants to achieve. He proposes to regain India for the Indians, to rescue it from white domination and civilization, above all from the march of Western science. He thinks railroads, telegraphs, manufacturing plants and all the rest of our astonishing nineteenth century invention, a pernicious development. If he desires to recover the spinning of Indian cotton from Lancashire, his native brethren must now spin it on the machine; they must do it by hand. Swaraj Gandhi believes in the simple life of nature far from the maddening machinery and for his Indians that they stand in danger of fatal contamination from English morals, customs and artificial living. Gandhi wants complete home rule and the problem for England is, "Can this ramshackle collection of varying tribes, 200,000,000 steeping in caste and mutual hatred, be welded into the empire as were the Irish?" The next few years will tell—perhaps the revelation will come sooner with the National Assembly openly defying the British by rejecting the budget.

There was a time 20 years ago when Mahatma Gandhi, silk-hatted and with chambers in the inner temple, used to hobnob with London society as the son of an upstate Indian Governor. He even organized an ambulance for the British in South Africa, a visit to which country subsequently on legal work in Pretoria was to be the turning point of his life. On the voidt he saw gross injustice meted out to his fellows, British-Indians, and ever since he has followed one path and one alone, culminating in his incarceration for six years for sedition—preaching passive resistance—on the occasion of the Prince of Wales' bloody progress through India two years ago. Recently they had to let him out, his health undermined. One likes to picture this colored Tolstoyan today squatting in his homespun loincloth near where Madras, looking out across the Southern Pacific, brooding—who knows if when the day comes he can quell the fires he has lit in less saintly bosoms—the whole his majesty of England reads from the throne that "the situation in our Indian empire continues to be a source of anxiety."

4. HUGHES.

It has been difficult to fit the United States into this category. Outstanding figures there have been—Borah, Harvey, Johnson, Ford, Dawes, to name but a few—but this assessment must needs have to do with the "peace" and America wisely or unwisely withdrew from that four years ago. None the less there is one who must be listed. Secretary of State Hughes, by virtue of organizing the Washington disarmament conference and inspiring the experts' inquiry into Germany's capacity to pay, has played a definitely big role in the general drama. When Hughes speaks they are apt to listen over here; which is the test.

A stern, aloof figure, he seems to be following an interventionist policy toward Europe as is practical under the present administration. He surely sees the writing on the wall, that sooner or later there must be active and close cooperation, and his actions denote him to be methodically preparing the way, almost covertly one might say, lest the die-hards rise up. If the reception accorded to the report in the various capitals of the countries chiefly concerned afford any reliable indication, then the weather is distinctly 'improving.' The poisonous winds which have so long delayed the efflorescence of peace are subsiding. Both Dr. Marx and M. That is all to the good, but we have not yet reached the harvest. And in the uncertain climate of Western Europe it would be wise not to reckon too confidently on what will happen in the course of the next two or three months. The statesmen of Germany, as well as those of France, Belgium, the United States of America, Italy and Great Britain today seem to be all of one mind. The experts seem to have solved all the differences. The Reparations Commission have not only accepted their recommendations, but are taking steps to operate them. But do they all mean the same thing? Are there no hidden reservations and conditions which, when they are revealed, will disturb this genial serenity?

The atmosphere is so clear as to make one feel suspicious. Those who have been bred in the mountains are accustomed to the phenomenon of an exceptionally cloudless day when the mountains are so near and clear that you feel that you could almost leap over them in a few bounds. In Wales, that kind of a day used to be known as a "fox," because of its deceitfulness, and the weather observers prepared for a wet and stormy tomorrow. I cannot help putting the question, are we at the beginning of really settled weather, or is it only a 'fox?"

He surely sees the writing on the wall, that sooner or later there must be active and close cooperation, and his actions denote him to be methodically preparing the way, almost covertly one might say, lest the die-hards rise up. His Washington conference, marking an epoch in modern international relations, brought a temporary guarantee of peace, at least to one whole side of the world—no mean achievement in the eyes of those who see in gradual progress toward a given end the one hope of ultimate triumph.

Hughes' mistaken attitude toward Russia is immaterial to this record. Rather should one stress his good judgment in accepting Sir John Bradbury's reiterated assurance that the experts' inquiry would be unlimited.

"I want you American correspondents," stressed Sir John on the crucial evening the committees were conceived, " to say that this inquiry, however hedged in the phrasing, will turn out to be unrestricted and, if America won't, accept my word for it, there's no use proceeding any further." We did so, and (presumably after checking up through official channels) Secretary Hughes responded.

5. KEMAL.

Here is a man. I know nothing more stirring in these recent times than Mustapha Kemal Pasha's single-handed revival of the former Turkish Empire in the face of a world of enemies. Romance, strength, heroism, intellectual power, insight, self-denial, stout heartedness—all are here. Considered. Allenby is in Jerusalem. Gouraud at Aleppo, the King of Hedjaz in Mecca, Feisul in Bagdad, the British on Gallipoli, the allies in Constantinople, the Greeks in Smyrna and Thrace. "Turkey" consists of a desoluate sector in Asia Minor with one town—Angora. With the full weight of conquering Christendom pressing upon him, the unspeakable Turk must take the count this time! I was living in Constantinople in those days and how we used to laugh at raids carried across the Bosphorus by people called Kemalists. One day, lunching in the terrace of the Grand Hotel at beautiful Therapia, I watched a miniature machine gun and rifle battle in progress on the shore opposite, afterwards, collecting wounded and terrified refugees in a rowboat. Presently I asked who these Kemalists were and was airily informed by a British Staff Major: "Oh, there's a jolly old soul called Kemal in Angora, who thinks he's going to go great shakes, reoccupy Constantinople and all that kind of thing, don'tcherknow. We've got his dossier and he put up quite a good show in the war. * * * Organized the defense of Gallipoli among other things."

A jolly old soul called Kemal!

These roving Kemalist bands, marauding by night, were to swell into a victorious army defying the West, thanks to an organizing and strategic ability on the part of their chief surely unrivaled in military history, if we bear in mind the poverty of their equipment and the dispirited condition of his troops, remnant of an ever-diminishing host that had been at war continuously and ingloriously for 11 years. Governing his province with an iron hand, Kemal first held the Greeks, then hurled them headlong into the sea. The British he hemmed in at Ismid and Chanak. Other English in the Holy Land and Mesopotamia and French in Syria he wisely left alone, reckoning that they would not stay there. Following the hasty summoning of the Lausanne conference after Lloyd George had broadcast a call to arms throughout the empire—impulsive act which was to encompass his downfall—indirectly Kemal's work. For eight weary months they wrangled on Lake Geneva, where all the great, Poincare, Mussolini, Curzon, had to journey to meet on an equality Kemal's emissary, Ismet. And the sequel? A triumph for Kemal, who is engaged today, still from his fastness at Angora, which he has never left, as if despising Stamboul, is creating an entirely new, modernized and secularized state. Kemal aims at shaking Turkey from her Oriental lethargy. All his laws indicate this intent. Whether he be wise or not, whether he has not drawn too deeply upon the character and intelligence of his Turks, is in the lap of the gods.

6. KEYNES.

John Maynard Keynes is the man who has the melancholy distinction of being able to say that he was right when all the rest of the world was wrong. Europe was being chopped up by the politicians, quoth he, without the slightest regard for the economic consequences of such truncation. So disgusted was this Oxford don become Lloyd George's principal economic adviser at the peace conference that he quit halfway through to write his famous "Economic Consequences of the Peace," which will surely rank with the greatest of Adam Smith's works. In this he set forth his doctrine, now too familiar to need recapitulation. In brief, how expect Germany or any other country to pay if you confiscated that country's principal source of wealth, such as Silesia or the Saar? Frontiers must be conceived in part according to the wealth that lay in the earth and the laws of reciprocity of production between nations. It is all sadly clear today, with the added factor that redemption of the situation is 10 times more difficult than it would have been five years back. Keynes stressed, too, that the sum demanded of Germany—at Versailles—the mad hatters were actually talking of 400,000,000,000 or 500,000,000,000 gold marks—was fantastical and that even if it were conceivably paid, the allies would suffer economically far more than they gained financially. All of which, and much more, fell upon deaf ears. It is easy to be wise, they say, after the event. Keynes was wise at the event. Little that he then wrote has been disproved; most of his reasoning is being painfully borne out. Latterly, this prophet in the wilderness has peered ahead again. Now he says that in a few years all the gold stored away in the United States and in India will be of little value, that Europe will have grown accustomed to the note system and that people won't take gold, even if it be offered them.

7. MACDONALD.

The rise of Ramsay MacDonald to the Premiership of England is a phenomenon without precedent in the political lore of any land. And the manner of his taking office and the general respect he has won since, leaves anyone familiar with English life—just a gasp. Imagine some seer prophesying only in 1918 that within six years Ramsay MacDonald, cursed and exonerated, would be dining beside the Princes of Wales as the chief commoner of England, well * * *. Yet this has occurred. At the outbreak of war MacDonald, with Burns and Morley and a few other intellectually honest citizens, withdrew from the scene while the Labor Party the Scot had led dashed into the fray. For four years, just as Lloyd George did in the Boer war, MacDonald literally tramped the country trying to get a hearing. He was howled down. Worse! He was called illegitimate. When he desired to go to Stockholm on a peace mission, the Seamans' Union refused to carry him. He narrowly escaped imprisonment under the Defense of the Realm Act. But MacDonald persevered and a year or two ago was readmitted into the Labor party. And now behold the man who so short a term ago was probably more loathed and despised by his own people than the Kaiser, Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary of England. In supreme charge of the empire's destinies beyond the seas as in the peace-making that is to come in Europe. And ex-miners in waiting on His Majesty, and ex-miners' wives as women of the bedchamber to Queen Mary. And ex-miners in cocked hats and knee breeches and swords, and ex-engine drivers in charge of the army and the Dominions. And English society, that hothouse plant nutured through the centuries, retiring into the back while Mrs. This from Wigan and Mrs. That from Glasgow hold court in historic mansions. Confirmed Socialist and pacifist, committed by past utterances, and act, "J. R. M." as he is affectionately styled, has from a crofter's cottage and a Scot-

12 WORLD LEADERS RISE TO ASCENDANCY IN 5 YEARS OF PEACE

9. POINCARE.

The little Lorrainer, principal world figure of the past two years, passed his boyhood in terror on the fringe of Germany's annexation line of 1871. That has governed his whole life, giving him the fear-plus-hatred complex that led him into the Ruhr. Unelastic and distrustful, his is the single track doctrinaire mind of the lawyer grounded on the written parchment and incapable of assimilating the psychology of a situation. The treaty was signed. If you tell him that things are apt to change, that even treaties require overhauling before the logic of events, you may rely on him reading text books for hours on end or straddled precisely across the dead, reiterating what everyone knows. "Comme nous avons suffert!" (How we have suffered!)

No statesman has ever presented his country's case to the world more unfortunately than Raymond Poincare has done. For truly France has a case even as Germany may have a far lesser one. Largely through the fault of others, the United States and England, she has not received reparation and she has not been given security. And she should not be called upon to repay her debts in full because the war was fought on her soil, because she lost more men in a common cause than any of her helpers, because the debt was contracted to hold the line and the money went into the coffers of allies not ready but who benefited no less than she in the general victory.

Had France a Gambetta these times how different the aspect of affairs! The French don't like Poincare—nobody does—but they think him the best available implement of pressure—pressure on the allied and associated powers just as much as on Germany. That's why Poincare is still on top after having depreciated the franc more than 50 per cent, reduced Germany's capacity to pay incalculably, nourished therein a fever of revenge and converted a world of friends into a circle of critics or worse.

Of Poincare the man—he who for 13 years as President or Premier has been the big factor in France—no one will gainsay his courage, industry, patriotism, integrity. But these are not enough. He lacks penetration, vision, imagination, understanding of other peoples' reactions and intentions, nor has the slightest personal charm or magnetism or flair for doing or saying the right thing in the right way. He is cold, dry, bad tempered, obsinate, unadaptable, plodding along and refusing to go back and round a different way, intent lawyerlike on winning every case, be it against Switzerland or Greenland, submerged in detail even to the checking of the petty expenses of his subordinates. Perhaps his greatest fault is lack of vision. I once said to him at the Quai, where he was receiving correspondents: "But Monsieur le President, we all came to your aid in 1914 because France was right. Can't you depend upon us to do so again if Germany ever got threatening?" "Tout cella c'est la theorie," (that is just theory), was the icy comeback. I often thought part of the trouble is that Poincare has no vices. He drinks only water, doesn't smoke, works all his waking hours and leads a blameless domestic existence. People above reproach are somehow always making trouble.

The inclusion of this modern Wolseley may surprise many. And yet it is doubtful if a more picturesque and admiration-compelling figure has emerged from the chaos. Whoever thought of an unknown priest putting a down-and-out people on their feet again. Monsignor Seipel, taking full advantage of the mechanical and moral forces offered by the new order of things has done it. Where others were timorous or contemptuous, he rushed in. Consider what confronted him. A nation that was once Austria now sadly slashed by the wiseacres of Versailles, only the head, Vienna and a strip of territory harboring 6,000,000, remaining. Yet this head has been kept alive minus a body, thanks to Seipel throwing himself upon the mercy and machinery of the League of Nations. In other words, upon the judgment and sense of fair play of public opinion. When he came to the helm, Austria had sunk into a pit of misery unknown by any other war victim. Currency had vanished. Vienna was a city to break the heart, starving and in rags, without hope, her wretched inhabitants almost too weak to scan the horizon any longer, while we danced and pranced elsewhere. Go to Vienna today. Look at these same Viennese. That is why to the exclusion of better known names I have included Monsignor Seipel, who accepted things as they were, however grossly unfair, and who, with a rare intellect and understanding, set about cultivating every conceivable means of bettering them.

11. STINNES.

This sinister character, of course, dominated the German scene—did dominate all along with Wirth and Cuno and Stresemann and the rest, mere marionettes in comparison, that far-sighted business philosopher Rathenau alone challenging. Presumably the world's greatest war profiteer, Hugo Stinnes, by refusing to associate the Westphalian Schwereindustrie were such readjustment as once existed among the German people to pay, must bear a responsibility no less heavy than

MILLIONAIRE'S BED APPRAISED AT 50 CENTS

All Personal Effects of Louis Latzer of Highland, Ill., Valued at $1917.

An idea of the simplicity in which Louis Latzer of Highland, Ill., millionaire president of the Helvetia Milk Condensing Co., lived and died, is shown in papers filed in the Madison County Probate Court at Edwardsville this week. A report of appraisers lists all his household furnishings, chickens, cows, horses and automobiles at $1917.75. His funeral expenses amounted to $2806.40.

Latzer, originally a poor man, amassed a fortune from a method of condensing milk which he and associates devised. He died at his Highland home on March 27 last, without a will, and thus his widow, Elisa, and six children will share the estate, one-third to the widow and the balance to the children. A tentative inventory valued the estate at $2,893,000, this not including large blocks of stock which Latzer had given away during the last 10 years of his life.

With the approval of the administratrix, Miss Lenore Latzer, and the other children, Mrs. Latzer is allowed $50,000 for a year pending probation of the estate. She has elected to retain the $1917.75 worth of property listed above and this amount will be deducted from the $50,000.

The appraisers' report places a value on 49 articles in the house and 11 outside, and includes 60 chickens for $10; one cow, $35; one small safe, $1; piano, $50; beds, 50 cents each, and two automobiles at $800 and $600. Furnishings of the Highland house are valued as follows: Living room, $102; library, $58; kitchen, $20; music room, $73; hall rooms, $20 and $8.50; bedrooms, $8 and $7.50; maid's room, $2.50.

The six children filed an agreement that they are satisfied with the appraisal and with the $50,000 allowance to their mother. The appraisers were three friends of the family—Fred M. Mueller, Louis Koch and Christ J. Hug.

Poincare for what has happened. From Spa onwards, when he brought his fist down on the table in defiance of allied coal demands this black figure with his hand in every pie, banks, newspapers and the like, proceeded on the assumption that Germany had so many friends abroad that she really needn't listen to French demands for reparation.

Lord of the lives of millions of Germans, Stinnes had for 15 months been the principal thorn in the side of the French in the Ruhr. Now parleying with General Degoutte over the Dusseldorff records; now instructing Chancellor Marx what to do; now negotiating in Amsterdam or London. He would say that he was purely a business man engaged in protecting his interests. He was in reality Germany's strong man, the first that country has produced since Hindenburg and if a stronger, sterner hand had not snatched him from the earthly scene, he would have fought to the end any and every scheme under which the Reich may be summoned, via General Dawes, to fulfill her obligations. For he knew that the tide had turned and that he and his kin must primarily be invited to disgorge.

12. ZAGHLOUL.

Here is another who, like Gandhi and Kemal, has proclaimed a truce to the inaction of Western civilization upon Eastern peoples. Zaghloul is neither saint nor soldier but a very learned and haughty old Egyptian immersed in law and politics all his life. Surrounded by followers in a Lyons hotel a year ago (he had just been freed by the English from interment at Gibraltar Zaghloul said to me:

"I am ready to admit that the English revived Egypt by irrigating the land and that the French brought us prosperity in building the Suez Canal, but the nationalist movement is the natural sequel to this beneficial, if interested allen, action. Egypt feels herself strong and alive and is determined to govern herself."

With active nodding of the head Madame Zaghloul added emphasis: "The Egyptian Joan of Arc," when not fighting the cause during her husband's exile, had followed him whenever possible as he was buffeted from pillar to post, even to the extent of settling in the terrible Seychelle Islands in the Red Sea where white women die like flies. Now in the hour of his triumph she stood beaming above him. In a few days Zaghloul was to return to Egypt; in a few months he was to become Prime Minister, in a few more he was to have a puppet King declare the independence of Egypt; to invite Ramsay MacDonald to evacuate not only the land of the Pharoahs but also the Soudan, and more spectacular still, to close the tomb of "Tut," as the leading spirit in the negotiations that will center upon England's clinging to the Soudan (whence one holds Egypt in the hollow of one's hand), and her desire to retain military control of the canal, "jugular vein of the empire."

Egypt, India, Turkey in Asia, Zaghloul, Gandhi, Kemal * * * The rising power of Islam.

Every inch of it is free from swinging doors and other projections. Yet this Cabinet takes no more space in your kitchen than any other cabinet. In addition, the "KlearFront" has the many other exclusive features that have made the Sellers so popular.

Only the Sellers Gives You These 14 Features

1—Telescoping White Porceliron Work Top gives you 42% more porceliron working surface. No gutters or projections of any kind to interfere.
2—Extending Table Drawer Section comes forward with the work table. You can easily reach into the very back of the drawers, even when the table is covered with materials.
3—Automatic Base Shelf Extender almost hands you pots and pans when you want them.
4—Silverware Drawer with removable plush-lined bottom.
5—Automatic Lowering Flour Bin eliminates heavy lifting and treacherous climbing. A little lift swings it back into place when filled.
6—Ant-proof Casters. You fill the special channel with borax and ants and like vermin will not pass it.
7—Non-Sagging Drawers. A simple mechanical device keeps them in position to slide freely at all times.
8—Dovetail construction throughout. The strongest joint used in woodwork.
9—Finished in steamproof and climateproof white satin enamel or in rich oak with oil hand-rubbed finish.
10—Sanitary Glass Drawer Pulls that are easy to keep clean and never tarnish.
11—Gravity Door Catch—no springs to wear out.
12—Roll-Front Curtain rolls up and disappears, leaving worktable free from swinging doors.
13—Dustproof and Mouseproof Invisible Base Top under the porceliron worktable that keeps out the dust.
14—Patented Daily Reminder and Egg Timer.

Doctor's Prescription Amazing Success Overcomes Kidney Ailments and Backache

Thousands Die Yearly Who Ought Not to Die—Kidney Troubles Kill Them. It's Guaranteed. 6-Ounce Bottle, 75c

Daniel G. Carey, M. D.

The small delicate sieves of the kidneys clog up—the poisons that should drain through and pass off, back up and get into the system—this means chronic poisoning and may mean the loss of some loved one.

Not for all of us to look the facts in the face and heed nature's plain danger signals.

The life work of Doctor Daniel G. Carey was the study of diseases of the kidneys and bladder and the famous prescription of roots and herbs known the country over as Dr. Carey's Marshroot Prescription 777 has helped thousands to get well—and stay well.

If you have backache or frequent headaches, if your sleep is disturbed and you get up in the night, if your eyes are puffy and palms moist, cut out this notice, take it to your druggist and say, "This is what I want: Dr. Carey's Marshroot Prescription No. 777." You can always get it in liquid or tablet form at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Keiffer Drug Co. for 75c. Both are equally effective, and if you aren't glad in a week's time that you bought it, just get your money back—that's the way this successful medicine is sold.

HIGHWAY BRIDGE READY SOON

St. Louis-Kansas City Road Will Be Toll-Free.

The Capital Highways Association in Jefferson City announces that the new steel bridge over the Gasconade River at Mt. Sterling will soon be completed, making the cross-state highway south of the Missouri River toll-free from St. Louis to Kansas City.

The route from St. Louis is over the Manchester road through Maplewood to Washington, New Haven, Bay, Mt. Sterling, Linn, Jefferson City, California, Tipton, Sedalia, Warrensburg, Lone Jack and Lee's Summit to Kansas City.

The literature of the Capital Highways Association claims for this route "less mud, less dust and more miles of hard-surfaced road than any other road between St. Louis and Kansas City."

"Put the Kitchen Sink Under the Window"

This bit of advice comes from the National Better Homes Association in Washington, D. C. This arrangement makes it possible for the homemaker to enjoy fresh air and the beauties of nature while engaged in necessary household tasks.

However, the beauties of nature or nothing else will give you much pleasure if you suffer from eyestrain headaches or other annoying symptoms of defective vision. Summer is a trying period for defective eyes.

Have me test your eyes, and if you need glasses, I will furnish them, ground to the precise requirements to correct your particular defect of vision; and my entire charge for testing, lenses, frames and fitting will be extremely reasonable.

THEODORE GARY BACK FOR FIGHT FOR HARD ROADS

Missouri Highway Commissioner Declares Italy's Paved Roads Make Up for High Tax on Autos.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 26.—Theodore Gary, chairman of the Missouri State Highway Commission, who returned yesterday from a tour of all points along both shores of the Mediterranean, will depart for St. Louis tonight to take immediate hold of the preliminary moves for the submission at the fall election of the proposed amendment to the State highway law calling for an increase in automobile license fees and a gasoline tax to give the commission funds necessary to carry out the extensive road building plan already arranged. There is to be a meeting of the commission May 12, when the petitions will be ready.

"While there is opposition to this tax proposition," Gary said to a Post-Dispatch reporter here, "our campaign of education has dissipated much of it. The most convincing argument is that in the payment of even an increased tax, the car owner is saving money, for it has been proven that the upkeep of a car used on dirt roads, as compared with upkeep charged on paved highways, is 3 cents a mile more. That would be $30 on every thousand miles driven.

Good Roads Pay in Italy.

"In Italy the tax on a seven-passenger car is $400 against our $22, and on the Ford type is $400 against our $7. But they get their money's worth in the vastly increased service and the lower upkeep from their well-paved roads. . . . In Italy they pay 50 cents for gasoline, in England 55 cents, but the latter is for the imperial gallon, which contains approximately a quart more than our gallon.

"I was criticised somewhat for not insisting on a special session of the Legislature to arrange for the provision of the needed revenues, but I abandoned the idea because I felt convinced it would be fruitless. I made a thorough poll of both branches of the Legislature, and the 100 letters I received in reply, and the messages I received by telephone or in direct conversation with other members, made it plain the views were so divergent that it would have been impossible to secure a concrete result without executive driving, a pressure I felt Governor Hyde was indisposed to exert."

Impressions of Old World.

Gary, who appears to be in splendid fettle after his tour, was not greatly impressed with the peoples and events with whom and which he came in contact. He wasn't studying roads on this trip, and such observations as he made were merely casual. This was a tour of relaxation and enjoyment, and he says he enjoyed it immensely.

"I learned a lot of things it is well not to do," he said. "But nothing at all that we could copy with any profit. The peoples of the Near East have not changed. Turkey has been the big winner out of the war, and is having a rather free hand with her new Government. In Egypt there is a nationalist spirit and in Palestine, too, but the people over there are unchanged. It has been only under English and French control they have accomplished anything. It was the Western civilization that taught them irrigation, developed their natural resources, prosperity and gave them the means of securing creature comforts for themselves. But it has taught them nothing. What they really want is to revert back to the old ways of life, the old standards of morals. Wherever they can live, as a matter of preference, just as their ancestors lived 5000 years ago."

Drama School Recital.

Mrs. Ferm Weible Hoffman will give the senior recital Friday night at the Perry School of Oratory and Dramatic Art, Euclid and McPherson avenues. She will be assisted by Mrs. Edna Ely Weatherford, pianiste.

FUNERAL OF J. F. QUINLIVAN AT ST. ROCH'S MONDAY

Late Head of Feed Concern Will Be Buried at Calvary Cemetery.

Mr. Quinlivan, who was 62 years old, was born in St. Louis and graduated from St. Louis University. He engaged in the grain and shipping business with his father at the age of 18, and was for many years a member of the Merchants' Exchange. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus.

Quinlivan, of 5604 Waterman avenue, respectively secretary-treasurer and vice president of the firm of which he was the head; and three sisters—Mrs. Margaret Sharkey of the Buckingham Hotel; Mrs. Mary Loftis of 5904 Minerva avenue, and Miss Lillie Quinlivan of 4468 West Pine boulevard.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

PART FOUR — ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 27, 1924. — PAGES 1—12.

Alice Brady in "Zander the Great"—American.

Alice Brady Here Tonight; Tomorrow Ethel Barrymore

"Scrambled Wives" Is Stock Company Offering—Harry Carroll's Revue Heads Orpheum Bill.

ETHEL BARRYMORE, a reigning favorite with St. Louis audiences, and Alice Brady, known both to stage and screen followers, but at present engaged in the spoken drama, will appear in the principal St. Louis theaters this week. Miss Brady opens in "Zander the Great" tonight at the American, and Miss Barrymore, tomorrow night, at the Shubert-Jefferson, in "The Laughing Lady."

"Zander," which, it should perhaps be repeated, is a stage play, not a moving picture, was a striking New York success of last season. It is about a girl and a little boy and a rickety old Ford, and some men, at both ends of a flivver journey from New Jersey to Arizona, who are in the scofflaw class, until the child exercises his regenerating influence on them.

"Continuously exciting and amusing" and "distinctly a popular play, but also a good one," were phrases which Heywood Broun of the New York World used in describing "Zander the Great."

"Deft and Sparkling."

"The Laughing Lady" adventures upon higher social levels—the best society in England, in fact. The play, by Alfred Sutro, presents Miss Barrymore as Lady Marjorie Colladine, just divorced, who infatuates the lawyer who has handled her most unfairly in the divorce hearing, and has won the decree for Sir Hector Colladine. Lady Marjorie, the lawyer's wife and the repentant Sir Hector figure in the subsequent adjustments.

"An exceedingly deft and sparkling comedy," wrote the New York reviewer previously quoted, of "The Laughing Lady." The play, he added, falls entirely within Miss Barrymore's range, and she "comes up smiling."

Beyond this week, the Jefferson Theater has not lifted the veil upon its plans; but the American makes no announcement for next week, awaiting Monday night, May 5, that looks most attractive. It is Otis Skinner in "Sancho Panza," a spectacular comedy production based on episodes in "Don Quixote." It is declared to be Skinner's most notable production since "Kismet."

They're Not Hard-Boiled.

"Scrambled Wives" is the bill offered by the Woodward Players at the Empress Theater. It is a New York comedy success, which has not been seen here. A week-end party, in which a divorcee and her again-married husband figure, is pictured. Hazel Whitmore has the role of the divorcee, and Alexis Luce that of her suitor at the house party.

Harry Carroll's revue, entitled "Everything Will Be All Right," headlines the Orpheum Theater's bill for today and this week. Linda, a youthful dancer, is figured. Jack Patton and Loretta Marks present a spectacle, "Our Home Sweet Home," and Victor Moore and Emma Littlefield are back in their comedy bit, "Change Your Act or Back to the Woods." They have not retired to the forest, but are said to have altered their performance in some respects. Four other acts are shown.

The Liberty Music Hall, on Delmar boulevard west of Grand, reports a large attendance in its first week, and will begin its second week today with continuous performances of a show entitled "Naughty Marie." Jessie Huston, Fred Palmer, Curt Jones and Mack Linn are leading entertainers of this company, and there is a chorus of 24 girls. The feature picture is "The Man Between." Except on Saturdays and Sundays, the performances at the Liberty are at 2, 7 and 9 p. m.

Other Vaudeville.

Karyl Norman in "The Tuneful Song Shop" heads today's bill at the Rialto Theater. At the Grand Opera House Ben Marks & Co. will be seen in "China," as the chief item of the bill. The Columbia bill will be led by the Alaskans, in "Sports of the North," with the photoplay, "The Woman in Chains."

Other Vaudeville.

Ben Marks, assisted by Ethel Pick, Elsie Travers, Marie St. George, Shep Waldman and Ernest St. George, in "China," headlines the program at the Grand Opera House. The bill also includes the Jack De Sylvia Revue, with De Sylvia, the Spayd Sisters, Fayna Rodman and Tillie Solon; George Armstrong, with songs and a monologue; and William Sisto as the "Italian Stateman in His First Speech."

Karyl Norman in "The Tuneful Song Shop," heads the bill at the Rialto Theater, and the Columbia will feature the Alaskans, in "Sports of the North," with the photoplay, "The Woman in Chains."

Pat O'Malley's mail has been flooded with suggestions for a name for his brand-new baby daughter ever since news of her birth was published. "Nora" is an overwhelming favorite, with "Kathleen" next in popularity.

Tom Santschi has been signed to play the important role of Capt. Dynes in Willard Mack's original story for Jackie Coogan, "Little Robinson Crusoe." Santschi is one of Hollywood's veteran screen performers and was a leader in the vanguard of stage folk who "crusaded" to Hollywood many years ago to cast their lot with the motion picture.

Choice of the player for the title role of "Peter Pan" will not be restricted to persons under contract to Paramount. More than a dozen candidates are under consideration.

"Linda," with Harry Carroll's Revue—Orpheum.

Susie Grabs the Strings Away From Bunty

LONDON, April 26.

GRAHAM MOFFAT is still keeping the old strings busy. First, it was "Bunty Pulls the Strings," which has had more than a dozen years of popularity. "Bunty" has just been withdrawn at the Garrick, to make room for Mr. Moffat's new play, "Susie Knots the Strings," with the author and his wife in the cast. The Times says of it:

"An innocent story of Kirkentilloch and Lintiehaugh and the loves of their inhabitants, told with more consideration for the humor of Scottish villages in days when Queen Victoria was young than for the probabilities of human affections.

"Mr Moffat has a wonderfully arbitrary way of making matrimonial arrangements for his puppets, but once we have become accustomed to this and have learned not to be surprised when any couple disappears from the stage to walk 'up the burn' together, Lintiehaugh becomes a pleasant place to live in for an hour or two.

"Nell and Betsy, standing in wash-tubs to conduct a vigorously pedestrian laundry with their bare feet; Bunty Biggar, in the flounced pantalettes which were our grandmothers' grace and affliction when they were little girls; the elders of the kirk returning from a funeral—all these are part of the period decoration. Wull Tod, the cobbler, who was commissioned to compose secular rhymes in substitution for the Psalms at week-day choir practice, may, for all we know, be part of the period too. For the sake of our ancestors we hope so, for his rhymes—though they would probably sound lame enough in cold repetition—are good fun on the lips of the choristers of Lintiehaugh.

"Mr. Moffat is a kindly pedlar who does his best to smooth the course of his Minister's love. He might have spared his pains, for the Minister, a hearty fellow (Mr. David Clyde), being disappointed of his lady, was embracing her daughter in less than five minutes. But that is Mr. Moffat's way with lovers, and no one was seriously the worse for it except the Minister's housekeeper, "Susie, played by Mrs. Moffat with high spirits and unfailing good humor."

"Collusion."

IN "Collusion," a new play by J. E. Harold Terry, the English wife's usual letter, couched at the solicitor's dictation in the most affectionate terms, and ending "Come back, Bill, dear," fails of its intended effect as a preliminary to divorce, because Bill, dear, does come back. He comes back at the eleventh hour, while his wife is at a dance, and with Dutch courage derived from some extra glasses of the club old brandy, confronts the lady on her return. The fire is out, the night cold, and in the end the lady capitulates.

A tipsy scene for the husband, which would mean swift dismster if clumsily handled, is, as played by Hugh Wakefield, irresistibly droll. Arrayed in a miscellaneous assortment of his wife's daintiest lingerie, and oscillating between absurd frivolity and still more absurd solemnity, the actor not only dominates the lady but keeps the house in convulsions of laughter. Another ingredient, less important, is the lady herself, Miss Iris Hoey, under the most bewitching of bonnets de nuit.

The stage setting arranged for the theater scene in "The White Moth," which Maurice Tourneur is directing for First National, can boast of having the largest rose ever used in motion pictures. And not only that but the heaviest. It is 20 feet in height and weighs just a little under a ton. It is perfect in formation although made entirely of metal.

Mme. Medea Radzina, formerly of the Moscow Russian Art Theater, who recently made her screen debut in Frank Lloyd's production of "The Sea Hawk," by Sabatini, has been cast for the prominent part of Sonya Malisoff, a Russian vampire, in William de Mille's "Bedroom Window."

Ethel Barrymore in "The Laughing Lady"—Shubert-Jefferson.

Claire Windsor in "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model"—Kings.

Lillian Gish and Donald Colman in "The White Sister"—Delmonte and Rivoli.

Jobyna Ralston and Harold Lloyd in "Girl Shy"—Missouri.

May McAvoy and Richard Barthelmess in "The Enchanted Cottage"—Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol.

What They Are DOING IN Movie Studios

To Conway Tearle goes the distinction of being the first movie star to incorporate himself. Future business transactions of Mr. Tearle will be performed under the corporation name of Conway Tearle, Inc. With himself as president are associated Adele Rowland, his wife, as treasurer, and Morris J. Herbert, attorney to the popular star, as secretary. The three comprise the stockholders of the corporation. All earnings of Mr. Tearle both as an actor and as a result of investments will be paid in the corporation, the star drawing a weekly salary from the company. The arrangement will relieve Tearle from all business matters and enable him to devote his entire time to acting.

Arrangements have been officially closed by Hodkinson for the distribution of "Barbara Frietchie," which has been put into production by The Regal Pictures, Inc., at the Thos. H. Ince Studio with Florence Vidor in the stellar role.

Picture goers will soon see the screen version of the phenomenally popular opera, "Maytime," which is now in its seventh year of stage presentation. The leading role, originally played on the stage by Peggy Wood, has been given to Ethel Shannon. William Norris, creator of the role of Matthew in the first New York company, plays the same character in the picture. In the supporting cast are Clara Bow, Harrison Ford, Wallace MacDonald, Josef Swickard, Betty Francisco, Robert McKim and Netta Westcott.

Helene Chadwick has signed a contract with Whiteman Bennett to play the leading role in "Divorced in Name Only," which will be produced in New York.

Lloyd's "Girl Shy," "Enchanted Cottage" Featured in Films

Picture Version of "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model" Also Among the Local Offerings—"White Sister" Goes On at Popular Prices.

THE Missouri Theater this week presents Harold Lloyd in his latest super-feature comedy, "Girl Shy." Lloyd portrays a bashful country boy who is shy of girls, but has aspirations to completely dominate them. He becomes acquainted with a city girl who makes him forget about his shyness. In fact he wins her so completely that he decides to write a book concerning the secrets of making love. When the book is completed he calls it "By One Who Knows, and Knows and Knows." It is sent to the publishers, but is promptly rejected. His visions are shattered. He jilts the girl, not wanting to tell her of his failure. The girl, broken hearted, later becomes engaged to another and the boy, downcast, returns to the little country town. When everything seems lost and the day of her marriage rolls around, the mail arrives with the announcement that his book is accepted and will be published under the title of "The Boob's Diary." He also discovers that the bridegroom is a bogus count and he resolves to rescue and rewin the girl he loves. He starts on a wild chase to arrive before the hour of her marriage and presses into action every known kind of vehicle.

On the stage Cliff Wassall and his Varsity Club Orchestra of Hotel Coronado give a program of the latest fox trots.

Richard Barthelmess' latest success, "The Enchanted Cottage," a First National picturization of the play by Arthur Wing Pinero, is featured at the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters. May McAvoy has the leading feminine role.

"The Enchanted Cottage" is a philosophical romance in which Pinero, noted English dramatist, used the theme that people have two souls—one to face the world with and one to show to the man or woman they love. It is a version of the "love is blind" theory, as the principal characters, shunned by the rest of the world, find each other beautiful and enjoy great peace and happiness in their cottage.

The Oriole Orchestra remains as the stage feature at the Grand Central Theater. It introduces an entirely new program of popular selections.

The last half of the week the West End Lyric will have Rupert Hughes' drama of divorce, "Reno." The cast includes Lew Cody, George Walsh, Carmel Myers and Helene Chadwick.

The picturization of Owen Davis' popular old melodrama, "Nellie, the Beautiful Cloak Model," is the feature attraction at the Kings this week. The action is said to be rapid and melodramatically thrilling throughout, rushing from one climax to another with the speed of an express train.

A big thrill is the scene in which Nellie is bound to the tracks of the elevated railway in New York. The fire scene in the modiste shop is another thrilling sequence, as is that of the fight between Walter Peck, the villain, and Jack Carroll, Nellie's sweetheart, in the underground rendezvous of New York's criminal element. Claire Windsor has the part of the beautiful cloak model. Mae Busch is Nellie's chum, Polly Joy. Lew Cody is the villain and Hobart Bosworth, Raymond Griffith and Edmund Love have important roles.

On the Kings program this week also is a film called "Memories of the World's Fair," actual still and motion pictures of the greatest event in the history of St. Louis commemorating the twentieth anniversary of the World's Fair of 1904.

"The White Sister," with Lillian Gish as the star, which recently played at the American Theater, moves into the popular-priced houses this week, being on view at both the Delmonte and Rivoli. Both theaters promise a presentation with a special orchestral offering and there are additional attractions on the programs.

The picture feature at the Columbia is "The Woman in Chains," with E. K. Lincoln in the hero role.

Rod La Rocque has been chosen as one of the featured players heading the cast of Cecil B. DeMille's next production, "Feet of Clay." La Rocque won high praise for his work in "The Ten Commandments" and "Triumph," the most recent Cecil B. DeMille production.

Clara Bow who is representing the American flapper in Hollywood, has been loaned by B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures, to Warner Brothers for one of the principal roles in the coming picturization of Sinclair Lewis' novel, "Babbit."

TORY CLUB DROPS MEMBERS FRIENDLY TO LABOR PARTY

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON.—Because of their sympathy with the Labor Government, Lord Chelmsford, Secretary of the Navy, and Oswald Mosley, a prominent member of Parliament, have been banned by an exclusive Tory club.

The "1900" club was formed after a great Tory defeat in 1906. Composed of the elite of aristocrats, all of the highest blue blood and the most immaculate Tory opinions, it was founded as a place where its members could meet and condole with each other in misfortune.

Old pewter pots, filled with strong ale, and long "churchwarden" pipes were the insignia of its meetings. It has been a mark of real old Tory blue blood in England to be elected a member.

But one of its rules states that all members of the club must "promote and further generally the interests of the Tory party." And now Lord Chelmsford, former stalwart, has become a Minister in a Labor Government; Oswald Mosley, truculent son-in-law of Lord Curzon, has become an open sympathizer with Ramsay MacDonald.

So the command has gone forth: "They must go!" And the sentence has been put into immediate execution.

'DON'T WED 'BABY WOMAN', COUNSELS AUSTRIAN SAVANT

Viennese Educator Gives the Boys Some Advice Regarding Matrimony.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch

VIENNA.—"Don't marry a 'baby woman,'" counsels Prof. Reingold Gerling.

The professor has been giving the young men of Vienna some advice on women not to marry, and he has been particularly severe in his denunciation of "baby women."

"This type of girl," says the professor, "with her small neck and head, low forehead and straight up-and-down figure, is a fashionable type today, but men should beware of a woman who looks like this after her twentieth birthday, for she will be shallow, frivolous, obstinate and without judgment.

"The baby woman will never grow up. Her arrested development will be a source of continual anxiety and she will be incapable of bringing up children, if she has any."

Revivals Prove How Poor Old Plays Are

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Dramatic Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, April 26.

EVERY spring some manager or other undertakes to prove that the theater is not what it used to be by reviving some old favorite play of a past decade. And each time the point is demonstrated. Not one of these revivals fails to strengthen the faith that our much abused modern theater is just about four and a half times as fine as that over which our fathers and grandfathers exulted.

Plays which have been tucked away for 20 years sleep deep. "Leah Kleschna" was done again at the Lyric Theater, and at first it seemed to us no more than an antiquary's adventure. Such fun as it afforded was of the sort which one gets from watching "Fashion." In 20 years the American drama has come all the way up from the ooze of the tadpole age.

The drama of that distant day called for play acting. The things which were done upon the stage had no relation whatsoever to anything beyond the walls of the theater. A character in a play was not in the least ashamed to tell one of his fellows things wholly familiar to both, just for the convenience of the audience. And whenever an emotion came to one of the actors, he invariably whirled about toward the audience so that all those in the $2 seats should be the first to know the state of his soul.

Awoke in Last Act.

Many of the distinguished members of the cast assembled for the revival of "Leah Kleschna" respected this tradition. Indeed, it seemed the only way to play the piece, and Lowell Sherman, most ardent theatricalist of the lot, was also by far the most effective.

That is, until the last act. In the final scene something stirred in the old play. The manscrpit gave a final yawn and came to life. It may have been the lights and the hum of an audience, but it is rather more likely that the sleeping script heard the voice of an actress.

She believed. A fiery faith can make old tags of the theater come true. Emotions that never were may flame through the magic of a good performance. Helen Gahagan touched her lips to this preposterous and discarded melodrama, and for an act it was a play. Indeed, while she spoke there was a pulse and this might have been something which happened. She raised the gun to kill herself and at least one in the audience who had said to himself for two longs hours, "How quaint," was seduced into a terrified second of complete illusion.

The stirring scene of the last act was mightily helped by Arnold Daly and by Jose Ruben, who caught much of the fine frenzy of Miss Gahagan. There was a good bit by Arnold Korff and Lowell Sherman's flambuoyancy was a light in the dull opening scenes.

But "Leah Kleschna" is not a good play. Any one of 20 competent authors of our day can do a better one without half trying. To our nightly prayers from now on we shall add a paragraph of thanksgiving that we were born too late to have seen the golden age of the American theater.

"Expressing Willie."

A FAVORITE query up and down the town these many months has been, "What's the matter with the Equity Players, Inc.?" The answer at the moment should be a tumultuous shout of "They're all right!"

"Expressing Willie" seems to me one of the best plays of the year and among the most skilful of all American comedies. It is neither expedient nor easy, nor even sensible to be free with "best," "second best" and "third best." It should be quite enough to say that "Expressing Willie" is a good play.

But the achievement of Equity Players, Inc., goes beyond giving stage room to a shrewd and delightful entertainment. A cast of exceedingly happy fitness has been gathered for the performance, and the piece is just a little better directed than anything else in town, and we have not forgotten "The Show-off" either.

"Expressing Willie" was written by Rachel Crothers, and it was Miss Crothers who directed the play. This ought to be enough to assure her of an ample supply of laurel over a long, hard summer.

A Tolerant Satire.

Since I cannot rid myself of a deep sensitivity to the substance of the play as well as its form, I must add that one of the reasons why I like this comedy resides in the fact that I think it has a wholly civilized attitude toward life. We have a play dealing with the articulates, though not necessarily the younger ones, of the present generation, but for the first time this season the theme is handled with understanding.

Miss Crothers realizes that satire does not mean knocking a person down and digging your heels in his face. She manages to spoof "self-expression" and still leave the partisans of that school of thought a good less than damn fools. She fences with folk who can strike back, and they do, with many a well conceived thrust.

The story tells of Minnie from the Middle West, who comes to visit at Willie's house. Years before they almost got married, but by now Willie is a millionaire and Minnie is a music teacher. He hardly cares to introduce her to his brilliant and decorative friends, but when a gusty artist talks to her of self-expression Minnie goes right up to the piano and plays in a way to astound them all. In the end it is Minnie who quite cuts out Mrs. Sylvester, the showpiece of the whole party, and marries Willie.

Gets Man and Career.

When the hope of a career and the chance of a good man's love seemed about to crash head-on, I feared for the play. In such a dilemma in many another comedy Miss Crothers has very sternly sent her heroine right about face and back to the kitchen where the good man's love is assumed to reside. But Miss Crothers is more lenient with Minnie. She has more faith in her than in any of her earlier heroines, and Minnie gets both the career and the good man.

It is a very sensitive and compelling portrait which Miss Crothers has drawn, and a magnificient performance of Miss Chrystal Herne.

And then there is the role of the portrait painter. Miss Crothers has drawn a man who talks quite a little nonsense and she has made him worth listening to by adding several generous pinches of divine good sense. This fine role falls to Alan Brooks and he makes the most of it.

It is easiest and fairest to say that the cast is fine throughout, but there should be individual mention of Richard Sterling, Merle Maddern and Louise Closser Hale. In the opening Mrs. Hale overacts a bit, but she makes up for all that by the sureness and delicacy of everything she does later.

ST. LOUIS CAN HEAR SYMPHONY "ON TOUR"

Orchestra Will Give Program in Granite City Next Sunday.

Music lovers who found the recent season of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra too short can add another concert next Sunday, May 4, by going across the river to Granite City, where Conductor Ganz and his men are to render a program, with Helen Traubel as soprano soloist.

Granite City is the last "stand" but one in the successful tour which the Symphony is making through the St. Louis trade territory. The principal concert in Granite City is to be given at 3:30 p. m. next Sunday, May 4, in the Community High School Auditorium. A previous concert, for the school children is to be given in the Washington Theater at 11 a. m. Sunday. From Granite City the orchestra goes to the University of Illinois at Urbana, where its two concerts will close its season.

The program of the Granite City concert is:

1—D'Albert Overture "Improvisator."
2—Tschaikowsky, Second Movement, "Andante Cantabile," from Symphony No. 4 in E minor
3—Glazounoff, Valse de Concert, Op. 47
4—Wagner, Overture to "Tannhauser."
5—Massenet, Aria, "Pleurez, Pleurez," from Le Cid.
6—Chabrier, Rhapsody for Orchestra, "Espana."

St. Louisans who wish to attend the concert may reserve seats by telephoning to Granite City 601.

FAMED INDIAN HUNTER DEAD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo.—Joe Jim, Ute Indian hunter, has gone to the happy hunting grounds in a casket of skins tanned by his own hands.

He was buried at Palisade, near here.

The old Indian was buried in the case of skins, patterned after the Indian casket, in accordance with his dying request.

Joe Jim spent his entire life in Eastern Utah and Western Colorado. He had seen the advance of civilization from the time the Indian lived off herds of deer and antelope to the time of great highways, railroads, airplanes and radio.

VIGILANCE WATCHWORD OF ARCTIC TRAVELERS

Extreme Cold Proves Fatal If "Musher" Fails to Take All Precautions.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

NENANA, Alaska, April 27.—The "musher" in the Arctic Circle, where winter prevails about eight months out of the year, must never relax his vigilance if he would survive the perils peculiar to the region.

To the explorer, prospector, scientist, trapper or hauler of mail and supplies who must go north of the Yukon River basin, one of the greatest winter hazards is the lack of timber for firewood. In some localities the only timber is aspen, commonly called poplar, scrub spruce and stunted brush. When a man faces 50 degrees below zero in sleeping bag and canvas tent, he requires a big log fire and abundant fuel to keep it going. When the Arctic blizzard sweeps down, man and beast are compelled to seek shelter.

"Frozen" Lungs Are Common.

In the bitterest cold, few lungs can withstand the "scorching" atmosphere that appears to sear them like a flame, while the blood is turning to ice. "Frozen" lungs are not uncommon, but there are certain precautions that minimize the danger.

The equipment includes three pairs of heavy woolen socks on each foot; underwear and shirt of wool, but of medium weight; mittens augmented by buckskin slipovers, and a drill parka, its hood faced with wolverine fur, which does not gather frost and freeze where the breath strikes it. The muskrat or beaver cap has flaps to pull down over the ears, and under the chin. The shoes frequently are moose hock mukluks.

At no time must any portion of the flesh save the eyes be exposed to the frost, and even the eyes must be protected when facing a blizzard. Travelers usually augment this 'light" equipment with a complete suit of reindeer furs.

Death From Cold Painless.

Submission to the cold of the Arctic has a fdifferent effect than might be imagined. Instead of a shivering and a gradual agonizing process of freezing, the frost overcomes one suddenly, and almost painlessly. There is a numbness in the more exposed portions, like the feet, legs and hands. Later the jaw becomes stiff, enarly immobile. A minute's exposure of a partly cold hand to low temperature causes the fingers to become stiff and without feeling. It is as if they had gone to sleep. The man in danger of death from freezing is overtaken by a rather pleasant lethargy.

A danger is found in becoming overheated and then tarrying to cool off. Even when the temperature is 50 below, one's body perspires if all orifices of the clothing are closed. If there are any holes in the equipment, the cold penetrates like the flame from a blowpipe, boring in rather than spreading. One may have a spot the size of a dime frozen on a finger where there is a hole in glove or mitten, and the rest of the hand then becomes numb.

Resting Sometimes Fatal.

In stopping for rest, the uninitiated often tarry too long, and on arising wonder why the limbs refuse to function with their wonted suppleness. After several such halts, further progress becomes a struggle, and unless a fire is available immediately the chances of freezing are great.

Frozen hands of toes are treated in the time-honored way of rubbing them with snow until the circulation is restored.

Horses used to carry outfits into the interior of Alaska are protected from lung-freezing by a covering like a nose-bag, through which the air is flitered of its biting frost before it is breathed. Nature further guards these horses by causing the haid on them to grow until by spring they resemble fur-bearing animals.

GREATLY at variance with the 1923 exhibition from the Taos colony is the 1924 show now in progress at the Kocian Gallery. Changes within the colony and a different representation in the exhibit make the collection of pictures assume an aspect quite unlike that of last year's show. With the absence of Bluemnschein and the inclusion of several new men the general standard of brilliance has been altered and we now find Oscar Berninghaus, Walter Ufer, Nordfeldt and Birger Sandzen supporting the characteristic force of the colony altogether.

Oscar Berninghaus' "Aspens" and Walter Ufer's "Backyard" are, in our opinion, the strongest pictures in the show, with Nordfeldt's "Lobato" following closely. Mr. Berninghaus' picture suggests a conventionialization of his subject although we are assured by those who know the great trees that they are not exaggerated in their decorative formation and contour. As has been remarked, the great, bushy trees rearing high on tall gray trunks more nearly resemble huge feather dusters than actual plant life. Mr. Berninghaus has gained a rhythmic succession of these tree trunks that is delightful. As much for life and color notes as for a scale gauge, several horses and figures have been introduced into the scene, emphasizing the grandeur and magnificence of this spectacle of nature. The artist's technique in this picture provides an interesting study for beholders who complain of the "sameness" of his manner.

AFTER THE OPERATION

Drawn by W. E. Hill.
For the Sunday Post-Dispatch.

Three estimable ladies in as many stages of convalescence. When they cease to care whether or not the doctor sees them in their own hair as in No. 1, they feel pretty low about life in general. After the fifth day she will probably put on a cap, pending a visit from the surgeon. She's coming on nicely. But when she fixes up with just a little rouge and a lip stick, for a visit from a mere interne, well, she's about ready to leave the hospital for the homeland.

The convalescing bachelor is beginning to take notice of the nurse. First he was afraid she would fall in love with him, and now he's afraid she won't.

"Well, you don't look sick at all! Everybody says you're getting on finely!" The Pollyanna visitor—just the wrong person to call on a patient two days out of ether.

Bright young interne following the surgeon around the ward. Pretty bright boy

The first callers want to hear all about the operation—all the horrid details and everything. And then they will compare notes on the number of gall stones, as big as hen's eggs, taken from Cousin Ida, and will settle once and for all as to whether or not she still holds the family record.

Somebody's husband calling on sick wife. Not at home in a sick room. Tips over things.

When the trained nurse stays on and on, and finally leaves, there's a great gap in the household. Mamma has no friendly ear for her "symptoms," papa has no fourth at bridge of an evening, and Harold has no congenial soul to kid with. It's a sad world and a lonely one for the time being.

It's a sure sign of a patient's rapid recovery when the night nurse begins to snooze now and then.

Three internes talking over the pros and cons of a surgical case. If the young man on the left had been the surgeon—well, he'd have done differently.

GREATLY at variance with the 1923 exhibition from the Taos colony is the 1924 show now in progress at the Kocian Gallery. Changes within the colony and a different representation in the exhibit make the collection of pictures assume an aspect quite unlike that of last year's show. With the absence of Bluemnschein and the inclusion of several new men the general standard of brilliance has been altered and we now find Oscar Berninghaus, Walter Ufer, Nordfeldt and Birger Sandzen supporting the characteristic force of the colony altogether.

Mr. Berninghaus' picture suggests a conventionalization of his subject although we are assured by those who know the great trees that they are not exaggerated in their decorative formation and contour. The artist's technique in this picture provides an interesting study for beholders who complain of the "sameness" of his manner.

WALTER UFER has contrived to portray a sensation of burning, scorching heat that is accentuated by the composition of his picture. Theatrical in arrangement and general tendency, the strength of the merciless sun on baking sands is felt more acutely. A highly spectacular sky arrangement above low, dark huts that open out onto a barren stretch of desert that the artist is pleased to designate as his back yard adds still more white heat to the picture. Great sweeps and swishes of Ufer's brush have thickly spread the canvas in some spots and left other portions untouched, like open spaces containing a vacuum. Parts of the picture are breathless; other parts seem active with the rush of the clouds overhead.

A quality in paint combinations and vigorous brushwork that corresponds to the savage subjects of Nordfeldt's pictures make this artist's work singular in force and barbaric dominance. His "Lobato" is a wonderfully strong portrait. The burly old fellow in coarse clothing and with a grim expression of hardened roughness is portrayed with wide, firm strokes as well aimed as would be Lobato's own shots.

Nordfeldt's "Corn Dance," unlovely from the standpoint of aesthetic charm, is a pulsating, rhythmic urge like the beat of a tom-tom. The savage call of the Indian life is suggested in the heavy, pounding lines and figures that comprise his subject.

E. Irving Couse's contributions to this year's show fall quite a bit below this artist's usual standard. His three pictures are most prosaic in comparison with some of his fine work and are hardly representative of Couse's real ability.

FIVE St. Louis artists have assembled examples of their recent work to form the current exhibition at the Todd Studios. The little gallery is especially well adapted for intimate display of small exhibition and enhances the decorative effect which all good pictures have in addition to their intrinsic merits.

Agnes Lodwick, an occasional contributor to local shows, now exhibits several of her canvases which bespeak the progress gained through her summer work in the Providence art colony. Two landscapes hung on the east wall of the little gallery, on either side of the doorway are Miss Lodwick's best. One is a woodland interior, a lovely spot far from habitation yet not lonely. One feels the breeziness of the early summer afternoon and hears the songs of woodland birds. Most strongly one feels the movement of the shifting shadows and the dancing sunlight. The artist's manner of brushwork is largely responsible for this looseness and freedom of movement.

Miss Lodwick's other landscape is more complicated in composition and handling. Varying perspectives and qualities of light make changing greens. Although not painted as broadly as the woodland interior, this picture is flexible and has good atmospheric qualities.

Kathryn Cherry has lent an interesting group of her pictures to the exhibit. The contrast that her strong, broad painting affords in relation to the manner of the other exhibiting artists is a point of emphasis.

FREDERICK ROE shows several paintings that differ entirely one from another. The first is a forest interior, dense and impenetrable, where gypsies can hide safely, their gray green wagons camouflaged successfully by the deep forest tones. In this picture Roe has performed the unusual feat of depicting a woodland interior without a burst of sunlight perceptible in the distance to break the darkness, focus the gaze and gladden the picture. Here, deep purples and greens and blues give way onto only a paler gray distance. This, in turn, gives way finally to the sky tones, also pale and sunless. Handling such a motif and avoiding depression is very difficult and has here been accomplished rather well.

One bright spring day not long ago the artist decided to visit the City Art Museum. As he approached the top of Art Hill, a young woman with blonde hair and wearing a soft yellow frock was seated on the steps of the big building. The harmony of the dull gray of the Museum and the pale yellow of the figure before it impressed its loveliness on the artist's mind and he resolved to translate this color scheme into one of his own styled landscapes. The second of Roe's pictures in this exhibit is the result. It is sensitive and one feels the artist's own admiration for the fine half tones used. The landscape composition is kept decorative like a screen and its tones are flat and cool except for an irresistible splash of an incongruous red.

FOR admirers of the style of painting belonging to "the old school," Arthur Mitchell's pictures will have interest. His work is done with precision, accuracy and serious effort. With no pretence at inspirational interpretation, his pictures are literal transcripts of the actualities of nature. His work is very adaptable for commercial purposes, really having more value in that field than in the class of decorative art.

Luchetmeyer displays a few of his pictures, foremost among which is a large landscape especially commendable for the manner in which its sky is painted. A pleasing atmosphere pervades the picture, gained by the suggested movement of the clouds and the passing winds that touch the tips of the trees.

The combination of this group of artists' work is quite interesting because of its variety and contrast. This exhibit will remain on display until May 5, when it will be replaced by another show of local artists' works.

Nancy Coonsman Hahn's portrait bust of the late William Marion Reedy is receiving much praise and publicity in Chicago among literary people and publications of that city. The bust will soon be installed at the City Art Museum here to remain permanently.

ST. LOUIS ASKED TO AID IN MATHEMATICAL FUND DRIVE

A $100,000 fund to be used in making a permanent record of all modern developments and discoveries in the field of mathematics, is sought by the American Mathematical Society, of which Prof. Oswald Veblen of Princeton University is president. St. Louis has been asked to raise $5000 of the fund, and Prof. William H. Roever of Washington University and Rev. William J. Ryan, S. J., of St. Louis University, are undertaking the task of getting it.

It is explained that members of the society from time to time discover improvements in mathematical methods, and the fund would permit of the issuance of periodical bulletins containing this new work. These bulletins would be of great value, it is said, to many industries whose products are based essentially on mathematics.

ENGLISH LABORITES LOOK TO 'BIGGER AND BETTER' MAY DAY

Problem for Police to Supervise Annual Parade of 100,000 in London Streets.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 26.—The English Labor party's part in the observance of this May day, although it will not be the affair that the more ruddy members of the party would have it, will be bigger and better than ever. It is expected that several million persons will celebrate this European "Labor day" by taking part in the big celebrations, mass meetings and processions which will be held throughout the country.

Efforts of a large section of the party to have the day observed more boisterously were overcome by another group, which included several Government Ministers, who believe that this is the chance to get in some propaganda of speeches, and the enactment of resolutions by the rank and file of the Socialists. It is expected that Premier MacDonald, John Robert Clynes, deputy leader in the House of Commons; Lord Parmoore and other of Labor's star performers will be among the speakers on the platforms at Hyde Park and other London parks.

The parade of Labor adherents, which gathers annually on the Victoria embankment and marches through the West End to Hyde Park, is expected this year to number 100,000, which is going to present a knotty problem to London's police chiefs.

The Labor Government has disappointed many members of the party, who for several years have been advocating that May day be made a national holiday, by declaring it impossible to consider such action at the present time as there is more pressing legislation on hand. The opposition to such action has always been on the part of bankers and merchants, who maintain that there are enough holidays already, and that business would be given a heavy setback if there were any more productive spaces in the calendar.

"GYPSY BARON" WILL BE SUNG AT THE AMERICAN

Single Performance Next Sunday Night by German Theater Company.

Johann Strauss' comic opera, "Der Zigeunerbaron," or "The Gypsy Baron," will be presented next Sunday night, May 4, at the American Theater, by the German Theater stock company. This will be the German company's first production of the season on a large stage. At Eagles' Hall, where it has played on Sunday nights through the season, it has had capacity audiences.

"The Gypsy Baron" was sung by the Municipal Opera Company last July, and was one of the most artistic performances of the past season. In the single performance at the American, which will be in the German language throughout, Max Bratt and Miss Lena Weingaertner will sing the leading roles, and Felix Marx will be comedian and stage director. A chorus of 60 voices and a troupe of Hungarian Czardas dancers, with a gypsy orchestra, are announced features.

Sure Way to Get Rid of Blackheads

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads—that is to dissolve them.

To do this get two ounces of calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

BRITISH GIVE LIST OF "DON'TS" FOR AMERICANS AT WEMBLEY

Newspapers Tell Exhibition Guests Not to Term London "a One-Horse Town."

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 26.—A list of well-meant "don'ts," some serious, and others not, are appearing in newspapers for the benefit of the hundreds of thousands of visitors who are expected in London this summer to visit the British Empire Exhibition. As many thousands of these guests are expected to be Americans, much of the advice is based upon the English conception of American weaknesses. Some of the "don't" are:

"Don't wear horned-rimmed spectacles or chew gum—it will attract the black sheep and cost you more.

"Don't describe London as a 'one-horse town'—we are sensitive.

"Don't believe your taxi driver when he tells you his meter registers dollars. It doesn't. He is only trying to do the right thing by his wife and children. Small tips are acceptable.

"Don't expect to find free baths, ice in your drinks or summer weather in summer time. Stick to your underwear and your umbrella.

"When you see a bewigged coachman driving a big landau with a golden crest on the door panels, don't look inside to find a fairy prince. In all probability the coach will contain a fat Alderman from the Mansion House. Nowadays, fairy princes prefer the incognito of the golf course, or the hit and miss of the jockey's saddle.

"Don't expect to find cooling drinks in drug stores. Don't look for blind pigs or tigers. There are many alleys in London, but no drinking emporium hides its light.

"Above all, don't shoot from the hip. There's no need for it; the other fellow doesn't carry a gun in London—besides we hate the noise."

TIRED, ACHING FEET—

"TIZ" makes sore, burning, tired feet fairly dance with delight. Away go the aches and pains, the corns, callouses, blisters and bunions. "TIZ" draws out the acids and poisons that puff up your feet. No matter how hard you work, how long you dance, how far you walk, or how long you remain on your feet, "TIZ" brings restful foot comfort. Your feet just tingle for joy; shoes never hurt or seem tight.

In addition, $7,400,000 has been raised in Y. M. C. ENGLISH WOMEN FIGHT BOBBED HAIR FASHION

Three Actresses Are Leaders in Revolt Against "Menace" to Beauty.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 18.—It would seem that some of the most beautiful of London's artistocrats and actreses, artists' models and mannequins have ben reading the First Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Corinthians; XI chapter, 15 verse:

But if a woman have long hair, it is a glory to her; for her hair is given her for a covering.

For certain is it that many charming women have come to regard the fashion of bobbing or of shingling the hair as a menace to the true English type of pulchritude. They are confessing sorrowfully and publicly in interviews that they tried bobbing with disastrous results, or that they ventured into the ranks of the shingled—then in deep repentance let their hair grow as fast as it could.

Opposed by Aristocrat.

One of the most emphatic in condemning the short hair fashion is the Hon. Helen Montague, daughter of Lord Montague of Beaulieu, on the stage Mrs. A. J. Clark Kennedy. It must be said that this lady's hair is long and fair and remarkably fine in texture.

"Short hair might suit a very young girl," says the aristocratic actress, "but it certainly should not be worn by any girl who has grown up. Bobbing and shingling ruin the whole effect of the truly English type of beauty. This type, to be perfect, demands long hair. If a woman wants to make her hair look short there are ways of doing this without using the scissors."

When Miss Ethel Warwick, the actress, heard the word "shingling," she shuddered and said:

"I think that any tall woman who cuts off her hair makes herself look ridiculous. Many a woman who has become shingled would, I am sure, have been saved from such a tragedy if she had tried on a wig first, and seen the effect of the short style.

"The only type of girl who can possibly look well shingled or bobbed is the petite girl. But she runs the risk of looking too boyish."

Movie Actress Regretful.

Miss Nettie Grossman, the film actress, who has long black hair, said that some time ago in a weak moment—"just for the sake of fashion"—she had it shingled. "But never again," she laughed.

"The effect was dreadfull, and my closest friends could scarcely recognize me. Shingling undoubtedly makes weak hair stronger, but it ruins the natural wave in one's hair and makes it coarse."

This revolt probably will spread from the three styles of treating the hair which have just come from Paris.

At least two of these methods imply a copious use of an unguent which smooths down the hair and gives it as seal-like an appearance as possible. In one case, the hair is cut short and brushed back straight off the forehead, with only the slightest additional length over the ears.

In another the hair is treated in the same way, except that it is allowed to grow a little longer behind, where it turns up slightly. It is thoroughly oiled and looks almost as though it could be lifted bodily from the head, should occasion so require. This kind of hairdressing looks best with a coat and shirt and stock.

Young-Mannish Style.

It is rather young-mannish—the sort of young man who, not so long ago, cultivated a Beethoven forehead, and let his hair grow slightly over his collar to proclaim that he was an esthete. The third method has frankly long hair. It combs it straight back from the forehead as possible, usually with a parting down the middle, oiling it well to make it smooth. It is gathered up into a knot low down on the head. In some cases there are two knots—one on each side of the neck—which together produce an exceedingly Victorian impression.

Can Now Insure Against Appendicitis

London Firm Offers New Insurance Policy

Due to the enormous prevalence of appendicitis, a firm of insurance men have evolved a scheme whereby people can insure the appendix against the cost of its removal by operation. This removes any anxiety regarding the expense of an appendicitis operation but does not, of course, remove the worry or possible chance of loss of life.

A Treacherous Disease.

Appendicitis attacks at any moment even persons seemingly in good health. Usually, however, it is preceded by so-called stomach trouble, constipation or similar disturbances. Often when there is a warning feeling of uneasiness in the abdomen, appendicitis can be guarded against in the same manner in which one guards against the spread of throat infection, because that is just what appendicitis is—an infection in the intestines spreading to the appendix. When one has sore throat, one can often prevent further trouble by using an antiseptic wash or gargle to fight the germs and a laxative to carry off the poisons from the body. The same procedure is necessary to fight the intestinal germs and guard against appendicitis. But instead of an antiseptic wash for the throat, an INTESTINAL antiseptic is necessary.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacilli in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which for months and even years has poisoned the system, thus producing gases, which often cause appendicitis. It relieves constipation almost instantly. Both sour stomach and gas are relieved at once. In slight disorders, such as sick headache, constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sour breath, one dose of Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. No longer treatment, however, is required in cases of obstinate constipation. Long standing stomach trouble yields to Adlerika everywhere, but it is especially under direction of your physician.

Reports From Physicians.

"I found Adlerika the best in my entire 37 years' experience." Dr. G. Hayes, Allentown, Pa.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel disorders. Some require only one dose." Dr. F. M. Pyle, Chicago, Ill.

"I have found nothing to equal it in my years' practice to expel poisons." (Signed) Dr. James Wagner, Jersey City, N. J.

"After taking Adlerika for 2 months than for 20 years. Haven't words to express the AWFUL feeling I had. Eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Puckett, Kansas City, Mo.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, thorough and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 7th and Franklin; Ely & Walker Drug Co., 7th and Washington; Enderle Drug Co. and other leading druggists.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and is very harmful. Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this cannot possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store. It is inexpensive and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Mr. James H. Allen of Rochester, N. Y., suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of useless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body. With that idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery, which he called Allenrhu, to others who took it, with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. He has therefore instructed druggists everywhere to dispense Allenrhu with the understanding that if the very first pint bottle does not show the way to complete recovery he will gladly refund your money. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. can supply you.

DISPUTE OVER SPORTS FOR GIRLS IN ENGLAND

Artists and Doctors on One Side, Sportswomen on the Other.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON.—A controversy is raging here between artists and doctors on the one hand and sportswomen on the other around the oft-debated question as to whether women's participation in sports is an aid or an enemy to womanly charms.

Many prominent artists and physicians have taken up the cudgels against, and an equally large number of well-known sportswomen and woman doctors have entered the lists in defense of their participation.

The doctors and artists contend that the modern woman is ruining her figure, losing all her grace and gradually reducing herself to a condition in which she will be undistinguishable from man, to which contention the women reply that it is a ridiculous one and entirely unsupported by facts.

One of the most violent of the "antis" is Alfred Page, a famous painter of miniatures and president of the Society of Manicurists, who declares bluntly that "all strenuous sports are the enemies of womanly charm and grace."

Not Built for Speed.

"The woman who is beautiful in the eyes of the artist is not built for speed in athletics," he declares. "I can imagine a thick-boned, ugly woman taking part in games like a man, but not a beautiful woman."

He is rather unkind to the sports girl in his statement that one only has to study the illustrated papers to discover the horrible, ungainly poses strenuous sports impose on the athletic girl, and that the sportswoman lacks all the true characteristics of beautiful womanhood.

A true solution of the problem lies in the drawing of a true line between sports of the games or nonstrenuous kind and strenuous male sports, in the opinion of Page.

For the other side of the controversy, the opinion of Mrs. V. M. Cambridge, secretary of the Women's Amateur Athletic Association, may be taken as representative.

According to Mrs. Cambridge, the whole question cannot be decided by theories, but by actual facts.

Defends Girl Athletes.

She contends that the most notable girl athletes of the day compare very favorably in beauty and feminine charms with girls who prefer to take their exercise in ballrooms.

"The only practical test is results," she declares. "My experience of athletics is that they do no harm to girls physically, but, on the contrary, do a great deal of good. Isn't it better for a girl to take part in a cross-country run on a Saturday afternoon after business than to wander about the streets?" she asks.

As a social influence in the lives of working girls, Mrs. Cambridge claims that athletics should command general support.

The controversy is by no means settled, however, and at least one newspaper states that it may take a nation-wide ballot on the subject.

2 NEW EXPERIMENT STATIONS ESTABLISHED IN KENTUCKY

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky.—Preparations are being made to carry on the work of the two new substations provided by the last Legislature. There new experiment stations, one in Eastern Kentucky and the other in Western Kentucky, will, according to Dean Thomas Cooper of the Kentucky College of Agriculture, make the work of the present central experiment station more effective and will provide means for carrying on experimental work tending to promote the agriculture of the different regions.

They Will Lay Foundation for Adequate Plan of Agricultural Development in State.

The eastern station, in Breathitt County, will be known as the Robinson sub-experiment station, and comprises a tract of land totaling about 15,000 acres, donated to the State by E. O. Robinson of Fort Thomas. The Western Kentucky station will be located on lands in Caldwell County to be donated to the State, but the exact location of the station has not yet been announced.

CHICAGO.—The secluded inmates of the Bridewell here, given leisure to repent their acts or chart new paths to unrighteousness, are enjoying a month of music firsthand, after having to depend on the radio.

Carl Carrel, who described himself to Judge Barasa as a Swedish musician, told the Magistrate he lacked the means to pay a $25 fine for intoxication.

"All right, Carl," responded the Judge. "Tell the Desk Sergeant to send for your fiddle. I'm going to send you as a one-man orchestra to entertain the boys at the Bridewell. They're probably tired of opera, Isham Jones and the rest of the radio folks."

VETERAN ARCTIC SHIP AGAIN SLATED TO GO

The "Bear," Known as Good Samaritan, Has Plied Icy Waters for Half Century.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 26.—The coast guard cutter Bear, soon to start for Arctic waters on her thirty-eighth annual voyage to the Far North, is slated for the discard, according to plans in Congress for an appropriation of $925,000 to replace the wooden Bear with a new steel vessel. Yet men of the coast guard are somewhat skeptical when the retirement of the Bear is mentioned. They recall that she has made a "last" voyage to the polar basin every year for some years now, and contend that her farewell tours have taken on the nature of those indulged in by some lyric artists.

The Bear is the grizzled veteran of the service and has had an adventurous career. She has penetrated perilous Arctic waters, where the ice melts a channel for a few summer weeks and then closes in again for nine or 10 months. In the nearly half a century she has been taking the Northern cruises she had rescued scores of lives and has been for hundreds of residents of those remote shores the only connecting link with civilization.

Built in Scotland.

The vessel was built in Greenock, Scotland, in 1874, for the British Government. The United States acquired her along with the Thetis both sealers, in the early '80s, and they were turned over to the coast guard service.

Since 1886 the Bear has been making annual cruises into the Arctic. North of Nome the cutter goes from village to village on the coast of the Bering Sea. She carries medical equipment and supplies of all sorts. Her commander is, among other things, a United States commissioner and he fulfills the functions of a floating Federal court, settling any legal problems that have been saved through the isolated winter.

In the north the Bear is known as the "Good Samaritan." One of the many notable rescues was that of the crew of the whaler James Allen in Seguam Pass in 1894. The pass is off the Aleutian Islands. Capt. F. G. Dodge, now commanding the coast guard district for the entire North Pacific, was master of the Bear at that time. When the cutter reached the few surviving members of the whaler's crew the castaways, in their starvation had eaten one of their number.

Rescued Expedition.

The Bear, under command of Capt. Winfield Scott Schley, rescued the exploration expedition led by Major-General A. W. Greely which had reached the farthest north point discovered at that time. In feeling her way on that mission the Bear added new areas of land and sea to the map. She endured great hardships and lost several men, but, as usual, accomplished her purpose.

Last year the cutter cruised more than 16,000 miles on the Bering Sea, Arctic Ocean and along the Siberian coast.

At present the Bear is being overhauled in a shipyard at Oakland, Cal. Medical supplies and rations for the lighthouse and whaling stations already have been stowed away in her hold. She is due to leave San Francisco Bay May 2 on what is announced as her last trip to the Arctic. After touching at Seattle she will proceed to Nome, arriving there about June 1. Then she will go to Point Barrow, Alaska, America's most northerly settlement.

MANY SHAKSPEARE WEEK CELEBRATIONS IN ENGLAND

Ambassadors Unfurl Flags at Stratford-on-Avon—New Company Gives Shakspeare's Plays.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 26.—Shakspeare week has been celebrated with more than usual enthusiasm this year, owing to the influx of overseas visitors, especially American.

The chief celebrations occurred at Stratford-on-Avon where the bard's birthday festivities were opened with a centenary meeting of members of the Shakspeare Club, founded in 1824, followed by the ceremony of unfurling of national flags by Ambassadors and other representatives of various countries, after which these foreign representatives placed wreaths upon the poet's tomb. A new company performed several of Shakspeare's plays while public and private luncheons and receptions were frequent.

London celebrated with the usual service at Southwark Cathedral, a reception by numerous societies at the cathedral chapter house, the placing of floral wreaths on the Shakspeare memorial tomb at Westminster Abbey and a pilgrimage headed by the Mayor of Southwark to the sites of Elizabethan playhouses, during which a blind actor on the site of the old Globe Theater gave the ghost scene from "Hamlet." Working men performed the scenes from "Mid-Summer Night's Dream" in the yard of the Old George Inn, using a lorry as a stage.

The Old Vic Theater, which is described as the "home of Shakspeare plays," held a gala week, and one West End theater gave extracts from Shakspeare's works under the auspices of the British Empire Shakspeare Society.

How To Keep A Child Healthy

A GENERATION ago parents thought that sickness was a part of a child's life, but we know better now. The secret is in the food the mother allows the child to eat, and in watching that elimination occurs regularly two or three times a day. Mrs. J. Russell of 19,141 Havana Ave., Detroit, Mich., keeps her family of two young children in perfect health with Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and Mrs. R. L. Smith of 519 Maple Ave., East Pittsburg, Pa., says her family of three children have never been sick a day since giving them Syrup Pepsin.

A Substitute for Physics

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientific compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and suitable aromatics. The formula is on every package. You will find you do not have to force children to take it, and it is much better for them than castor oil, calomel or coal-tar drugs like phenolphthalein even if covered with sugar or chocolate. Syrup Pepsin is mild and gentle in action and your child will have an easy passage without griping or strain. It does not contain narcotics, and you can give it with absolute safety to an infant at the breast.

"Magic" in a Teaspoonful

Every store that sells medicines sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and the cost is less than a cent a dose. Give half a teaspoonful to any ailing baby or child at night when you put it to bed and you will find a happy, laughing youngster in the morning. Take Syrup Pepsin yourself when constipated, and give it to any member of the family young or old, for any ailment due to constipation, such as biliousness, headache, lack of appetite, sleeplessness, bad breath, cankers, fever sores, indigestion, and to break up fevers and colds. Stop that first sneeze or sniffle and you will have a healthy winter.

I Have Found a Way to Whiten Yellow Teeth—Instantly.

Here It Is—

"I never thought it was possible to have perfectly white teeth. But now I know that it is. It seemed that every dentifrice I used failed to bring the result I desired. I had about given up hope of ever removing the stubborn film on my teeth when I saw an advertisement of Bleachodent in the paper. The very next day I went to the drug store and got a package. I really didn't believe it would whiten my teeth. But to my astonishment—like a magic wand—my teeth were perfectly white! Isn't it a grand and glorious feeling! I thank the Bleachodent Dental Laboratories for their invention.

This, in substance, is what an appreciative young woman recently wrote the Bleachodent Dental Laboratories, regarding their remarkable new tooth whitener. Bleachodent Combination. This new discovery consists of a mild liquid and a new kind of paste. The liquid softens the stains, while the paste gently removes them. No effect on enamel. Bleachodent was perfected by two prominent dentists who used it on their own teeth and on their patients' for four years with highly beneficial results before offering it to the public. Whitens yellow teeth almost instantly. Removes tobacco stains. Fine for children's teeth. Get Bleachodent Combination containing both liquid and paste; for small cost at all good druggists.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it; then you destroy it entirely. By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

PREDICTS COLOR PHOTOGRAPHS MAY BE SENT BY RADIO

Expert Shows How Pictures May Be Successfully Transmitted by Wireless for Newspapers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

HONOLULU, April 26.—Photographs in colors may be transmitted by radio for newspaper use and other purposes in the near future according to George A. Taylor of Sydney, Australia, radio and photographic expert and member of the Association for Developing Wireless in Australia, New Zealand and the Fiji Islands, who passed through here the other day on his way to London by way of Canada. Taylor is widely known for his success in taking colored photographs and he has with him a number of specimens of the art. He made the startling prediction while here that if distant planets are inhabited by human beings, future generations may be able to study the activities of the planet folks from photographs taken by means of wireless. This is not a far-fetched possibility, asserted Taylor.

"No human being can, of course, forsee the future with any degree of certainty," said Taylor, "but it may be said with some assurance that the possibilities for the use of the wireless are infinite in character.

"Because of the infinite character of wireless it is within the range of human possibilities to predict that future generations may some day learn of the activities of people, who are said to inhabit distant planets or worlds millions of miles away from this globe on which we now live.

Wireless Still in Infancy.

"Scientists are beginning to realize that the development of the wireless is still in its infancy. No one can forsee what trend this development will take. One can only predict. Wonders have already been accomplished by means of wireless and what the future holds is a matter for speculation, but no dream is wild enough for the surface of aerial sceince has been merely scratched."

Taylor, who is considered one of the leading authorities on wireless, has been interested for many years in the development of the radio sketch or radio photography—that is the sending of photographs over vast distances by means of the wireless. He already has achieved some remarkable results in this connection and in several instances has been able to transmit natural color photographs by wireless.

"Until recently natural color photography had been developed rather slowly," explained Taylor. "Natural colors of a scenic view are divided into three primaries—red, blue and yellow, the correlation of same forming all other colors. Thus red and yellow making orange, red and blue making purple, and blue and yellow making green and all other colors being mixtures. Three plates are therefore made for the camera, each plate being only sensitive to receive one of the three primary colors.

"Having taken the three colors, the photo plates are then transferred to metal plates through a screen and acid etched and as each metal plate will then be printed with the colored ink corresponding to the color it represents, the correlation of prints will give the original picture in full colors."

Shows Sending of Photographs.

As to transmission of photographs in colors by wireless, Taylor said that such a picture is photographed in its three primary colors and the picture enlarged. The enlarged picture is then acid-etched on a metal plate, the plate placed on a cylinder, moving like that of a phonograph with a needle coming in contact with the metal parts untouched by acid, such contacts being transmitted to a receiving needle which gives the contacts to a metal plate on a cylinder moving at the same speed as that at the transmitting station. The second needle, however, being filled with acid-resisting ink, the plate is then acid-etched, printed in black ink and the picture photographically reduced to the fineness of the screen of the original photoplate, etched on a metal plate and printed in its particular color (yellow, red or blue), each printed over the other.

The achievement presents the prospect that if a newspaper or station wishes to have a natural color photograph of a person or picture from a distant Pacific island on a certain day, it need only transmit a request for such a picture from that distant place. Three-color plates can then be made from the natural color photograph taken in the spot in the ordinary way and transmitted by radio, the three plates on the reception cylinded being acid-etched, mounted and printed in the three colors and so distributing the distant photograph to stations many thousands of miles away.

Run your hand over their smoothly woven, pliant surface. Think how soft and thick they will be under foot. See how flat they lie, without creeping or curling.

Learn about their special features. How sturdily they resist wear. How easily they are cleaned. How they can be twisted or folded without breaking.

Then look at the price mark—to make sure that such lovely rugs can be priced so amazingly low. Two rugs cost about what you expected to pay for one. And every rug, being reversible, gives double wear.

You Can Now Try Nuxated Iron At My Expense

I First Compounded This Remarkable Remedy For My Own Neighbors And Their Praise Of It Has Spread So Rapidly That Now Over Four Million People Use It Annually—Read My Unusual Offer Below.

Years ago I began to wonder at the great number of my own friends and neighbors who were always ailing, complaining and doctoring, without ever seeming to get any better. Both working men and their wives were frequently all tired out in the evening, and a great many were weak, nervous and run-down. One had pains in the back and thought he had kidney trouble. Another had pains around the heart, palpitations and dizziness, and was sure he was suffering from heart disease. Still others had severe headaches, floating spots before the eyes, tender spots along the spine and a great variety of alarming symptoms.

For years I made a special study of this condition, consulting a great number of physicians and chemists. An immense number of investigations by physicians all over the country showed that three people out of every four you meet lack 100% iron in their blood. Lack of iron in the blood is the greatest of all devitalizing weaknesses. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food. Without iron, nothing you eat does you any good. Your heart, lungs and kidneys and all your vital organs get their nourishment from the blood stream, and when the blood lacks iron and is thin, pale and watery, you may suffer from the symptoms of a great number of diseases when the real and true cause of all your trouble is a lack of iron in the blood.

In the old days people often took metallic iron, which some physicians claim is not absorbed at all. In compounding this newer form of iron which I call Nuxated Iron, I employed a special form of iron, which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Unlike the older forms of iron, it will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach, and it is ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood. If is the people whose blood is rich in iron who possess great strength, force and energy. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test:

Cut out trial coupon and go to any druggist and get your first trial package of Nuxated Iron; then see how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two 5-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times a day after meals for two weeks, then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. An astonishing number of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, have greatly improved their health and increased their strength, energy and endurance simply by taking this newer form of iron.

Trial Coupon

Fill in this coupon with your name and address and take it to any druggist in your city. Deposit with him the price of one regular full-size bottle of Nuxated Iron. This is not a payment, but a deposit only. If you are not more than delighted with the results obtained by two weeks' use of Nuxated Iron, simply return the outside wrapper to your own druggist who will promptly refund your money. We will repay the druggist the full amount he refunds upon receipt of the coupon and wrapper.

GERMAN GOSSIPS FAIL IN ATTACK ON EBERTS

President and Wife Maintain Social Position Regardless of Monarchists' Tales.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, April 9.—Revolution did not exterminate the old court gossips who were so busy in the days of the monarchy, and there are many of them who still follow their old calling, and try to make life harder for the men and women of the new republic who are responsible for the social responsibilities which fall upon the members of the Government.

The monocled, white-spatted men of the old monarchial set, and their equally embittered womenfolks, those of them who have not been able to land some sort of a job under the republic, organize themselves into mud-throwing circles, and assail President Ebert and his wife.

Eberts Are Plain People.

But fortunately the Eberts are not vulnerable. They are plain, honest people who make no pretensions. As the mother of two sons who fell in the war, Frau Ebert typifies the war mother. Then she and her husband have the advice and assistance of State Secretary Meissner and his charming wife, who served in the Foreign Office under the old regime, and are thoroughly familiar with the social practices of diplomats throughout the world.

For six years Frau Ebert has maintained her position as first lady of Germany with quiet distinction. Neither Monarchists nor Liberals have been able to undermine the presidential family.

Live Simply in Palace.

The Eberts have never made any attempt to entertain lavishly. They have neither the means nor the desire to take on any of the glitter which formerly characterized the palace on Wilhelmstrasse, which now serves as the presidential home, and the sober-minded German public apparently respects them very generally for the sane example they set for a public which is going through bitter trials.

SCIENTISTS GOING NORTH INTO WILD DUCKS' BREEDING GROUND

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, April 26.—To penetrate the great breeding grounds of wild ducks and geese now headed north, H. S. Conover, volunteer associate in the zoology department of Field Museum, with a party from the United States Biological Survey, is pushing his way to the mouth of the Yukon River in Alaska, on the Bering Sea.

But few white men have ventured into the area which these scientists are seeking to determine the migratory characteristics of these game birds, and to obtain specimens of them in the full plumage of their breeding time. Back at the mouth of the Yukon, great areas of swampy, reed-covered territory form an ideal home for the vast numbers of birds who annually hasten North for their mating.

The expedition with which Conover is connected will band a large number of ducks and geese, keeping a record of each bird banded. Hunters shooting the game will then be requested to send any of the bands obtained to the Biological Survey, which can identify traveled by the bird in its migrations.

The Field Museum is particularly interested in obtaining specimens of the game in its breeding plumage, more luxuriant and brilliant than that shown in the fall and early spring migration. It also is seeking specimens of young birds at all stages of development.

To Speak on "The Crippled Child."

Miss Jane Neil, principal of the Jesse Spalding School for Crippled Children, Chicago, will tell "How to Help the Crippled Child" at the annual luncheon of the Missouri Association for Occupational Therapy tomorrow noon at Hotel Statler.

New Treatment for Varicose Veins and Ulcers

Swollen veins are dangerous and often burst. Sufferers are advised to get a two-ounce, original bottle of Emerald Oil (full strength), at any pharmacist and start to reduce the veins and bunches at once.

Physicians recommend Emerald Oil; it is used in hospital practice, and a small bottle will last a long time, because it is very concentrated and a little goes a long way. Apply night and morning with a soft brush as directed until the swelling is reduced to normal.

So marvelously powerful is Emerald Oil that swollen glands and even goitre disappear when used steadily. For sale at Keiffer Drug Co. and Wolff-Wilson Drug Co.

Is Yours Realized?

Who is there of us that has not, at some time, had ideals?

The multitude of forms in which they appear in our visionary moments furnish food for amusement, reflection, anticipation.

Most ideals are seldom attained: many of those attained are soon shattered: few have a permanent realization.

But a consolation beyond comparison is to know there is ONE EVERLASTING IDEAL within the attainment of all who desire it—THE IDEAL HOME.

"There is beauty all around
When there's love at home;
There is joy in every sound
When there's love at home.
Peace and plenty there abide
Smiling sweet on every side;
Time doth softly, swiftly glide
When there's love at home."

BONUS WILL NOT BE ISSUE IN CAMPAIGN

Democrats Expected to Take Advantage of Oil Scandals in Their Platform.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The soldier bonus has been shelved as a "paramount issue." Irrespective of the action of President Coolidge, the controversy will not be a vital part of the coming presidential campaign. The bill passed by the House and Senate has enough votes to become law over a possible presidential veto. It is being discounted already as a law. The Republican national platform will "point with pride" to its accomplishment. The fact that a Democratic nominee might say he would have signed the bill that Coolidge might veto, is not likely to be of considerable value on the stump.

The main thing is that members of the Senate and House will not have the bonus to contend with in the elections, and there will be little organized opposition to the few opponents of the measure. Indeed, of the few Senators who did vote against the soldiers' insurance bill, not all come up for re-election this year, anyhow. The Democrats have as much right to claim credit for the passage of the bill as the Republicans, for they supported it overwhelmingly. Had there been vigorous opposition from the Democrats the issue might have proved troublesome. The vote on the cash feature may arise to plague a few members, but on the whole, one of the most vexing issues in American politics has been removed.

Election on Other Issues.

President Coolidge is strong enough politically to be nominated, even if he vetoes the bill, as seems likely, judging from his public utterances since the insurance plan was first broached. But there is no likelihood of much resentment being expressed next November against the President on this point. The election will turn on other issues.

What will they be? With the soldier bonus out of the way and both parties likely to support the tax bill, which is finally brought out of conference of the two houses of Congress, the so-called "paramount" issues are vanishing. The Democrats, of course, will insist that Teapot Dome proves what happens when the Republicans are in power, and will ask the country to point to a single case of corruption of Cabinet officers under their rule. To which the Republicans will answer, as usual, with charges of waste and mismanagement in war time. And thus the debate will be developed, with the Democrats seeking to win by undermining the confidence in the Republican party as an institution in Washington.

President Free of Oil Scandal.

Coolidge's acceptance of the resignation of some of those concerned in the oil controversy has helped him from the viewpoint of disclaiming responsibility for their acts. He has not been effectively tied up with the misrule of the few who have been exposed in the oil scandals. If Coolidge's own character is sufficiently impressed on the electorate to overcome any lack of confidence in the Republican officeholders, it will take away much from the force of the oil cases as an issue.

The Democrats will hammer away on that just the same, arguing for "clean government." In the West, the Democrats will probably take advantage of the discontent inside the Republican party on proposals for agricultural relief. It begins to look as if the issues will not be principles of action so much as men and their character, their sincerity, their integrity and their individual capacity for efficient administration.

Stiff, Swollen Joints

Joint-Ease

Says: "When Joint-Ease Gets in—Joint Agony Gets Out"

It was a high-class pharmacist who saw prescription after prescription fail to help hundreds of his customers to get rid of rheumatic swellings and stiff inflamed joints.

And it was this same man who asserted that a remedy could and would be compounded that would make creaky, swollen, tormented joints work with just as much smoothness as they ever did.

Now this prescription, rightly named Joint-Ease, after being tested successfully on many obstinate cases, is offered through progressive pharmacists to the millions of people who suffer from ailing joints that need limbering up.

Swollen, twingy, inflamed, stiff, pain-tormented Joints are usually caused by rheumatism, but whatever the cause Joint-Ease soaks right in through skin and flesh and gets right to and corrects the trouble at its source.

Remember, Joint-Ease is for ailments of the joints, whether in ankle, knee, hip, elbow, shoulder, spine or finger, and when you rub it on, you may expect speedy and gratifying results.

It is now on sale at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 7th and Washington, and druggists everywhere for 60 cents a tube.

AN OBLIGING BEAUTY DOCTOR

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. B. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look 20 years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE PLANNED

A membership drive which will continue through May and June has been started by the Sergean-Major John H. Quick Chapter No. 12, Disabled American Veterans of the World War. Downtown headquarters have been established at room 304 Fullerton Building, with J. A. Hall, vice commander of the chapter, in charge. Later a recruiting tent may be established at Twelfth boulevard and Olive street.

The national organization has supplied a list of about 1000 disabled sailors, soldiers and marines of St. Louis who are eligible to membership and do not belong to any chapter at this time. It is planned to invite national officers here for initiation of the new members, which is to be held at Hotel Chase on June 28.

DRIVE TO CERTIFY ALL BIRTHS IN U. S.

Child Health Body to Begin Campaign for Registration on May 1.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON—Do you know that you were ever born?

That is, can you prove it? A middle-aged man, who during the war received an assignment for overseas duty in the Y. W. C. A., applied for a passport. The passport officials asked him for his birth certificate. He had none. As far as that bureau was concerned, he had never been born. The story of his search for proof of his own birth has become almost a classic in legal and medical annals.

He went back to the little town in Kansas where, rumor had it, he first saw the traditional light of day. His parents were dead and he found the old family physician had died, too. The village clerk had no record of any birth that could possibly be his.

There was a very well-preserved record of certain pedigreed cattle owned by his father, but this did not help much. Finally, the man applied to the State Department of Health for assistance. In the end, the old family physician's son, now past middle age himself, discovered in the yellow, crackling pages of his father's ledger, an entry of the man's birth. The entry was photographed and the physician signed the affidavit attached to a facsimile page. But it was then too late for the man to sail on the special mission.

Because of the danger of just such situations, the American Child Health Association, in connection with its celebration of May 1 as National Health Day, is beginning an intensive check-up on birth registrations throughout the country. Dr. S. J. Crumbine, in charge of the work, urges parents to register the birth of infants as promptly as they file their income taxes or register their pedigreed dogs and cats.

In 17 States out of the 48 little or no effort is made for birth registration.

"We ought to safeguard the citizenship of our children," said Dr. Crumbine. "Every mother should demand that her child's birth be registered. His right of citizenship and property ownership may be seriously endangered unless this is done.

"Another angle of birth registration is the sanitary question, for only by relying upon birth registry can the Public Health Department determine if the infant mortality rate is too high. If the deaths of infants are far out of proportion to the births, the State Health Department will immediately begin investigation of the health conditions under which the child is born and the mother lives.

"And birth registration not only raises the efficiency of the State Health Department but is the foundation for all child welfare work. It is valuable in the enforcement of child labor laws and compulsory education, and it establishes aids in settling estates, insurance collections and the claims of widows and orphans.

"Besides, most men like to be sure whether they are men or phantoms. They like to be able to prove that they really have been born!"

REVIVAL CAUSES CITIZENS TO ABANDON TOBACCO

Entire Town in Kansas Goes Smokeless and Chewless as Result of Campaign.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

INDEPENDENCE, Kan.—As a result of a revival held at the school house of the district, nearly the entire neighborhood of Cascade settlement, in Chautauqua County, 20 miles southwest of here, is smokeless and chewless.

The men of the district simply discarded their pipes and tobacco after the revival and went without the solace of the "weed." z zz

"It wasnt hard to quit," one of the Cascade men said, "when the entire community quit, there was no one to tell us how much he enjoyed smoking and chewing."

Peter Saali, Tramped Upon Hard by Fate, Is Paying for His Wife's Sin

A TENANT FARMER, POOR AND DEEPLY WRONGED, SHOWS SURPRISING NOBILITY OF CHARACTER

Having Forgiven the Woman Who Tried to Kill Him, He Can't Understand Why the State Should Be So Insistent Upon Justice in His Behalf, Particularly When He and His Five Children Need the Wife and Mother So Much More Than the State Needs Her Retribution —Daughter of 9 Is Now Mother to the Brood and Housekeeper— How the Young Farm Wife's Coquetry With a Neighbor Brought Sorrow Into a Contented Household.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PORTAGE DES SIOUX, Mo., April 26.

JUSTICE tramps hard upon Peter Saali, tenant farmer, father of five. It has found guilt in Angie Saali, wife of Peter and mother of the five, and has decreed that she shall, for 15 years, expiate her error in prison.

But it is Peter and the children who pay.

What Peter Saali cannot understand is why the State should exact the full measure of vengeance when he, the one sinned against, has forgiven. And particularly is he perplexed that the State, to take from him and the children the wife and mother, should have called as its chief witness the man who had sought to supplant him and kill him.

Life is severe for a tenant farmer in the lowland between Marais Tempa Clair and the Mississippi, even with a wife to look after the children and help him, on occasion, with the farm work. It has always been hard for Peter Saali and his wife has always helped him, not complaining of the hardness because hardness is the accepted lot of a tenant farmer's wife.

Spring plowing and planting are late because the season is late and because, when fair days came, Saali was up at St. Charles sitting beside his wife in court, trying to get her free and expecting that she would be freed and would go back with him to the farm in the lowland and they would work side by side, as they had always worked, and that way they would make up the time that had been lost in court.

But the 12 men who had the matter in their hands were less forgiving and their verdict was that this wife, who had found life hard and had faced it at her husband's side, not complaining, bearing him healthy children and sharing his pride in them, but who wavered when temptation came, must pay the price.

Soon to Go to Penitentiary

So now Angie Saali is in St. Charles Jail, where she has been for 10 weeks, and unless a new trial is granted she will soon be taken to the penitentiary at Jefferson City to begin doing her 15 years of penance. After that the only hope will be for a parole.

While the issue of justice was in doubt and there was reason to hope that the State would not be less forgiving than the husband, Peter Saali made such makeshift provision for his children as he could, placing one here and another there, among relatives, against the time when he expected his wife would be freed and they would be reunited and make another start.

But now, facing a long separation, Saali has pulled himself together and is doing his best, with the aid of 9-year-old Marie, the little mother of his flock, and his sister, and facing the future with all the fortitude that he can command, planning to keep the family together until the erring wife and mother, when she has paid the price or obtained parole, comes home.

When she comes she will find him waiting, for he finds no fault in her, putting all the blame upon the man who came tempting her and acquitting her of complicity in the attempt to kill him.

Peter Saali and Angie Stookey grew up together in the farming community to the west of Portage. They obtained their meager education at the same district school, although Peter, five years older than Angie, finished before Angie entered. They performed their religious duties at the Portage Catholic church and attended the neighborhood parties and dances and the big event of the year in their world, the Portage barbecue.

Married 12 Years Ago

Saali was 23 and Angie 18 when they became aware of an attraction for each other. Only it was their dissimilarities that drew them together, for Peter, ruggedly handsome, was dark of complexion, quiet of demeanor and slow of speech, while Angie, blonde frankly, was gay and talkative. But there was reason that anybody could see why their contrasts of character would not neutralize and make for happy and successful married life.

Saali was industrious and steady and dependable, but he had his limitations and he had not much of the world's goods when he and Angie were married 12 years ago and at first his earnings were only those of a farmhand. Afterward he became a tenant farmer, living on different farms, and for the past four years in the shabby tenant house of an 80-acre tract three or four miles north of Portage.

The babies came fast and last year, at the age of 32, Mrs. Saali had borne five. But she was strong and it was the understood thing that babies were to be expected from time to time. The years and hardships had not changed her except to accentuate her characteristics. The vivacity of her girlhood found vent in nervously energetic domination of the household. She ruled the children with sharp and high-pitched voice and ready retribution, and if, at times, she berated her big husband he let her have her say and her way, for there were compensations in her swift changes of mood, cajoling his affection even beyond his undemonstrative disposition to bestow.

Between the frequent bearing of children there was hard work to be done. The 80 acres were too much for Saali and he could not afford to hire helpers. His wife had been brought up on a farm and was not afraid of hard work. She went with him to the fields. Saali owned no motor machinery. His plows and mowers and reapers were horse-drawn.

Peter Saali, as he came from his haymow, in patched overalls and well-worn jumper and tattered hat, as I drove into his yard, yesterday, told me with pride how Angie, last year, rode the plow and drove three horses, holding baby Paul on her lap. And, quite evidently, taking it as a matter of course, all in the day's work, for when I spoke to her about it later in St. Charles Jail she was proud, too, proud that Pete had mentioned it, and she laughed as at a pleasant recollection, recalling how baby had liked it, snuggled there in her lap, watching the three horses as they plodded along and switched their tails.

And what was Pete doing today and who was helping him, and how were the children, and did they miss her much.

Thoele Lived on Nearby Farm

Sometimes, as the custom was, Saali and his neighbors exchanged work, helping each other when the need of each for help was greatest. A mile down the Portage road lived Ora Thoele on another tenant farm. He and Saali sometimes exchanged work.

There is something of the temperamental coquette in Angie Saali. In the presence of men she is stimulated. Knowing none of the arts, she is frankly friendly and responsive and anxious to please. So when Ora Thoele came to help Pete she was that way and Ora Thoele took notice and very probably put his own construction upon her manner. He was 42 years old and married, but childless. He was not beyond being flattered by the flushed face and anxious-to-please manner of the plain but buxom Mrs. Saali, wife of his neighbor and friend and mother of five children.

The day a year ago when Ora Thoele came rattling down the St. Charles road in his Ford runabout and found Mrs. Saali beside the road, where she had fallen when her horse ran away and she was thrown out of her buggy, he remembered. For him it was opportunity for conquest. For her it was romance.

He took her to St. Charles and had her cuts and bruises attended to and then drove her home, he with a growing sense of gallantry and she with a glowing surge of coquetry.

After that Thoele found pretexts for coming often to the Saali farm. Women do not like the "man's woman" type and Mrs. Saali is that type. So the women of the neighborhood were soon talking about how Ora Thoele and Angie Saali were carrying on.

Saali saw nothing amiss in the frequent visits of Thoele and thought it was neighborly of Ora to offer to take Angie on errands to Portage in his little machine.

By and by, though, the gossip of the neighborhood reached the ears of Peter Saali. He spoke to his wife about it. It exhilarated her to have aroused his jealousy. His anger gave flavor to the intrigue. She at first was defiant, in what she conceived to be the best manner of the heroine of such an adventure, but in the end she promised that she would not see Thoele any more.

Thoele Warned to Stay Away

To Thoele Saali spoke as man to man, warning him to stay away or take the consequences. Thoele sneered and went away and after that he planned how he might do away with the man whose home he had invaded.

They might have run away together, Ora Thoele and Angie Saali. That is the usual thing. But that was too simple. There must be something grand. So there followed the brutal and bungling attempt to murder Saali, a project so fraught with certain disaster for Thoele and Mrs. Saali that it points to the plannings of childish minds.

Peter Saali, stout-hearted defender of his wife, shutting his eyes to every damaging fact, denies that there was planning. Her confession that there was, when she was arrested, he ascribes to Thoele's influence over her. In that confession, supplemental to Thoele's, she said she told Pete, the night of Jan. 31, that the horses were making a noise, so that he would go outside, where Thoele was waiting to kill him, and that after Thoele stunned him with a club she helped him throw her husband into the well, from which he was rescued by his brother, Joe, who heard the commotion and came running from his home across the road.

Saali has no recollection of what happened after he stepped into the yard, until he found himself struggling in the icy water of the well, but as to his wife suggesting that he go look after the horses, that absolutely is not true. He heard the horses making a noise and started to the barn at no suggestion from her.

Thoele was arrested and confessed. Confronted with his confession, Mrs. Saali acknowledged it was true. She, too, was arrested, but her husband procured bond for her and took her home and gave notice that he forgave her aught that needed forgiving and absolved her of all blame in connection with the attempt to kill him. "It was all Ora Thoele's fault," he said.

Neighborhood Demanded Prosecution

Thoele pleaded guilty. There was nothing else for him to do. His sentence was 30 years. The woman was indicted. Her husband stood by her, in the face of the disapproval of his neighbors, who could not understand how a man wronged as Peter Saali had been, could forgive. She pleaded not guilty and the case came on for trial. Thoele was brought back from prison to testify. He was permitted to testify, over the objections of Mrs. Saali's lawyer, Rufus Higginbotham. He might have made it easy for the woman, but it is not the fashion in the St. Charles County bottoms for a guilty man to spare the woman who shares his guilt. So it was the story of Eden over again, with Ora Thoele whimpering that the woman tempted him.

Peter Saali and his sister Mamie, who has come to help care for the children, saw to it last Sunday that they had their Easter eggs, and after the excitement of finding them had subsided they wondered whether their mother would have Easter eggs and concluded that it was doubtful, and there was a solemn little ceremony as each child brought one and placed it in Peter Saali's big hands, to be taken to their mother up there at St. Charles.

Not wanting them to see their mother, on such a day, through prison bars, he did not take them with him, but hurried away to catch the milk truck, for his horses needed rest, and carry the Easter offering, his and the children's, to the wife and mother in St. Charles Jail.

They rushed to him and climbed over him when he came back and wanted to know when their mother would be home. He could only shake his head and say he didn't know. "But we'll be waiting for her," he said.

STINNES ON HIS HAUNTED DEATH BED TRIED TO PERPETUATE HIS HOUSE AND FORTU

CHANCE OF NAME RIVALING THAT OF ROTHSCHILD AND GUGGENHEIM RESTS WITH HIS SON

When Germany's Industrial Sovereign Lay Dying, His Chief Concern Was for the Fate of the Vast Financial Kingdom Over Which He Had Ruled, and He Was Tormented in His Delirium by Visions of Communists Advancing in Hordes Upon Him to Tear Away His Wealth—In His Will He Left No Money to Any Member of His Family as an Individual, but Stipulated That All Was to Be Used in Building Up Greater Fortune.

By ROWLAND THOMAS
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN Hugo Stinnes, Germany's "Czar of Finance," lay dying, his chief concern was for the fate of the vast possessions he had amassed and the vast power he had come to wield; it was manifest he dreaded their dissipation and disappearance more than anything else that could befall.

All through his final sickness he was tormented by delusions, it was reported. In his delirium he would see hordes of communists advancing upon him, and, with contorted face and shrill voice, he would curse them till he fell back breathless and exhausted.

In his lucid intervals, his mind was still preoccupied with the same avid desire for the conservation and perpetuation of his fortune. Shortly before his death, it is said, he summoned to his bedside his wife, with her four sons and two daughters, and sought to impress on them his fixed determination that they should remain a unit in policy and action.

There must be no quarrels among them, he declared, and no divergence of interests. To each one of them he had assigned a specified place and duty.

"If any question arises," he told them, "your mother shall be the sole judge and final arbiter. You are united to build. What I have gathered together I regard merely as a foundation for the structure you and your children will erect. Let no personal considerations sway you from that goal. Marriages must not interfere and must not disrupt family unity. As you have been togther with me, you must be together after I am gone."

So as the final arbiter of the Stinnes estate, his widow, Frau Clara Hugo Stinnes (she has inserted "Hugo" in her name and in the names of all her children so that the family name is now really Hugo-Stinnes), seems destined to displace Bertha Krupp as Germany's most celebrated heiress. Many coal mines, steamship lines, newspapers, hotels and nearly every sort of factories in every continent now fall under her direction, while Bertha Krupp and her husband were interested only in metal industries and have confined their operations chiefly to manufactures in which steel forms an important part.

The will of Stinnes has not been published. But it is understood he left no money to any member of his family as an individual. He furthermore forbade luxurious life, stipulating that they must cling to the middle class standards he himself had set up. No individual must draw money from the estate except for pressing needs, and dowries, which might bring about the marriage of the daughters to fortune hunters, were not to be considered pressing needs. Money was mere material for future work and never to be used for the gratification of personal desires.

It was plain the man looked on himself as royalty does, though from a different angle. He saw himself a merchant prince and industrial sovereign. A financial kingdom was about to pass out of his reluctant hands. But, at least, if his code was followed and his maxims of life obeyed, it would remain a kingdom.

A Common Dream

How long it will remain a kingdom, or how soon disintegrate into its constituent factors, the future must decide. Many men have dreamed the same dream. Most of these ambitions have been negated in a few years. A few of them have stood up fairly well. Among these latter, one of the most striking occurred in America in the case of the Guggenheim family.

There was seven brothers of them and, with their father, they formed, perhaps, the greatest united family of money-makers this money-making country has ever produced, not even the Rockefellers being excepted. In the course of the 15 years prior to 1906 they built up an aggregate fortune estimated from as little as $100,000,000 to as much as $500,000,000. They built it up working together. Every one of them was a money-maker, but they functioned as a single unit. To observers it sometimes seemed as if the business genius, skill and industry of eight men had been merged into a single super-individual.

The minds of the seven brothers, their seven separate sets of experiences, their seven bodies all worked in absolute harmony and perfect unison and the combination brought industrial wonders to pass. Where the Rockefellers dealt in oil the Guggenheims dealt in gold, silver, copper and lead. They became the greatest producers of silver and lead in the world. They came to be ranked among the greatest gold producers. And in the copper field their single rival was a huge corporation.

They themselves worked not as a corporation but as a simple partnership. As long as Meyer Guggenheim lived the firm was M. Guggenheim & Sons. When he died in 1905 at the age of 77, the seven sons still kept their separate identities buried deep by calling themselves M. Guggenheim's Sons. They meant the very title of their family and business copartnership to stand as a monument to the father's wishes and hopes.

Born of humble parents in a little Swiss community he had started life as a journeyman mechanic. In 1843, as a poor immigrant, he had come to the United States, landing in Philadelphia all but penniless after a long voyage in a sailing ship.

To support himself he had traveled on foot all over the Pennsylvania countryside, carrying a heavy pack on his back. He was a prodigious worker and frugality was his watchword. Slender as his takings were he was saving some of them even then, for he had a great ambition. On the same ship which brought him another passenger was a young girl, Barbara Myers by name, from his own town of Langnau. She became the center of his ambitions.

His father was a widower. Barbara's mother was a widow. Soon after their arrival in America the elder Guggenheim and the widow married. Meyer Guggenheim kept unswervingly along the path of his own ambition and four years later, in 1852, he was able to marry his Barbara.

June 7, 1854, Isaac, the first of their seven sons, was born. Then came Daniel, Murry, Solomon, Benjamin, Simon and William. Three daughters also were born to the couple.

Meanwhile Meyer Guggenheim had embarked on a dangerous business venture. In the course of his peddling expeditions he had fallen with a man who had a recipe for the manufacture of a stove polish and wanted to sell the precious secret. The peddler deliberated long before he took the lure. The sum involved was not large, but it looked large to him then. Finally, in 1859, he bought the recipe and began making stove polish. He had the gift which could make a profit out of trading in second hand egg shells.

The stove polish business prospered and expanded. To it, as a side line, he added the importation of lye for use in making soft soap. His income began to swell, and he turned to fresh fields.

It had long been his hope some day to import of this country the laces made by the peasants of his native village. His business in lye increased to such proportions that he formed it into a company. Then he took an interest in a spice business, making still more money with that. In the late '60s he was at last in a financial position to embark in the business of his dreams. He began by importing laces, but soon found himself dealing also in embroideries of all kinds. Within a few years his firm was known all over the United States by dealers in such goods.

He never after that stood on financial thin ice. But his active mind was always on the alert for new avenues of business. He was led into many ventures and one of these chance transactions was the accidental cause of his becoming, with his sons, one of the greatest mine owners, developed and smelters in the world.

His Lucky Chance

In the early '80s he loaned some money to a man who owned a mine at Leadville, Colo. The debtor's business went to smash; the mines were sold under foreclosure of mortgages, Meyer Guggenheim, much to his disgust, becoming their new owner. He sent one of his sons to the Rockies to see what could be done, and the young man returned insisting that the mining industry could be made most productive.

Soon the coulective Guggenheims had two mines in active operation, and gradually their holdings of this sort were extended. Meyer Guggenheim was among the first to take American capital into Mexico for the development of that country's mineral resources. His three younger sons were put in charge of the mining ventures. Smelters were built, one after another, till a chain of them extended across the West.

It was 1889 when Meyer Guggenheim moved his business and family to New York and the partnership was formed. Each son, as he reached majority, was given a practical business education under the father's immediate eye.

By the middle nineties the mining and smelting properties became so extensive that all other business interests were abandoned and, a few years later, Meyer Guggenheim was able to retire, confident that his sons would steer the family ship to her port.

It was one of his fixed rules that the majority should rule on all questions and its decision be binding on the partners in all discussions of business procedure. No step of importance could be taken till each had presented his views. Then, whatever the majority might agree on would be accepted by all. Thus disagreement was avoided and brotherly cohesion was assured.

Not as Hopeful

Little wonder that after their father's retirement and his later death the brothers continued to function in unison and began teaching the same lesson of wisdom to the second generation which had now begun to come along. Sons were born to all of them save William, the youngest, and, as these boys grew old enough, they were all put through the School of Mines at Columbia and then thrust into harness in the mining country to learn the practical end of the mining and smelting industry.

The firm has now become Guggenheim Brothers, and the majority of the surviving sons of Meyer, with their sons, conduct it in accordance with the business precepts which its founder discovered and taught.

The outlook for the Stinnes enterprises seems hardly as hopeful. For one thing, they are vastly more variegated. The German magnate owned a little of almost everything in the Reich, from a fleet of ships, through a chain of hotels, down to, or up to, a string of newspapers. For another thing, unlike Meyer Guggenheim, who early made partners of sons, Stinnes was retentive and secretive. In consequence, no one is prepared to wield his power as he wielded it. He never took any one of his children, or his associates, sufficiently into his confidence for them to carry on with clear understanding the business enterprises he had built up, or absorbed, within the brief space of a few years.

He left behind him no formed and [illegible] team comparable to that composed of [illegible] en Guggenheim brothers at the time of [illegible] father's death. Immediate management of his estate devolves in part on the "[illegible] of employes he announced before he lost consciousness—one man for coal, another for oil, two more for shipping and for [illegible] and the Orient—and in part on the two eldest of his sons, Hugo and Edmund. [illegible] for some time past has been in charge, subject to his father's constant and jealous [illegible] tation, of the family's shipping interests in Hamburg, while Edmund, the elder, who is a doctor of philosophy and prefers [illegible] to business activity, has been resident director of the Stinnes offices in Berlin.

Dictatorial, Arbitrary

Finally, where Meyer Guggenheim was [illegible] erant and a firm believer in the principle of majority control, Stinnes showed himself [illegible] tatorial and arbitrary by the complete restrictions with which he sought to control his family after he was gone and by his bestowing of final decisive power on a single individual, his widow.

The contest between the outlook of these men, the German and the Swiss-[illegible] Jew, is striking and interesting.

If mere lapse of time is to be taken as a criterion, the most successful of all attempts to establish a permanent financial dynasty has been that of the Rothschild family, which almost a century and a half now since founder of its fortunes. Mayer Amschel Rothschild, in 1760, set up for himself in banking and bullion-brokerage business in his native city of Frankfort-on-the-Main, Germany.

Indirectly, he got his start out of the hire of Hessian troops to the British Government for the suppression of the American revolution, through acting as agent for the landgrave of Hesse-Cassel, who had made the largest private fortune in the Europe of his day by thus exploiting his subjects.

He had a family of several daughters and five sons, of whom the oldest, Amschel, succeeded him in the management of the Frankfort banking house. The third son, [illegible] removed to London, became a British subject and made a great profit by using money deposited with him to purchase of [illegible] worth of gold, which he knew would be needed for the peninsular campaign of Wellington. It also was reported that he profited heavily by the British victory at Waterloo.

The second son was named Salomon Rothschild. He went to Vienna and set up a banking and gold brokerage business. The fourth son, Karl, went to Naples on a similar errand, and the fifth son, James (or Jacob), went to Paris and became the founder of the French succession of the Rothschild.

Not all these undertakings prospered permanently. The Rothschild house in Naples was suspended as long ago as 1861. The parent house in Frankfort was dissolved in 1901. The Austrian, French and English establishments are still in active operation and, of course, the name of the family, to a part of civilized mankind, is synonymous with vast and enduring wealth.

Despite all this, however, the Rothschild case does not furnish a strict parallel with the brotherly partnership of the Guggenheims or the ambition of Stinnes to found a controlling industrial dynasty in Germany. For one thing, the Rothschilds have been primarily bankers, concerned with providing capital at a profit for the [illegible] and mercantile enterprises of others. They have functioned, less as one thoroughly unified family group, than as any [illegible] banking houses might function, with [illegible] now another of their branches serving as principal base of operations.

WHY 'THE THAW STORY' HAS HELD ITS PLACE IN PUBLIC INTEREST FOR 18 YEARS

A Vain and Pretty Girl, a Great Architect, a Vicious Wastrel, and Many Million Dollars

From Point of View of Sustained Popular Appeal, It Was the Greatest "Story" in Newspaper History and Had More Daily Followers Than Any Other Case on Record—Formed a Rare Combination of Those News Elements in Which the Reading Public Finds Most Interest, Irregular Romance, Wealth, High Position and Crime—Recent Developments Indicate More Is Yet to Be Written.

THIS is the story of a story, the history of a tale that began with a brief news bulletin on the night of June 25, 1906, when Harry K. Thaw shot and killed Stanford White, and which developed and expanded and lengthened in a multitude of ramifications until it became the greatest "story" in newspaper history, in point of popular appeal, sustained interest and circulation figures. There have been bigger stories, of course, for the moment—bigger in that they were based on bigger events—but never once has there been a running narrative that held at the start so many vital elements of news appeal, and that ran so long and that developed so many striking progressions. Today, nearly 18 years after it started, it is still developing new angles out of the old and still holding public interest, as it bids fair to continue to do, so long as any of its principals are alive.

Probably in no other place is public interest in any world event mirrored so sharply as it is in the circulation records of newspapers. The newspapers print what the public indicates it wants to read, and the public's approval or disapproval is reflected through the records of the counting rooms. By this criterion of appraisal, then, the killing of Stanford White, coupled with the trial of Thaw, was without question the greatest single event in all time, if public interest in an event has anything to do with its greatness. Circulation managers, not on one paper alone, but on virtually all newspapers which were in operation at the time the case began, still point to the vast peak in circulation that mounted during those weeks and months while two women, a battery of high-priced lawyers and millions of dollars of wealth were fighting to save Thaw from the electric chair and while a jury was listening daily to testimony which was sometimes tearful, sometimes dramatic and nearly always shocking.

Rare Combination of News Elements

But the Thaw story, which is now in the limelight again because of the eccentric millionaire's successful efforts to gain his freedom from an asylum and his former wife's efforts to keep him there, was a remarkable case in other respects than its effect on circulation figures. It was most remarkable, perhaps, for its rare combination of vital news qualities. Such elements as illicit romance, crime resulting from such romance, wealth, high social position and mystery never fail to give a story wide appeal. And with the possible exception of mystery, the Thaw story had them all. In setting, cast of characters, motives and climaxes it formed a real-life drama of an intensity seldom paralleled and it was no wonder that it should cause endless discussion and speculation, that it should hold a reader breathless over his paper one day and bring him back for another before press time the next, while at the same time educating readers where none had grown before.

To begin with, there was the wealth of the Thaw family—possibly a hundred million dollars of it—and an unlimited amount of the fortune consecrated to the mission of saving Harry's neck. Then in the social scale the Thaws held a place that insured interest in the mere mention of their name in any connection whatever. One sister of Harry was the Countess of Yarmouth, thus intriguing more than ordinary attention from the other side of the Atlantic, and another sister was the wife of George Lauder Carnegie. These family connections of the girls, coupled with their late father's fame as a captain of finance, might have made the Thaw name known to all the country, even if Harry had not taken care of that detail for himself.

But he had taken care of it. As a matter of fact, his own name was a familiar one in the public print long before that fatal night of June, 1906. While still in school he had figured in escapades that stamped him as a spendthrift and a spendthrift. He had entertained entire choruses of "girl shows"; he had fallen out with his teachers; he had staged fist fights with porters, been arrested for speeding and had ridden his horse through the doors of exclusive clubs until his notoriety was nation-wide. Then, as a prelude to the killing, had come his much-talked-of affair with the dancer, Evelyn Nesbit, his jealousy of other men's attentions to her, his elopement with her to Paris, speculation on both sides of the Atlantic as to what would happen if he tried to take her home to his mother as Mrs. Thaw, and the subsequent storm and reconciliation that occurred when the couple did return to America.

All of these things, along with Stanford White's real fame as an architect and his ill fame as a pursuer of young girls of the stage, were thoroughly acquainted the public with as central figures of the drama before the curtain rose on the first act. When it did rise, it revealed the setting that met the eyes of a country already engrossed with expectation of tragedy or scandal or both. The stage was no other than the Madison Square Roof Garden, probably the most conspicuous spot in all New York in point of news value, in addition to the fact that the structure itself was the architectural masterpiece of the man who was to be the victim.

A fiction writer would hardly have dared to construct his plot with such choice material lest his readers should condemn it as an improbable action. But this time truth was to be stranger and decidedly more melodramatic than fiction. The story opened with the sound of a pistol shot, whose reverberations followers of the case never forgot during the succeeding weeks, months and years when they were engaged with the more immediate shocks resulting from Evelyn Nesbit's confessions and with their own speculations concerning the mental condition of Thaw and his consequent guilt or innocence as the slayer.

Thaw and his wife, for a year or two previous to the tragedy, had been passing the quietest days of their unquiet career. Following their return from Europe, they had been remarried in Pittsburg, with the elder Mrs. Thaw's approval, and had responded with indifferent success to her efforts to get them on a firm footing in Pittsburg society. But this sort of life had failed to appease their action-craving nerves, and June, 1906, found them spending much time in New York where lights were brighter and frivolities more frivolous than they were in the Pennsylvania city. Thaw was known to be morose at times and there were reports of some kind of trouble, but the two seemed deeply attached to each other.

Thaw photographed in 1913 when waiting to testify in the Anhut bribery case.

On the evening of June 25 they went to a new musical comedy called "Mamselle Champagne," which had just opened on the Madison Square Garden Roof. While the performance was in full swing Stanford White entered with a party of friends and sat down at a table to watch the dancing girls on the stage. Hardly had he been seated when Thaw, who had been walking up and down the floor as if looking for someone, strolled casually over to his table, drew a revolver and, without a word, shot him three times through the head and body. White fell dead instantly. Apparently he didn't live long enough to recognize his slayer or to realize what had happened to him. So quietly did the whole affair occur, in fact, that most of the audience at first thought the shots were a part of the horseplay on the stage and realized a killing had taken place only when persons seated near White's table began to gather around his body.

"I'll Stick by You, Harry"

Little was said that night by either Thaw or his wife, but in the few words that did fall from their lips the public got enough to clinch its interest in what was coming later. Thaw, when seized by the police, was heard to mutter something about White ruining his wife and getting what was coming to him. Evelyn, who had rushed to him, throwing her arms about his neck, had cried: "I'll stick by you, Harry." That was a promise that was expected to bring some sensational testimony, and it did.

Within a few minutes after the killing, Thaw apparently started planning for his freedom. He claimed that he had acted in accordance with the "unwritten law," and also that he had done the world a service instead of a wrong in ridding it of a monster who "preyed on young girls," and who, he declared, had used his studio in the Madison Square Garden tower as a den to which to entice pretty actresses. And, whatever should happen, he seemed to place supreme confidence in the power of the Thaw millions to save him from any serious consequences of his act.

EVELYN NESBIT.
As she appeared as a dancer several years ago. At the right is a photograph showing her as she appeared in recent years after her struggle with the drug habit.

All this was followed closely by newspaper readers, as was the account of his indictment for murder in the first degree two days after the shooting; the account of his imprisonment in New York and his annoyance caused by the death groans of a fellow prisoner, and stories of his quarrels with his lawyers, who wished to set up an insanity plea for him. Along with a column or two a day of these accounts came other columns reviewing affairs of other New York millionaires and actresses, giving chauffeurs' tales of Evelyn Nesbit's relations with various men, night rides and friendship with White after, as well as before, her marriage, and quoting opinions of numerous Judges and lawyers on the application of the "unwritten law" in real and hypothetical cases. When the trial finally opened, early in 1907, with Delphin M. Delmas of California in charge of the defense, the country was all set for the long-awaited climax.

Evelyn Nesbit and her son photographed recently at Atlantic City.

Here arrived Evelyn's opportunity to keep her promise to stick by Thaw. And whatever the estimate of her the public may have found cause to form later, it must at least give her credit for that. For she kept it, knowing perfectly well all the time that so soon as she saved Harry from the chair, if indeed she could, she would be no longer a pet of the family, but scorned as an outcast, a moral leper. For days during the 12 weeks that the case was before the jury she sat on the witness stand baring her life. And what a life it was!

Hung Jury After 12 Weeks' Trial

She told in ruinous detail how she had come to New York from Pittsburg as an artists' model at the age of 16 and met White, who was then at the height of his brilliant career; how he had lured her to his apartment, drugged her, betrayed her and from that time forward kept her under his influence, getting her small parts from time to time on the stage until 1902, when Thaw first met her.

After Thaw became attentive to her, she said, White tried to get her away by sending her to a private school at Pompton, N. J. When Thaw followed her there he sent her to Paris and Thaw followed her again. Before marrying Harry, she said, she finally told him of her association with White and thus caused the shock which, the defense contended, plunged him in melancholy and finally drove him to kill her betrayer.

These main facts with voluminous trimmings and details were coming out for weeks, and then, after the jury had been out 47 hours, it disagreed. The trial had to be held all over. And through the second Evelyn stood by Thaw as she had done in the first.

After the first ordeal Thaw apparently realized how near he had been to the electric chair, and when the second began was more willing to abide by his attorneys' judgment. A plea of insanity was advanced and the jury acquitted him, sending him to Matteawan, asylum for the criminal insane.

Exhumations of the famous case have been frequently and regularly repeated since the close of that second trial. Hardly for a month have both the principals been completely out of the daily news during the last 18 years. One angle that has constantly held attention was Thaw's intermittent fight for freedom, which finally has seemingly been successful. Another was Evelyn Nesbit's scandals and her struggles with poverty and the drug habit, as she moved erratically down the slope.

Thaw's Escape From Asylum

Thaw first won his freedom from Matteawan in 1913 when he escaped through an open gate one August morning and fled to Canada in a waiting automobile. Three days later he was arrested in Quebec and deported as an undesirable alien, but a hearing was held for him in Concord, N. H., which resulted in his being formally released as sane. That period of freedom lasted until 1917. During the four years Thaw occupied himself by traveling, engaging in the real estate business in Pittsburg, dabbling in politics and, in 1916, figuring in the courts again in a divorce suit against Evelyn Nesbit who had been estranged from him since his entry into Matteawan.

After the divorce, Evelyn, hard up, returned to the stage to garner what profit she could from her notoriety. For a time she had some success, appearing in London and New York with Jack Clifford, whom she later married. But she had never had much talent as an actress to begin with and notoriety proved to be a poor substitute. She went from bad to worse, attempted to make a living by operating a tea room, failed, was evicted for non-payment of rent, attempted suicide and even failed in that because of taking an overdose of poison. Next she became a victim of the morphine habit which for a long time threatened to complete her downfall, but somehow she managed to shake it off. Through all her adversities she declared that Thaw was the father of her son, whom she called Russell Thaw, and that at the proper time she would "tie up the Thaw estate." Apparently she deemed Thaw's recent move for his freedom the signal to start the "tieing up" process, for her opposition to his action was based on the claim that he would dissipate what remained of his fortune, in which her son, now 13 years old, had inheritance rights.

It was in January, 1917, that Thaw lost for the second time the liberty he has just now regained. Following his attempt to cut his throat after being indicted on a charge of brutally beating Frederick Gump Jr., a Kansas City boy, he was again adjudged insane and confined in the Pennsylvania Hospital for Mental and Nervous Diseases. His mother, who is declared to have spent more than $1,000,000 in court battles for her son, settled with the Gump boy's father for $25,000.

Not until the recent hearing was Harry's mother, now past 82, able to help him again, but she was on hand in this as she had always been before, faithful to the end. Her appearance in court was another of the long case's dramatic features, for against her this time appeared the younger woman, also broken and lined, who once fought side by side with her to save Harry from the chair.

With Thaw's release, the story stands written for the present. But there is little telling what chapters the future may bring forth. For one thing, the indictment for assault and battery which was brought against Thaw at the time of the Gump affair is still pending. Now that he has been declared sane, he may still be prosecuted on that. Then there is still Evelyn Nesbit's promise to "tie up the Thaw estate" for Russell.

Who can say when the "Thaw story" will finally end?

Harry K. Thaw as he appears today at the age of 54.

TURKS ELIMINATE GREEK NAMES OF MINOR PLACES

Angora, However, Presents Puzzle, for It Is of Hellenic Origin—Language Conference Called.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)

ANGORA, Turkey, April 10.—Rabid Turkish Nationalists who are anxious to rid Turkey of all foreign names and to eliminate all foreign words from the Turkish language, have struck a snag in the name of the capital itself. Angora is only a slight modification of the old Greek name Ancyra.

As Greek names are the worst sort of red rags to fire-eating Turkish Nationalists, many of the younger leaders wanted to change the name of the capital. Tunaly Kilmi Bey, the poet, has been active in the campaign for the eradication of Greek names, but less idealistic party men apparently have a feeling that there are many important affairs of state that should be attended to before a wholesale alteration of names is attempted.

Greek names of unimportant places have been ruthlessly scrapped. The Prince's Islands in the Sea of Marmora, off Constantinople, which bore the Greek names Proti, Halki and Prinkipo, are now called Kinali, Burgas and Heybely. Street names also have been changed quite generally in Constantinople. In Kadikoi, which lies on the opposite side of the Bosporus from Constantinople, 21 Greek street names were altered to Turkish names.

A conference has been called to consider the purification of the Turkish language by the elimination of Arabic and Persian words, with a view to making Turkish the universal means of communication for all Mohammedans.

Rabbit Killed by Crows.

Correspondence of the Associated Press

HAMBURG, Germany, April 15.—A flock of crows attacked, killed and ate a hare near Tarp, according to observers who produced bits of fur and bone as proof. They say a single crow discovered the hare in an open field. The bird flew about the animal and called frantically until it had recruited 12 more and the flock then descended on the hare and pecked it to death in a few minutes.

Planes to Carry 14 Passengers.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 15.—Designed to fly at 100 miles an hour with 800 horsepower engines, carry 14 passengers and complete the journey between London and Brussels in less than two hours, four giant airplanes of British design are nearly completed at a factory near Brussels. A larger type of the machine is being built with three engines, for a Belgian air service up the River Congo.

Chicago Begins Daylight Saving Time.

CHICAGO, April 26.—Daylight saving time will go into effect here at 2 a. m. tomorrow, when clocks will be set ahead one hour. It will be observed until the last Sunday in September. An attempt was made in the State Legislature last year to abolish daylight saving time in Chicago, supported primarily by agricultural and downstate interests. It was defeated.

Sacred Cantata to be Given.

A sacred cantata, "Jesus Lives," will be given by the choir of the Salem Reformed Church, Fourteenth street and Sullivan avenue, this evening at 7:45 o'clock.

To Make Rich Red Blood
Revitalize your worn-out exhausted nerves and increase your strength and endurance by taking Organic iron; not metallic iron which people usually take, but pure organic iron. Nuxated Iron—which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lettuce and apples. One dose of Nuxated Iron is said to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach or one quart of green vegetables or half a bushel of apples. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat. Nuxated Iron is partially predigested and ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation. Enriches the blood, while metallic iron is said to often injure it from the action of strong acids on some forms of iron filings.
Over 4,000,000 people annually use Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth or disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood, or your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results.
Beware of substitutes. Always insist on having genuine organic iron—Nuxated Iron. Look for the letters N. I. on every bottle. Sold by all druggists.

DUKE OF SAGAN GOT TITLE FROM KAISER

Defeat of Germany in War, However, Saved Him from Prussian Oath.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, April 26.—One of the minor results of the world war and the abdication of the former German Emperor is that young Howard De Talleyrand-Perigord, son of Prince Helde de Sagan, Duke of Talleyrand-Perigord, and the former Anna Gould, the American heiress, will not be called on to carry out the conditions under which he became Herzog or Duke of Sagan, a principality in Brandenburg and Silesia, Germany.

During a trial held in Paris, in 1917, it was established that the former German Emperor in 1911, invested the boy, then two years old, with the title which his father had borne before he succeeded to the dukedom, but on condition the lad, when he became of age, should take the oath of fidelity to the King of Prussia and swear to fulfill his feudal duties as head of the Sagan principality, which was equivalent to becoming a direct vassal of the King of Prussia.

Young Duke Retains Title.

The abdication of the German Emperor and the abolition of kingships in Germany have made it unnecessary for the young duke to fulfill the conditions, although retaining the title.

The Paris trial arose from the sale of the Talleyrand historic Paris mansion to Jacques Seligman, in 1908, for 1,405,000 francs, the purchaser converting the spacious halls into showrooms for the antiquities in which he dealt. Seligman placed an inscription over two entrances to the mansion, "former Sagan mansion," and the Talleyrand family went to the courts to have the inscription removed and to prevent the dealer from using the name Sagan on letterheads, bills and advertisements, demanding 50,000 francs damages.

Seligman's Action Upheld.

It was argued in behalf of Seligman that the Talleyrand family had no right to the name Sagan, that the king of Prussia gave the Sagan title first to the Duchess Dorothea Talleyrand in 1646, with hereditary rights, and that Napoleon III had authorized Count Bonon de Talleyrand to use the title of Prince Sagan in 1858, but that the authorization was strictly personal and no subsequent descendant had the right to use the title unless he had registered at the French Ministry of Justice. This all the descendants had neglected to do. The court adopted Seligman's viewpoint and permitted the inscriptions to remain on the former ducal abode.

In view of recent reports that the Talleyrand family was considering sale of the principality of Sagan, it is pointed out that the title is not involved and that young Howard de Talleyrand-Perigord will become Prince de Sagan upon the death of his father.

Filipinos Honor Woodrow Wilson.

BAGUIO, Philippine Islands, March 27.—The late Woodrow Wilson's name is to be perpetuated by the local town council, which has just adopted a resolution changing the name of Kisad Road, one of the principal thoroughfares of Baguio, to "Wilson Road." The resolution says: "Mr. Wilson's policy toward the Philippine Islands during his entire term of office was characterized by a genuine sympathy for the Filipino people and their ideals."

Desolate Island Infested With Mice.

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 26.—Carrington Island, a small piece of land in the Great Salt Lake, on which there is an abundant supply of roofing slate, is infested with mice, according to Eli F. Taylor of the United States land office here. There is no fresh water and no other sign of life on the island except the mice, and how they manage to survive is a mystery.

A variety of models

Come and see the complete line of Red Star Oil Stoves here during this demonstration, from the inexpensive little four-burner model that is ideal for campers, to the splendid cabinet model finished in white porcelain and black enamel—as beautiful and convenient as a gas range.

End the Pain By Ending the Cause

Remarkable Discovery Promises Quick Relief From RHEUMATISM, GOUT NEURITIS, NEURALGIA

Sold Under Written Guarantee of Satisfaction or Money Back

RHEUMATISM, neuritis, neuralgia, and gout, in an enormous number of cases, are due to one cause, internal infection, which throws off poisons that are carried by the blood to joints, muscles or nerves, where they set up inflammation and cause intense pain. German Chemistry that has given the world Aspirin for headache pain and Novocain for painless dentistry has now come forward with another discovery that quickly ends muscle, joint and nerve pain—it is a penetrating oil to rub over the affected part, which is blended to neutralize the poisons just as bicarbonate of soda neutralizes acid stomach, and gives instant relief. It is called Rub-My-Tism and is sold under an absolute written, money-back guarantee.

Anniversary Sale Price, $1.50 bottle, $1.29

AUTO INFORMATION — ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH — RADIO FEATURES

PART SIX. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 27, 1924. PAGES 21—32

SECOND ANNUAL RED TAG SALE IS COMING

Automobile Dealers to Put on Used Car Sale During Week of May 4-11.

During the week of May 4 to 11, automobile dealers throughout the city will put on their second annual red tag sale of used cars.

The first of these sales was held last June and several hundred cars were sold by the motor car trade. At that time, red tags were placed on all cars, showrooms were specially decorated with signs, the windows were plastered with posters and the sale was declared by leading dealers to have been an unqualified success.

Just as was the case last year, the Post-Dispatch this year will handle the promotion of the sale. A cup will be offered the dealer making the best showing.

The public was keenly interested in the sale last year and showed its interest by making the week a record-breaker with many firms. This year, it is expected that St. Louisans will show like interest and that great numbers of St. Louisans will become motor car owners that week.

George W. Sutton Jr. is the author of the title, "The Road to Happiness," chosen as best among a number submitted by prominent writers for a new highway film produced under the guidance of the United States Bureau of Public roads.

This picture was complete in everything but a name some months ago, but its producers were unable to hit upon any title which seemed to just fit the story.

They solved the matter by giving the first showing of the picture at the Motor Roadeo Dinner in New York, where a number of the best-known feature writers of the country were gathered together to discuss highway subjects.

Members of the audience were invited to submit titles, and the Sutton contribution was the one recently chosen as best fitting the story.

The picture tells the story of a farm boy who is inspired with the desire to have better roads in his community. He wins the scholarship which includes a trip to Washington, where he meets the President (President Coolidge appears in this scene). The boy then goes on to further successes which the picture details.

Automobile Dealers Nominate Officers—to Be Elected at Annual Meeting Monday, May 12.

The annual meeting of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association at which officers for the ensuing year will be elected will be held Monday, May 12. H. F. Fahrenkrog, who is the retiring president, is planning to make this the star meeting of the year and to invite not only the heads of firms, but salesmanagers and salesmen. A speaker of national reputation has been secured and there will be amusement features following and during the dinner.

A Nominating Committee, recently appointed consisting of H. C. Merry of the Wilson Motor Car Co., E. A. Hatfield of the Mississippi Valley Motor Co. and I. G. McNiece of the McNiece Motor Co. has made its report submitting list of nominees for the various offices.

Under the requirements of the by-laws of the association two tickets have been nominated. For president, the rival candidates will be F. C. McDonald of the Southwest Nash Co. and George Weber of the Weber Implement & Automobile Co. For vice-president, the nominees are George M. Berry of the Berry Motor Car Co. and James E. Newell of the Newell Motor Car Co. For treasurer, W. L. Johnson of the Johnson Automobile Co. and S. B. Ward of the Ward Motor Co. are the selections. Six directors are to be elected, three of them to serve two years and three to serve one year. Under the rule there are 12 nominees for the six vacancies and the three who receive the highest number of votes will serve two years and the three securing the next highest number of votes will fill the one-year term.

The 12 nominees for directors from which six are to be elected are: A. E. Archer of the MacCarthy-Archer Automobile Co., John Boe of the St. Louis Motor Car Co., P. H. Brockman of the De Luxe Automobile Co., W. R. Ellis of the J. I. Case T. M. Co., H. F. Fahrenkrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co., R. C. Frampton of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., S. C. Igou of the Igou Motor Co., Harry Newman of Harry Newman Nash, Inc., George S. Schroeder of the Schroeder Motor Co., H. W. Spalding of the Spalding Motor Co., A. E. Spielberg of the Franklin Motor Car Co. and Walter Vesper of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co.

OVERLAND USED ON HIGHEST HIGHWAY

Tribute was paid to the Overland motor by the State Highway Department of Colorado through the selection of an Overland Spad for the preliminary work on the new Mt. Evans Auto Highway, which will have the distinction, when completed, of being the highest automobile roadway in the world, exceeding in altitude that of Pike's Peak by several hundred feet.

This car is now used in survey work which requires operation over almost inaccessible grades, partially constructed roads and even to points which have not yet been touched by a grading crew.

The sale of the Spad was completed only after exhaustive tests with light cars over some of the roughest roads within the State boundaries. It is the first Overland ever purchased for this work by the Colorado State Highway Commissioners, but since it preliminary showing it has been decided that future replacements for mountain work would be filled with Overlands.

COACH RECOGNIZED BY AUTO ENGINEERS

Recognized by the Society of Automobile Engineers, a new type of motor car, the coach, has come into the industry to take its place along with the touring car, the roadster, the limousine and the sedan.

The coach, now officially recognized by authorities within the industry, was introduced to the public in 1921 by the Hudson Motor Car Co. The first coach was on the Essex chassis. It proved so successful that very shortly afterward a similar body was mounted on the standard chassis of the Hudson super-six.

"I have a definition for the coach, too," declares R. C. Frampton of the Hudson-Frampton Co., Hudson-Essex distributor. "The coach is an enclosed car which fits the needs of the average family and which gives closed car comforts in all seasons at open car costs. It is this all-weather utility which has made the coach so popular."

Eleven Champions in One Day.

The Champion Body Co., distributors of closed bodies for Fords, report the sale last week of 11 bodies in one day. According to George Smith Jr. of the concern this is indicative of the present demand for such special bodies and shows the desire of many Ford owners to dress up their cars.

AUTO CLUB TO GIVE STOP SIGNS TO CITY

A boulevard stop sign that can be seen day and night, and in twilight, for a distance of 250 feet, and which at night reflects any light from any angle, has been perfected, it was announced by William L. Patterson, Public Safety Engineer of the St. Louis Safety Council at the monthly meeting of the St. Louis Automobile Club, of which Albert Von Hoffmann is president, at the Western Rowing Club Thursday evening, April 24, and 1000 of these signs will be presented to the city by the club.

The sign has been OKd by the St. Louis Safety Council, and the St. Louis Traffic Council, created under the recently enacted codification of Municipal traffic ordinances, has accepted the offer of the St. Louis Automobile Club to provide 1000 of them to mark all boulevard stops in the city, the city government to install and keep them in repair.

Signs will also be placed at an early date for brake and headlight testing. Attendance at the meeting totaled 492. Mayor Kiel will address the club at its next meeting, Thursday evening, May 22.

Seventy-five per cent of all Franklin cars built in the past 22 years are still running, according to S. E. Ackerman, sales manager of the Franklin Automobile Co.

"Drive"

the new V-63

BECAUSE of its known leadership, the Cadillac has been purchased with greater confidence than almost any other automobile.

People have bought this car much as they would buy Government Bonds—with unquestioning trust in its value and dependability.

In many instances, they have even dispensed with demonstration rides, taking the position that the Cadillac has been demonstrated and that its very name denotes its quality.

Naturally, the New V-63 has been purchased in this same manner—with the same implicit confidence in Cadillac performance based on its reputation.

But almost immediately, the New V-63 owner discovers this striking truth—that fine and efficient as have been past Cadillac types, and enviable as has been their reputation, they nevertheless afforded him no adequate criterion of the quality of this new car.

The New V-63 simply cannot be compared with previous Cadillacs—splendid as was their performance—

And certainly not with any other automobile, either foreign or American.

The New V-63 is extraordinarily different—must be judged by new standards—higher than have ever before been associated with a motor car.

This difference is in vital phases of performance. It is due chiefly to Cadillac's new harmonized and balanced 90° V-Type eight cylinder engine, and can be realized only by riding in the car.

Consequently, even though you have taken for granted the surpassing quality of Cadillac performance—Drive the New V-63.

The New Stewart Electric Windshield Cleaner

Here at last! An automatic windshield cleaner, electrically operated, independent of the engine, so that "stepping on the gas" has no effect on its powerful, steady sweep.

The Stewart cleans the glass thoroughly, with a clock-like regularity, at all times.

Relieves the driver of the trouble and danger of taking a hand off the wheel to wipe the glass clear, when driving on wet, slippery streets.

For your safety and convenience ask your garage-man or accessory dealer to install the electric Stewart Windshield Cleaner. Its operation is not a "drag" on the battery and—you can depend on it. It is always on the job. Look for the name Stewart.

RUMORS FREQUENT IN AUTO INDUSTRY

F. W. A. Vesper Calls Attention to This Peculiarity—Spikes Rumor That Buick Will Discard Valve-in-head Motor.

"There is probably no other business in existence today where rumors and unfounded information springs into being and circulates as rapidly as in the automobile industry," says F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper Buick Co.

"As an instance of this, a rumor has been circulated recently to the effect that Buick intends to discontinue the valve-in-head motor in the near future and this story has been repeated so frequently, although without foundation or authority, that it has finally reached the ears of H. H. Bassett, president of the Buick Motor Co.

"In response to an inquiry addressed to him by G. G. G. Peckham of the Ohio-Buick Co., Cleveland, O., Mr. Bassett wrote the following letter:

"'In reply to your inquiry of yesterday, there is absolutely no foundation whatsoever to the report being circulated that Buick is going to use L-hear engine.

"'Twenty years' experience with the valve-in-the-head type motor has conclusively proven to us its great superiority in economy of operation, excess power over other types and long life with freedom from trouble. No, indeed! We shall never give up the great advantage we have enjoyed so long in this type of motor.

"'On my recent trip abroad I was greatly gratified to see many of the higher priced foreign cars adopting the valve-in-the-head principle along with cantilever spring suspension.'

"The first Buick automobile was built in 1903 and was given the name 'Buick' because the car was equipped with a valve-in-head type motor developed for automobile purposes from a Marine motor of this type that had been built for a number of years by David Buick. Contrary to stories that had been circulated as to the origin of the name 'Buick,' it has the name of a family and not a trade name that was conjured up to fit the product of an automobile factory."

BALLOON TIRES ON ALL VELIE MODELS

Balloon tires and disc wheels have been made standard, optional equipment by the Velie Motors Corporation on their entire list of body types, according to an announcement received yesterday by the Benjamin Motor Co. from F. E. Bradfield, vice president of the corporation, in charge of sales.

Early this year the company announced a new line to sell in the low-priced, six-cylinder group and these body types carried cord tires and wood artillery wheels as standard equipment. The addition of the disc wheels and the balloon tire was made, Mr. Bradfield said, as the result of great strides made in the manufacture of this type of tire in the last 90 days.

COLE INVESTIGATING BALLOON TIRE MILEAGE

Since the adoption of balloon tires by J. J. Cole, over a year ago, the vogue of the big air-cushion principle has grown so swiftly that today it is difficult to interest a prospective purchaser in a demonstration unless the car rolls on balloon tires. The Cole Motor Car Co. of Indianapolis is conducting an investigation of its owners with an idea to determine what the average mileage has been this past year on Firestone balloon tires which the Cole company uses exclusively, according to word just received by Jerome J. Benjamin of the Benjamin Motor Co.

Each year it has been customary for the Cole company to send its owners a questionaire. For three years prior to the adoption of balloon tires, the United States average mileage on five-inch cord tires on Cole cars was 19,000 miles.

Although the returns are as yet not all in on the balloon tire investigation, the reports so far indicate that better than 25,000 miles average will be a conservative estimation before an official tabulation is made.

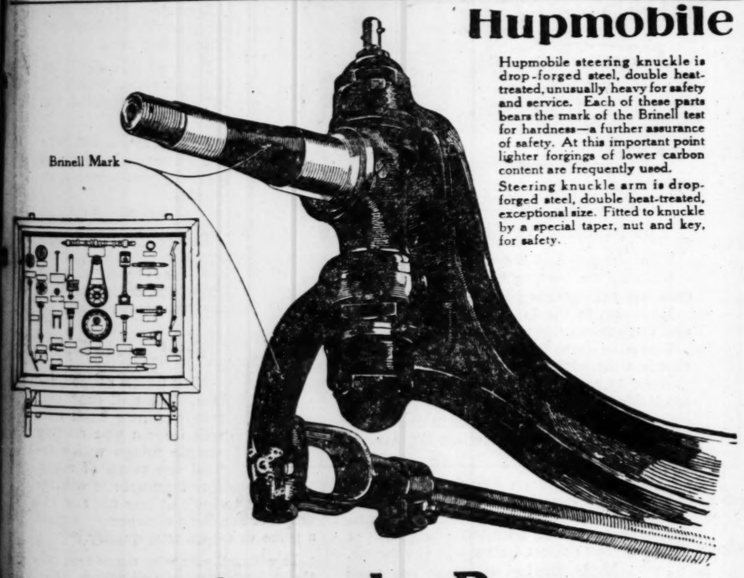
Hupmobile



Hupmobile steering knuckle is drop-forged steel, double heat-treated, unusually heavy for safety and service. Each of these parts bears the mark of the Brinell test for hardness—a further assurance of safety. At this important point lighter forgings of lower carbon content are frequently used.

Steering knuckle arm is drop-forged steel, double heat-treated, exceptional size. Fitted to knuckle by a special taper, nut and key, for safety.

Profit to the Buyer

It Is Bound Up in the Finer Quality of Hupmobile Parts

Hupmobile could not use materials less fine—and still be Hupmobile.

For the very heart and soul of Hupmobile success is the way it stands up—year after year—at astonishing low cost.

Let it try to cheapen any of its finely built parts and it would at once lose that superiority. It would lose many of the elements which now enable it to give such widespread and complete owner-satisfaction. So in the end, it would not profit the buyer.

The motor car question, as we see it, comes down to this.

The buyer can pay the Hupmobile price, safe in the assurance that a higher price cannot bring him anything higher than the Hupmobile in honest quality.

Or, he can pay less than the Hupmobile price, and content himself with less than Hupmobile quality and less than Hupmobile satisfaction.

It will cost you nothing but the time you put in, to come in and see Hupmobile quality with your own eyes, as shown by our Parts Display. And it is almost certain to save you money on the next car you buy.

LATEX IMPORTS ARE INCREASING RAPIDLY

New Method Used by U. S. Rubber Co. of Transporting Rubber in Liquid Form.

Rubber in liquid form is reaching this country in increasing quantities from the great rubber plantations of the Far East. Frequently the shipments to this country are as high as a quarter of a million gallons monthly.

The chief shipper of the liquid rubber is the United States Rubber Co., which announced last year revolutionary discoveries making possible the use of the liquid rubber in impregnating cotton fabrics for manufacture into tires.

Liquid rubber is a good deal like cow's milk—it is white in appearance and carries rubber particles in suspension. A single average rubber tree in a year's tapping gives about three pounds of rubber. The liquid rubber is called "latex" in the rubber industry as well as in the scientific world. Latex is shipped to this country just as it comes from the trees, except for the addition of a slight quantity of a preservative to keep it from coagulating in transit.

Practically the entire production of the great plantations of the United States Rubber Co. in Sumatra and the Malay peninsula is now shipped to the United States as latex or in the form of "sprayed rubber." Sprayed rubber is coagulated in the manner that its name implies, by a remarkable new mechanical process. It is very dry and has strength and ageing qualities never before equaled in commercial rubber.

To care for its needs the United States Rubber Co. takes not only the entire yield of its own plantations, but has contracted also for the entire latex production of a number of other large estates in both Sumatra and Malaya.

As an administrative measure, the United States Rubber Company has established a "Process Department," which takes over the latex from the plantations and manufactures it into sprayed rubber at its big Eastern spray plants or ships it to America in latex form.

The new methods of handling the latex have quite revolutionized the routine of plantation activities. Scattered about the company's great estates in Sumatra are nearly 50 receiving stations where the latex is weighed and run into temporary storage tanks.

A narrow gauge steam railway transports the latex from the receiving stations to the factory. If it is to be used for sprayed rubber. If the latex is to be shipped in liquid form to America, it is taken directly by railroad from the receiving stations to the seaboard, where it is stored in big reservoirs. On plantations selling their production to the company, the latex is conveyed by railroad or motor tanks to the seaboard.

The chief ports of shipment are Belawan, Sumatra, and Port Swettenham in the Federated Malay States, where the company maintains besides adequate storage tanks a fleet of tank lighters.

The problem of procuring adequate facilities for transporting latex to the United States was at first a real one. By experimenting with small quantities in special containers, the company first established the feasibility of importing the rubber into the United States in liquid form.

Then steamship lines were approached with the suggestion that the ballast and oil tanks be thoroughly cleaned and that the latex be carried in the tanks as cargo. There were considerable skepticism at first on the part of the steamship companies, but when experimental cargoes brought no unsatisfactory results, shipping companies began to compete for the business, and now four lines are equipped to carry cargoes.

When the ships arrive at an American port, the latex is pumped by the company's own equipment into railroad tank cars of the sort commonly used for the transportation of petroleum. A barge carries the tank cars alongside the ship, and the operation of transferring the latex to the cars is carried out with dispatch by a specially-trained crew of workmen. The tank cars transport the latex by rail to the various factories where latex is used.

GARDNER EXPORTS MANY AUTOMOBILES

The Gardner Motor Co., Inc., of St. Louis, reports the receipt of a cablegram from a representative in Germany stating he has a market for 500 Gardners, to be shipped as quickly as possible. According to this representative, the demand for the Gardner in Germany is daily becoming more and more insistent, and what has long been a sales problem is rapidly developing into a production and shipping problem. Fifty of these cars have already been sold to German citizens—the balance of the shipment, it is claimed, can be disposed of within a very few days after arrival in the Fatherland.

Right on the heels of this order came another from Kock-Trelleborg, Gardner distributers at Stockholm, Sweden, calling for immediate shipment of 50 Gardner cars to that country.

With nine travelers convering the export trade, and with connections established in England, Australia, South America, South Africa, Norway, Sweden, Java, Japan and Germany, Gardner's export sales are rapidly increasing. In South America alone, Gardner shipments comprise 10 per cent of all American cars imported.

Engineered for Women Motorists

It is almost universally recognized that Cole cars are appealingly beautiful.

But it is Cole engineering in the final analysis which makes Cole so popular among women drivers.

We invite you to drive a Cole and see for yourself how remarkable this car is from the standpoint of steering, gear shifting, braking, clutch operation, power buoyancy and riding balance.

In no other way can you truly appreciate how well Cole is engineered for women.

You'll Like Its Looks and Praise Its Power

HERE is the reason for the wonderful popularity of this new Cleveland Six model:

It carries the lowest price ever placed on a 5-passenger sedan that has plenty of power, genuine good looks and substantial construction throughout.

It all comes down to a matter of dollars and cents.

Sensible folks cannot be argued into paying more than $1295 for a 5-passenger 6-cylinder sedan—

—when for $1295 they can enjoy the comfort and relaxation of a roomy Fisher body, the power and pep of the finest performing motor in the whole light six field, and the dependability that they know they always get in a Cleveland Six.

Prove this by driving this new model yourself.

Watch how easily it passes bigger and costlier cars on hills—how swiftly and smoothly it accelerates.

That's the low torque power of the Cleveland Six motor—the extra power where power counts.

Note the beauty of the body lines—the brilliant finish that comes from seventeen painting operations—the wide, low seats—the deep upholstery—the smart appointments.

It's today's best buy in closed cars—a value that speaks for itself!

Genuine super-size balloon tires (31 x 4¼) optional, $70 extra. Cleveland chassis design permits their use without affecting road, frame, or fender clearance.

TEN HOURS FROM K. C. IN A LOCOMOBILE

Dan W. Iseminger, special representative of the Locomobile Company of America, arrived here last week in the Series A Locomobile. He drove from Kansas City, taking 10 hours and 15 minutes driving time to make the trip. Iseminger tok the southern route. He declared that the roads were dry but rough.

Iseminger is now at the Chase Hotel on special business. He is a former resident of St. Louis, having been connected with a local distributor several years ago.

GREENVILLE PRESS BOOSTS CHRYSLER

S. B. Ward, president of the Ward Motor Co., Maxwell, Chalmers and Chrysler distributors, recently visited the Greenville, Ill. auto show and took representatives of the Greenville newspaper for a ride. The sensation that this trip in the Chrysler caused is shown by the following extracts from a story in the Greenville paper.

"Mr. Ward put the car through a number of "stunts" to demonstrate the complete lack of vibration, the smooth, quiet pickup of the powerful six-cylinder motor and the ability of the new four-wheel hydraulic brakes to bring the car to an almost immediate stop at as high a speed as 45 miles an hour.

"Mr. Ward's passengers were shown that the Chrysler moved as smoothly and vibrationless at 76 miles an hour as at one mile an hour. From 45 miles an hour in high gear Mr. Ward shifted to second, the shifting being done as easily as though it were done at a 10-mile per hour speed.

"At one time during this remarkable demonstration Mr. Ward stopped the car on a stretch of level concrete road. After turning off the ignition he set the car in high gear. Then, turning on the switch, he proceeded to get out of the car and, taking hold of the left front fender, pulled the car about six inches. Whereupon this astonishing car slowly started off in high gear."

PAIGES AND JEWETTS SELLING IN DETROIT

DETROIT, Mich., April 26.—In Wayne County, home of the motor industry, actual registration of new cars, with the exception of Fords, increased 12 per cent during the first quarter of 1924 over the same period last year.

Paige and Jewett registrations, according to the same figures from the Secretary of State's office, showed an increase of 22 per cent, the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. announces.

OVERLAND AIDS IN GEOLOGICAL SURVEY

Judging from the report made by Prof. Henry V. Howe, who holds the chair of geology at the Louisiana State University, an Overland roadster which he drives has done its share to advance this science.

Since last May, Prof. Howe has driven his car across the continent to Oregon and Washington and return, a distance of more than 8500 miles. This trip was taken for the express purpose of making geological surveys and the collection of specimens, which required that the greater part of the journey be made over stretches of country where no roads existed.

"Despite the handicaps," writes the professor, "I was greatly surprised to find that the car had at all times an abundance of power, both for the steep mountain grades and for the heavy pulling in deep sand and mud. As a matter of precaution I had a mechanic go over the car every 1500 miles. The charges for this work and for a new cork gasket on the oil filter—the sole replacement—amounted to but $2.60."

BUICK DEALERS HOLD MONTHLY MEETING

The fifth monthly meeting for Buick dealers and salesmen in the St. Louis organization was held at the Melbourne Hotel on Saturday night, April 19, and the monthly prize was awarded to South Side Buick Auto Co. for scoring the highest total number of points in the monthly contest ending April 15.

J. Frank Hildebrand, president of the South Side Buick Auto Co., presided as toastmaster and called upon each one of the Buick dealers present to express his sentiments regarding the sales contest.

F. W. A. Vesper, president of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., outlined his experiences on the Mediterranean tour and trip to the Near East, from which he just returned, and concluded his remarks with a talk on sales conditions.

MANUFACTURE OF FINE CARS PRECISE

Difference in Size of Same Parts Does Not Exceed One-Tenth Thickness of Hair.

Four million motor cars produced in a single year! Facilities for the ordinary servicing of more than 15,000,000 of them and returning them to active use practically on 24 hours' notice! This industrial triumph had become a reality in the United States at the close of 1923.

Europeans attribute this accomplishment to the American genius for producing on a quantity basis. But the quality element in it rests upon a manufacturing principle which Europeans are not as yet generally using. Briefly, it is that every part of the product is made to an exact standard and is, therefore, an exact duplicate of every other part of the same kind. We call this "standardization and interchangeability of parts."

When Watt triumphed by making his steam engine, he victoriously stated that at the worst part of the cylinders (they were of wood, iron bound) the difference was not more than three-eighths of an inch. In the construction of a high-grade motor car engine, measurements to one-thousandth part of an inch are usual. Many are much finer.

The variation of three-eighths of an inch was an amount which could be seen and measured by the eye. To measure one-thousandth part of an inch requires the use of a gauge which tests independently of eyesight. It is about one-fourth the thickness of a piece of newspaper, one-third the thickness of a human hair.

In manufacturing a high-grade motor car, measurements are so fine as to be still almost incomprehensible. Splitting hairs is coarse work. Splitting a hair into 300 parts, and then measuring one of the parts describes the fineness of operation of an instrument which measures one hundred-thousandth part of an inch. Here the amount is so small that both measure and article must be at the same temperature to avoid error from unequal expansion.

Back in 1907, before the Royal Automobile Club of England, three Cadillac cars were completely dismantled and the parts thrown into a confused heap. Some parts were taken away and others substituted from a stock supply. Three cars were then assembled from the heap without any fitting of the parts, and all ran perfectly. This performance was a revelation to European engineers and resulted in the award to the Cadillac of the Dewar trophy for the most significant automobile development in the year—complete standardization and interchangeability of parts.

The precision with which the principle is applied is illustrated by the Cadillac piston pins, which are held to limits of three ten-thousandths of an inch. That is, the outside variation allowable from the given standard, either larger or smaller, is one-half that amount, one and one-half ten thousandths, or one-twentieth of a hair's thickness.

In Europe, hand methods of fitting are still largely in use. A bolt is made slightly larger or the hole slightly smaller than required. Then by filing and reaming, bolt and hole are made to fit.

To European visitors at the Cadillac factory it has been a matter of wonder to see a complete engine assembled without use of a file or any other tool for the fitting of parts. To achieve this result on certain parts as many as 125 inspections are required.

TOURISTS TO VISIT FORTY-EIGHT STATES

Jack Sussman, staff photographer of the New York Herald-Tribune and Artie Jacobson, movie camera man passed through St. Louis last week in a Wills-Sainte Claire roadster in which they are on a tour which will include every principal city in the 48 States. They left New York City on April 12.

They have letters of introduction from Mayor Hylan, of New York, to President Coolidge and the mayors of the various cities they pass through.

Their car is equipped with every possible device to make their trip pleasant. The equipment included a moving picture camera and a radio set. They have photos of officials of several cities and are constantly adding to the collection.

The trip, which is expected to require between one and two years, will be half over when the "camera scouts" as they announce themselves, reach the coast. The return trip will be made by the way of north and south runs from the Mexican border and the Gulf of Mexico to the Canadian border.

VELIE ENGINEER TO BROADCAST AUTO TALK

While the automobile owners of the United States have long read a great deal about the growth of the automotive industry, the manufacture of automobiles and heard figures relating to the size of the industry, they have never been given a chance to hear the chief engineer of any company discuss an automobile.

The Benjamin Motor Co., Velie distributers, have received the announcement that H. C. Snow, chief engineer of the Velie Motors Corporation, Moline, Ill., will start a series of educational lectures at 7 p. m., April 29, on the automobile from radio station WOC, Davenport, Ia. He will also talk Wednesday evenings, May 7, May 14 and May 21 from the same station.

Johnston is to have sales jurisdiction over the entire country.

CLEVELAND APRIL PRODUCTION LARGER

Production at the Cleveland factory has increased 20 per cent in the last month, according to word just received by the Cleveland Motor Sales Co. Approximately 60 per cent of the total number of cars being built are closed models. This is due largely to the slight differential which exists between the closed and open models of the Cleveland line.

Balloon tires are now optional equipment at a slight extra cost with all the models of the Cleveland Six. The factory reports that practically 30 per cent of the cars being shipped are going out with balloon tire equipment.

The cylinders and combustion chambers of the Cleveland motor are completely machined, according to R. M. B. Tidd of the Cleveland Motor Sales Co.—honed in other words by special equipment recently installed in the Cleveland factory. It is stated that carbon accumulation has been practically eliminated in the Cleveland motor because of this painstaking operation being conducted at the factory.

Only genuine, hand-buffed leather is used in the open models of the Cleveland Six. In a car of this price it is unusual to find genuine leather. The open models of the Cleveland all feature a clear vision top which affords clear vision from all sides to all passengers in the cars.

Your Next Car

Will be this Light-Six, if you learn the truth

WHEN you buy a car in the "thousand-dollar" class, here are some things you should know.

We made a canvass of men who bought rival cars in this class. And we found that 96 in each 100 bought without knowing these facts.

So, for your sake and our sake, we want to present them to you.

Save $200 to $400

Studebaker builds 150,000 fine cars yearly. It builds in model factories, modernly equipped. It has spent $38,000,000 in the past five years on new-day plants and equipment.

By quantity and up-to-dateness it saves large sums per car. A car like this Light-Six, built under ordinary conditions, would cost $200 to $400 more.

11.4% less to run

This supreme quality means lower operating cost. Owners of fleets of cars in this class made audited records to prove this.

They compared 329 cars, running up to 25,000 miles each. And they found that the Studebaker Light-Six cost 11.4% less to operate than the average of its rivals. This includes depreciation. The saving was nearly one cent per mile.

The reasons are these

The Studebaker Light-Six, in its chassis, represents the best we know. In steel and in workmanship it is identical with the costliest cars we build.

It is designed and superintended by an engineering department which costs us $500,000 yearly.

Each steel formula has been proved the best for its purpose by years of tests. On some we pay 15% premium to makers to get them exactly right.

Each car in the building gets 32,000 tests and inspections.

The crankshafts are machined on all surfaces, as was done in the Liberty Airplane Motors. This extra care costs us $600,000 yearly, but it means perfect balance in the motor.

More Timken bearings are used in this car than in any competitive car within $1,500 of its price.

There are 517 operations in making this car exact to 1/1000th of an inch. And 122 are exact to one-half that.

Genuine leather cushions, ten inches deep. Unusual equipment. Scores of extra values.

Made by the leaders

This is one of the cars which has made Studebaker the leader in quality cars. Our sales have almost trebled in three years. The trend toward Studebakers has become a sensation.

Last year 145,167 people paid $201,000,000 for Studebaker cars.

Back of this car is an honored name, which for 72 years has stood for high ideals.

Behind it are $90,000,000 of assets, staked on pleasing you better than others.

Before you pay $1,000 or more for a car, these are facts you should know and compare. You owe that to yourself.

It will tell you why some cars rattle at 20,000 miles and others don't. It shows one single point in a closed car which measures whether you're getting top or medium quality. The book is free—clip the coupon below.

Vaudeville and Record Artist Likes the Music of an H. C. S.

ISABEL PATRICOLA, phonograph-record artist and star on the Keith and Orpheum circuits, is here shown with her new H. C. S., which was sold to her by the MacCarthy-Archer Automobile Co., St. Louis H. C. S. distributors. Miss Patricola, although the car was sold to her in St Louis, visited Indianapolis and the H. C. S. factory recently, to pick out the colors and special finish of the car. She is the second member of the Patricola family to own an H. C. S., as the local dealer sold Tom Patricola a car when he was here with George White's Scandals during the winter. Miss Patricola will have her H. C. S. delivered at her summer home, Great Neck, Long Island, when she finishes her winter Orpheum Circuit Tour about the first of June.

NEW OVERLAND PLANT BEGINS OPERATIONS

Opening of the new Willys-Overland Atlantic Co.'s plant in Philadelphia on April 1 is just announced. It is expected that this new plant will be required to take care of the heavy demand within the 15 states contiguous to the Atlantic Coast from the New England states to the Carolinas.

Within a few days the production at the new factory will reach 100 cars a day and before long this mark will be doubled. While the present schedule calls for the building of Overland models only, it is thought that the Willys-Knight line will be added in the near future.

This new plant is an actual factory in the fullest sense of the word. Much of the material needed is being purchased direct from the vendors, is shipped to the new factory and is processed here. All tops are produced here; wheels, rims, batteries and other accessories are shipped direct to the new plant from their original manufacturers. Assembled motors are shipped intact from Toledo. Frames are also shipped from Toledo, but are drilled and riveted here.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE PRODUCTION INCREASES

"Word has been received from the factory at Marysville, Mich., that there were about 50 per cent more cars built in March than were built in February," says E. J. Krause of the McNiece Motor Co., Inc., local Wills Sainte Claire distributor.

"There is no let-up in the demand for the new cars. In fact, the demand is mounting constantly. While production schedules at the factory were stepped up several times during the month, the shipment of cars was still behind the orders on hand.

"Records show that all the cars sent out are going into immediate service. Just as soon as a car reaches its destination there is someone waiting to take it."

MASON TRUCK OPENS ST. LOUIS BRANCH

In line with the policy of the Durant Motors Corporation, the Mason Motor Truck Co., truck division of the Durant Corporation, recently opened a factory branch at 2814 Locust street. P. L. Chase, an experienced truck man, formerly connected with the Republic organization, has been selected as manager.

This company recently sold to the Pioneer Stage Co., two passenger busses which will be operated between St. Louis and Columbia and intermediate points on regular passenger schedule.

They also report that they have been successful in closing up some nice business with road contractors, having secured an order for 12 jobs to be used in concrete road building in Illinois.

J. F. BOWMAN LEAVES GARFORD COMPANY

J. F. Bowman has announced his resignation as vice president in charge of sales of the Garford Motor Truck Co. of Lima, O.

Before joinin gthe Garford organization over five years ago, Bowman was in general charge of sales and advertising for the Federal Truck Co. of Detroit, Mich. He has played an active part and taken a keen interest in the rapid development of the motor bus industry, and is recognized as one of the best-posted authorities in this field.

Franklin Has New Publication for Salesmen.

The Franklin Automobile Co. has recently inaugurated a new publication for retail salesmen. It is called "The Issue" and takes its name from the fact that all its energies will be devoted to interpreting the issue between air-cooling and water-cooling in terms of results to the automobile buying public. This publication points out that all the superiorities claimed for the Franklin car, comfort, ease of handling, road-ability, long life and economy, are directly attributed to the use of the air-cooled motor.

MANSFIELD JOINS CHRYSLER COMPANY

With the announcement by J. E. Fields, general sales manager of the Maxwell-Chrysler companies, that John D. Mansfield, who has long been associated with the management of the Dort Co., has affiliated himself with Maxwell-Chrysler, another prominent executive is brought into the Walter P. Chrysler organization. Mansfield has been a leading factor in the development of the automobile industry from th every beginning.

"Bringing Mansfield into the Maxwell-Chrysler organization," Fields stated, "is another step in the policy to surround this enterprise with the best available merchandising talent, just as Chrysler has attracted to himself outstanding figures in engineering and manufacturing. Mansfield was impressed with the large opportunity which he saw in the Maxwell-Chrysler future."

DORT BUSINESS COUPE IS PROVING POPULAR

The new Dort three-door business coupe introduced to the public but a few weeks ago has already become one of the most popular and fastest selling cars of this type, according to H. C. Merry of the Wilson Motor Car Co., Dort distributers.

This coupe is primarily a car for salesmen, physicians, realtors, solicitors, professional men, farmers and merchants; yet it is a family car as well.

The three-door business coupe is mounted on the same chassis as other Dorts and is powered by the same six-cylinder motor. It has the same body and same seating arrangement as the regular Dort coupe. There is ample room for five passengers. The extra seat may be folded, and the back and seat cushions of the rear seat may be removed, giving carrying space for the farmer's produce or salesman's sample case. In addition to the other advantages it is upholstered in genuine heavy leather and toned a deep black—features of proven practicability. There is also a rear trunk for small parcels.

FORD DELIVERIES IN MARCH TOTAL 205,735

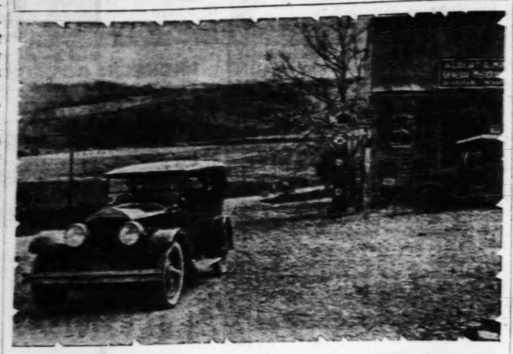
Retail deliveries of Ford cars and trucks in the United States during the month of March reached the record-breaking total of 205,735, it was just announced by the Ford Motor Co.

A significant feature developed during the last 10 days of the month when sales averaged 10,804 cars and trucks a day, indicating that the spring buying rush has begun and that under this enormous demand production of the company will be taxed to the limit in an endeavor to meet the heavy flood of orders.

Loomis Handles Gray Exports.

William M. Purves, sales manager of the Gray Motor Corporation, announces the appointment of William Dwight Loomis as manager of the export department. For the past 12 years, Loomis has been connected with Cadillac in sales and export work. In 1920 he made a trip around the world for Cadillac, and upon his return made a comprehensive report on export conditions which, to a large degree, decided their immediate policies in the foreign countries.

Famous Seckman Hill Finds Car That Can Conquer It



THE Flint Six was tested for its hill-climbing ability by St. Louis newspapermen on Monday of last week. The car was driven to Seckman Hill, twenty-two miles from St. Louis, said to be the steepest hill on any main road in Missouri, and the passengers were shown. The Flint came through starting from the bottom of the hill in high at twenty miles an hour and carrying five passengers, finished at twenty-six miles an hour at the top. The slowest speed at any part of the hill was fourteen miles an hour. The roads were rough and this made the test of this six-tenths of a mile long climb all the more difficult. The hill is one continuous turn. The trip was in charge of L. A. Barker, sales manager of the St. Louis Flint Co., and the car was driven by Charles F Kroemeke, salesman. The photograph shows the car on the hill.

BUICK TOWN CAR FOR MRS. F. W. A. VESPER

One of the new Buick special Fisher-built town cars has just been delivered to F. W. A. Vesper for the personal use of Mrs. Vesper. The 1924 Buick town car was announced at the New York show.

Mrs. Vesper's new town car is painted black, the doors and lower body panels of the coach being finished in maroon. The wheels are also painted maroon. The top and upper portion of the doors in the cab are black, while the rear quarter of the top is finished in the imitation landaulet type. The interior of the car is upholstered in buff-colored broadcloth and is fitted with vanity case, arm rests, door pockets, clock, heater and inside corner lights.

CLEVELAND SIX SALES DOUBLE IN ONE MONTH

According to R. M. B. Tidd, president of the Cleveland Motor Sales Co., Cleveland Six distributers, sales, especially wholesale, have been excellent. Tidd reports a big business in the territory. The dealer organization for Cleveland has more than doubled in the past three weeks, according to Tidd, and orders from retailers throughout the territory are far exceeding expectations.

BENJAMIN J. CLINE WITCH COLUMBIA CO.

Announcement has just been made by Lon R. Smith, president of Columbia Motors Co., that Benjamin J. Cline has been appointed director of production to succeed T. A. Bollinger who has recently resigned.

For many years Cline has been well known in automotive production circles, having at various times held a number of important manufacturing positions in the industry. In point of service he is one of the oldest production engineers in the industry.

Among the companies with which Cline has been connected are Pierce-Arrow, E. R. Thomas, American Motors, Chandler. Before joining the Columbia organization, Cline undertook and completed an important production assignment at the Oakland Motor Car Co.

The plant of the H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Co. at Syracuse, N. Y., where the Franklin car is made, has its own print shop, employing more than 30 persons. Here is printed the shop paper, known as the Franklin News, and also the Issue, published three times a week. This latter publication is written for Franklin salesmen and is devoted to an exposition of the fundamental importance and advantages of air-cooling.

EXECUTIVES LEAD IN BUYING PAIGES

DETROIT, Mich., April 26.—Executives and manufacturers, long leaders in the purchase of Paige and Jewett cars, led the entire list during the month of March, according to figures just announced by the distribution department of the Paige Motor Car Co.

Foremen, machinists, mill workers, miners, etc., the classification which has been second in the purchase of the products of the Paige Co., held the same position again during the month of March. Salesmen, the classification made by the distribution department of the company, which was first for two successive previous months, slipped into third position, the report of retail sales shows.

Business Better, Says Velie Head.

F. E. Bradfield, vice president of the Velie Motors Corporation, Moline, Ill., is making a dealer survey through the southeastern section of the country. After visits to Louisville, Cincinnati and other points in that section, he reports that while the spring selling season is a little late, things are picking up quickly and dealers are in excellent condition to handle any sales situation.

The H. H. Franklin Manufacturing Co. plant in Syracuse, where the Franklin car is made, comprises 18 buildings, covering 31 acres of floor space. If the present plant were laid out on one floor on a straight line 100 feet wide the plant would be two and one-half miles long.

Where Youth Is Having Its Way

No matter how many the years may be that stand between us and our early twenties, we all have much of our youth in us just the same.

Youth is not only irrepressible, but its likes and dislikes affect all of us.

Take automobiles, for example. Have you noticed how automobile designing as well as automobile advertising is a pointed appeal to youth?

Go through the pages of this newspaper, study the automobile advertising, the tire advertising, the accessory advertising—youth, and thy influence of youth, will greet you upon every hand.

It was because the young persons of the late 1890's were eagerly for them that the sponsors of the primitive, experimental automobiles felt justified in going on and on in motor-car development.

It is because the young persons of today demand and appreciate progressiveness that the improvement of the motor car continues.

Stay young-minded, whatever your age. Read the automobile advertising in the Post-Dispatch regularly. Read the classified "Automobiles" columns today. Many good values may be found there that approximate new cars in performance and appearance. These interesting announcements point the sure and satisfactory way to car ownership—whatever you want.

Pick out your car in this list and make a note of the size of Balloon Tire you should have. Do not compromise or experiment with less than the Full-Sized Balloon which assures you maximum comfort, safety and economy.

Over 40,000 car-owners have already had their cars equipped with Firestone Full-Size Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords.

These remarkable low-pressure tires are sweeping the country in popularity. Everything we have said about their riding comfort, safety, car protection, fuel and mileage economy is borne out in actual service by enthusiastic users everywhere.

Firestone pioneered the Balloon Tire. Firestone concentrated two years' effort at a tremendous investment on this new form of construction—the most important improvement to motoring progress in recent years.

Firestone was building full-size Balloons on a quantity basis months ago. The present large production of the great Firestone factory enables us to offer you full-size Balloon equipment immediately and at lowest cost.

There's no delay in application to your car—and no effort on our part to substitute. We have the complete Firestone Balloon Change-over Units in stock—not only full-size Balloons, but Firestone-built wheels and rims in the small diameters required for successful Balloon results. We can equip your car in a few hours' time, without changing the hubs, brake bands or any part of the wheel except the rims and spokes. We know of no other tire dealers so well equipped to serve motorists in this territory.

Adopt full-size Balloons for your car now. Extend the utility of your car. Put a new enjoyment in long or short trips. Drive more safely under all road conditions—the year 'round. Get equal or better mileage than from regular cords. Make poor roads good and good roads better. Reduce vibration to a minimum, prolonging the life of your car and practically eliminating squeaks and rattles.

No one who has ever ridden on Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords will ever be satisfied with any other tires. Many prominent car makers, as you no doubt have noticed, have adopted them after very exhaustive tests.

Remember that we can provide you with these genuine, full-size Balloons promptly in the standardized size that fits your car.

You will be surprised what a difference in comfort, safety, car conservation and improved appearance our full-size Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords make. We, as well as the makers, stand back of these tires just as we do the standard size Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords—insuring your complete satisfaction. Come in and let us show you this remarkable achievement in tire manufacture.

COPYRIGHT LAW HAS TWO-DAY HEARING

Leaders From Both Sides Discuss Proposed Amendments to Law.

Whether copyright laws will apply to compositions broadcast in the ether, requiring payments of royalties to the authors, composers and publishers by the broadcasting stations, is now up to the Senate Patent Committee. Considering the mass of testimony, pro and con, given in two days of hearing on the amendment to the copyright laws proposed by Senator C. C. Dill, which would exempt broadcasters from paying fees to copyright holders, it may be sometime before the committee can digest the matter and make a report.

Senator Dill says he is personally interested in keeping radio free to the people, and he means it. Like free speech, religion and the freedom of the press, he wants radio unhandicapped and uncontrolled. If moving pictures and automobiles took their people out of their homes, radio, he asserts, has a tendency to bring them back. He believes the listener-in should not be taxed and is confident that through radio a universal language will develop which will better unite people of all nations, and may prevent future wars.

Opposition to his measure, the Dill bill, S 2600, is strong, however, and his ideals may be defeated in committee or later on the floor.

Leading musicians, authors, composers and publishers appeared before the Senate Committee on April 17, in opposition to the Dill bill. In general they were members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, but some independents also testified.

Those present included Gene Buck, president of the society; Victor Herbert, vice president; E. C. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee; Ellis Barker Butler, president of the Authors' League; John Philip Sousa, Augustus Thomas and Nathan Burkam, attorney for the Composers' Society.

Mr. Buck, in an attempt to refute the testimony given to the committee recently by the National Broadcasters' Association, referred particularly to the so-called "war chest" of his society, which he said was for the prevention of adversity. He spoke of the organization and its work, stating that both he and the association have great regard for radio. He said he was appearing in opposition to the Dill bill "for the life of song writing," and flatly denied that the Publishers' Association was a monopoly or trust of any kind. Questioned, Mr. Buck answered that the association, in asking broadcasters to pay for using songs, does not differentiate between a station operated by a radio manufacturer and one operated by a newspaper. He contended that when people hear a song over the radio they do not care to buy it and said that the continual use of a song in the air made the people "sick of it."

Nathan Burkam, attorney for the association, went into the legal phases of the bill, contending that Congress gave a monopoly to song writers and authors through the copyright law.

During the second day's hearing Nathan Burkam for the Composers' Association, Charles Butler of the Authors' Association, Frank A. K. Boland for the American Hotel Association; Sidney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Owners' Association of America, and Charles H. Tuttle appeared in rebuttal on behalf of the National Association for Broadcasters.

Mr. Tuttle stated that radio was the greatest blessing that science ever had given to man. He riddled the case of the composers saying that they were anxious to pass the buck to the listener-in, but that they failed to show the broadcasters how this was possible even if they desired to do it. He claimed that the composers wanted the broadcasters to join with them in an agreement to charge the public, in which case it would be one of the greatest monopolies ever realized. He denied that radio was emptying the moving picture houses. The Composers Association was said to be trying to tax the radio broadcasters and not the individual songs which they send out. He believes that the music publisher is opposing the bill and not the writers and authors.

Nathan Burkam, on behalf of the Composers' Association, accused all the broadcasters of broadcasting for profit, referring to them as "organized pirates," but declared that the composers were not monopolists.

SIMPLY CONSTRUCTED TWO-TUBE RECEIVER

Usual Standard Parts May Be Used in Assembling This Reflex Set.

The circuit illustrated contains one stage of radio frequency amplification, detector and one stage of audio frequency amplification. It was obtained from the Experimenter's Corner of the Australian magazine Radio.

Parts necessary for this circuit are as follows:

2 75-turn honeycomb coils.
1 .001 variable condenser.
1 .0005 variable condenser.
2 sockets.
2 vacuum tubes.
2 rheostats.
1 .0005 fixed condenser.
2 .001 fixed condensers.
1 2 megohm grid leak.
1 Audio frequency transformer.

C1 is a variable condenser having a capacity of .001 microfarad. One side of the condenser is connected with the aerial and the other side with L1, which is a 75-turn honeycomb coil. C2 and L2 are the radio frequency combination. The inductance (L2) is a 75-turn honeycomb coil and C2 is a variable condenser having a capacity of .0005 microfarad. The two fixed condensers (C2 and C5) have a capacity of .0005. C3 and C4 are also fixed condensers and have a capacity of .001. The audio frenquency transformer (AF) can be any standard make.

Instead of one detector and one amplifying tube, two amplifying tubes are used, because there is only one "B" battery source. (This obviates the customary 22½-volt tap for the plate potential of the detector.)

The UV 201A or the UV 199 are two desirable tubes to use for the best results. A plate battery of 45 volts is used to feed both tubes. The "A" battery depends on the tubes selected. Note that the grid leak is connected in a different manner. The value of the grid leak is two megohms. However, it is advisable to experiment with various values because of the varying characteristics of different tubes.

RADIO CIRCULAR REVISED

Government Publication Deals With Measurements.

A second edition of Bureau of Standards Circular 74 on Radio Instruments and Measurements has been issued. This circular presents information regarding the more important instruments and measurements actually used in radio work and is planned to be of use to Government officers, radio engineers, etc. It makes no attempt to deal with the operation of apparatus in sending and receiving, but other publications by the bureau on that and on other subjects are listed in Appendix 2.

The first edition of this circular was issued March 22, 1918. The new edition contains a number of corrections and revisions. Many of the matters dealt with are or have been under investigation in the laboratories of the Bureau of Standards, and are not treated in previously existing publications. The bibliography of radio publications has been considerably extended.

Copies of the new edition of Circular 74 may be obtained from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C., the price 60 cents.

Never rush the construction of a set by making poor connections and using no solder and then expect to receive perfect signals.

NEW ARRIVALS IN THE RADIO

Broadcast listening fans are particularly interested in the advent of a new Murad receiver, model MA-18. It is a five-tube receiver, introducing a new detector and two stages of radio frequency amplification. Using a small single wire antenna, it receives the entire broadcast wave length range, and the setting of the tuning dial for a given station is always the same, regardless of where the set is operated or what kind of antenna used, according to the designers. Either "199" or "201A" tubes may be used, as five sockets are provided with every set. It is simple to operate and is non-regenerating. The cabinet is made of mahogany, hand-rubbed to a durable finish, and the panel is engraved on an approximate 45-degree angle.

A supply of what is probably the most efficient vacuum-tube detector of the nonmicrophonic type yet to be seen on the radio market has recently made its appearance in St. Louis. They are known as the "Benjamin" and being made of genuine bakelite are free from high-frequency losses. The contacts springs are of phosphor bronze, nickel plated and firmly fastened with riveted eyelets. Two sizes are available—for "199" and "201A" tubes, and those having standard bases.

General Radio low-loss moulded insulation condensers of the kind used in their 174 wave-meter, direct-reading, are now be obtained at a local dealer. They are higher in price than the average variable condenser, but they have been designed to meet precision standard and are particularly adapted for use where exceedingly fine calibration is desired.

The A-C Electrical Manufacturing Co. are manufacturing a device which they call a "Vario-Coupler," and for which three outstanding claims are made as follows: It will change any single circuit set to a double circuit set without removing and without rebuilding. It eliminates reradiation. It gives selectivity to a single circuit set equal to that of any three-circuit tuner, yet preserving the one-circuit simplicity of tuning. The instrument is sold in a sealed case and is guaranteed by the manufacturers.

A late product of the Murad laboratories is their "Simplex Common" receiver, so-called because it is simple to operate. It has but one control which may be called, and is claimed to be the regenerative tuner made which will work with a loop successfully in reasonable distances of broadcasting stations. According to the manufacturers, this tuner will work with an aerial, or without as well by connecting the ground wire to the aerial post. With an aerial and ground it will operate like any other tuner, and it works with a loop by using only one side of the loop, and a regular ground or by placing the loop on the aerial post. Great distances, however, cannot be expected with the loop.

RADIO TALKS TO BE BROADCAST

The Radio Committee of the Associated Engineering Society of St. Louis, has arranged for the broadcasting of a series of popular talks on radio subjects to be delivered by Prof. Roy Glasgow of the Electrical Engineering Department of Washington University. They will be given each Friday evening from 7 to 8 p. m. as a part of WCK's regular program, until the end of the university school year. In these addresses Professor Glascow will explain many of the current features of radio principles and practices, in terms understandable to the layman.

The first talk will be given April 25. The subject will be "Electro-Magnetic Waves." Titles of subsequent talks will be announced later.

"RADIO" NEVER ELECTROCUTES ALTHOUGH POWER WIRES DO

Misleading Headlines Cause Spread of Information Harmful to the Science.

Radio frequency gets a "black eye" although unfortunately and unjustly, through improper headlines and sometimes badly-written stories in various publications.

The headline "Electrocuted by Radio," which appeared not long ago in a newspaper was not only misleading, but wrong according to the brief story itself. Radio itself cannot electrocute except at transmitting stations where heavy currents are used, but at the "receiving end," radio is not dangerous. It is only at high-powered, low-frequency transmitting stations that serious results could occur. Receiving sets are not dangerous, according to all well-informed experts, unless of course, they are charged by outside electric power, which sometimes happens when an aerial erected for receiving purposes falls across power wires.

Referring to the headline and the story of the unfortunate lad whose antenna, it developed, came into contact with an electric wire charged with 2300 volts, it is readily seen that he was not electrocuted by radio but by an electric power line. It would have been the same had he been stringing a wire clothesline, although his death would not have been charged to a clothesline. An autoist who stalls his machine on a railway track and is killed by an express train is not said to have been killed by an automobile.

Value of Good Phones.

The phones are one of the necessities of the radio set. If the phones are poor it will not be possible to receive long distance stations, because the weak current that flows through the telephone windings will not be strong enough to actuate a movement of the diaphragm. Be sure that the phones are of good make.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MAR

Broadcast listening fans will particularly interested in the a vent of a new Murad Receiv model MA-18. It is a five-tube ceiver, introducing a new circu with two stages of radio frequen detector and two stags of aud frquency amplification. Using small single wire antenna, it cove the entire broadcast wave-leng range, and the setting of the o tuning dial for a given station always the same, regardless where the set is operated or t kind of antenna used, according the designers. Either "199" or "2 tubes may be used, as five adapte are provided with every set. It simple to operate and is nonrad ating. The cabinet is made of sol mahogany, hand-rubbed to a dur ble finish, and the panel is arrang on an approximate 45-degree slan

A supply of what is probably th most efficient vacuum-tube socke of the nonmicrophonic type yet t be seen on the radio market, ha recently made its appearance in St Louis. They are known as th "Benjamin" and being made o genuine bakelite are free fro high-frequency losses. The con tacts springs are of phosph bronze, nickel plated and firml fastened with riveted eyelets. Tw sizes are available—for "199" ty tubes, and those having standar bases.

General Radio low-loss cond sers of the kind used in their ty 174 wave-meter, direct-reading ca now be obtained at a local deale They are higher in price than th average variable condenser, bu they have been designed to meet precision standard and are partic lary adapted for use where exceed ingly fine calibration is desired.

The A-C Electrical Manufactur ing Co. are manufacturing a devic which they call a "Vario-Selecto and for which three outstandi claims are made as follows: (1) It will change any circuit set i a double circuit set without rewi ing and without rebuilding. (2 It eliminates reradiation. (3) It gives selectivity to a single circu set equal to that of any three-ci cuit tuner, yet preserving the singl circuit simplicity of tuning. The in strument is sold in a sealed cabine and is guaranteed by the manufac turers.

A late product of the Tresc laboratories is their "Simple Si mon" receiver, so-called because it is simple to operate. It has onl one control which may be calibrat ed, and is claimed to be the onl regenerative tuner made which wi work with a loop successfully wit in reasonable distances of broad casting stations. According to th manufacturers, this tuner will wor with an aerial, or without an aeria by connecting the ground wire to the aerial post. With an aeria and ground it will operate like any other tuner, and it works with a loop by using only one side of the loop, and a regular ground wire placing the loop on the aerial post. Great distances, however, cannot be expected with the loop.

RADIO TALKS TO BE BROADCAS

The Radio Committee of the As sociated Engineering Societies of St. Louis, has arranged for the broadcasting of a series of popular talks on radio subjects to be de livered by Prof. Roy Glascow of the Electrical Engineering Depart ment of Washington University. They will be given each Friday evening from 7 to 8 p. m. as a part of WCK's regular program, until the end of the university school year. In these addresses, Prof. Glascow will explain many differ ent features of radio principles and practices, in terms understand able to the layman.

The first talk will be given April 25. The subject will be "Electro-Magnetic Waves." Titles of subse quent talks will be announced lat er.

RADIO HALLUCINATION MAY BE NEXT DISEASE

Department of Commerce Keeps Record of Strange Cases Reported.

(Copyright, 1924.)

Radio supervisors and inspectors hear many queer tales as to strange messages, sounds and calls emanating from somewhere within the boundless realms of the ether. Some complaints are weird, a few pathetic and still others almost convince one that there are "Ether-ial Bogies." Radio is of itself more or less of a marvel and a mystery and with the rapid advancement of its range, manipulation and scope, it is small wonder that certain susceptible fans and even operators long in the game, hear or imagine they hear curious and unaccountable messages verging on the supernatural.

There is the story of one old-timer who declared that he no longer needed headphones, his ears having become so tuned to the noises of code stations that he could pick up messages from almost anywhere.

Some of these complainants perhaps improperly classified as radio "nuts" and "nuts" insist that they are haunted by Hertzian "spooks," which in certain cases seem to approach from the spiritual angle and assume "radio control" of their victims. They not only exercise an undue influence but create actual fear in the hearts and minds of those persecuted. Certain students of the problem refuse to believe that it is all imagination, attributing the influence to something supernatural or at least a power not yet understood.

Does Radio "Control" Exist?

Of many cases reported to the Department of Commerce, there is none so striking as the "Strange Case of Operator Blank," on which there is a thick file of papers.

Nearly four years ago a seagoing radio operator of 20 years' experience reported to the Supervisor of a coastal district that he was the object of radio persecutions in the form of radio telephonic messages which were transmitted to him continually by virtue of wireless when he was ashore. Three unprincipaled, young operators, he asserted, kept a surveillance over his every move, reading his thoughts, and at times "needling" his brain action. These three persecutors relieved each other but kept up their vocal messages by day and night, no matter where he was. Their sinister influence, he felt sure was affecting his young daughter when she was near him, and practically broke up his home. He appealed to scientists, doctors, radio experts, the Government and police without benefit, as the source of the radio emanations could not be traced. They seemed to come from a coastal point. Even while on an automobile trip across the continent and into Canada, the "phantom" radiophone messages pursued him. The messages were transmitted on various frequencies and were impossible to ignore. Operator Blank believed the young men had invented an ultra-modern transmitting set of which no one knew the circuit. He said the boys told him it was a "wired wireless psychometer" effecting the transmission of speech by a "therapeutic oscillator," and received by "Triplex phantomining attunement." He couldn't get away from the messages, and he was certain that the boys kept a log of his thoughts.

Later on, when he was again at sea, the messages pursued him, evidently through the medium of radio. In the Atlantic or Pacific the effect was the same and the operator came to believe that the "primary phonetic" effect kept his head aching continually; sometimes he was driven from his radio shack. He was certain his death could be caused by these boys if they desired. He again took up the matter of locating the station with authorities in New York, San Francisco and Washington, but no one was able to aid him nor locate the unknown station. Unofficial and unsigned messages continued to follow him, causing interference with his regular traffic, his sleep and his mental stability. Investigations showed him to be in good physical and mental state, but although pronounced sound in his mind and body and only about 42 years old, he was literally driven from the sea and his profession.

Following up some of his suggestions, radio officials report that spiritualists have been affected in a similar way, and from New York came information that complaints of this character were increasing—in fact, becoming quite common. Department of Commerce radio officials say that during the full of the moon complaints of weird and unnatural radio messages in the ether come in with a strange regularity. Even to date the department and its field staff have not been able to solve the mystery of Operator Blank's persecution nor the source of the phone messages he reported.

Other curious cases reported to the department include the Western farmer, who, whenever plowing in a field near an insane asylum, declared that he was influenced and persecuted by voices which seemed to come from a queer box on the sill of a window in the institution. He came to Washington in an effort to rid himself of this "radio control." When he returned the box was no longer visible and it is understood he was bothered no further, though it was never wholly explained. From Philadelphia came a story of a woman who was constantly hearing radio voices, especially when riding on a train, although it was long before trains were equipped with receiving sets. Another woman out West recently wrote that waves from a certain radio station pass through her house and her person causing a most unpleasant effect; she said she could never sleep until the station closed for the night.

RADIO ANNOUNCING IS DIFFICULT JOB

Many Qualifications Necessary to Be an Efficient Announcer.

In the broadcasting branch of radio, a new vocation has developed, that of the radio announcer.

To be a successful announcer something more than a pleasing voice and clear enunciation are required. The ideal announcer is a musician with a knowledge of composers and their work; he should be a linguist familiar with French, Italian and German; he should be able in an emergency to make an announcement in English without confusion and free from grammatical errors. He should be tactful in receiving artists and instructing them in proper position before the microphone.

Singers and speakers accustomed to public appearance very often develop microphone fright, not because the studio surroundings are overpowering, but because they miss the stimulating presence of an audience. It is difficult to visualize the vast radio audience, wearing headphones or grouped about loud speakers.

The announcer's duties are not limited to his appearance before the microphone. Rehearsals are conducted and by this means poor singers are saved the embarrassment of failure before the microphone. The rehearsal also serves to demonstrate that certain voices do not have the quality for radio transmission.

Sometimes the finished and successful singer is found to have a voice unsuited for radio transmission, and on the other hand a singer whose voice is too weak for public hall or theater sometimes possesses quality and tone which wins instantaneous popularity with the radio audience.

IMPORTANCE OF PANEL INSULATION EXPLAINED

An astronomer would have a difficult time trying to view Venus through a lens coated with ink. A similar experience undoubtedly awaits him who "goes after" Los Angeles with a radio receiver whose radio frequency transformers are mounted on a baseboard handsomely coated with enamel paint. It's about as easy as hearing broadcast signals when the aerial is grounded.

It is a good plan if a high-grade insulating panel is used not to fasten the rear connections for the aerial and ground to a piece of wood. Now that cabinets can be bought in any standard panel size, an extra piece of wood for mounting the sockets and transformers is superfluous. How much more convenient it is to have all the instruments fastened to the panel so that the entire apparatus can be lifted out and inspected when it's necessary.

The subpanel solves the problem to a nicety, and there are many good ways for mounting it. Perhaps the best way is to use a couple of brass brackets—angles, such as the hardware store carries, and fasten the subpanel to the panel with four 6-32 machine screws in each bracket. If the subpanel is placed midway between top and bottom, the sockets can be put on top and the audio transformers underneath, giving short grid connections. Or the subpanel might be placed at the bottom, with transformers behind the sockets.

Subpanels are useful for support-

THAT'S what it sounded as if the conductor said. What he really said was something quite different. But distortion garbled his voice so that it was unintelligible to you.
Exactly the same thing can happen with a radio set if the proper amplifiers are not used. With Acme for amplification even distant stations are heard loud and clear as a bell. Use Acme radio frequency amplifying transformers (R-2, 3 and 4) for distance; use an Acme A-2 Audio amplifying transformer for volume; and use the Acme Kleerspeaker for reproduction.
Combine these two transformers on the same vacuum tube—"REFLEX" system—and be sure of amplification without distortion. Ask your radio dealer to show them to you. Send 10 cents for book, "Amplification without Distortion" to Acme Apparatus Co., Cambridge, Mass.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

All Queries Must Be Accompanied by the Name and Address of the Writer.

Q. Will it be possible for you to publish data, together with a diagram of the regenoflex receiver employing six tubes of the UV-199 type. M. W.

A. No constructional data has been given out by the manufacturers of this set.

Q. I am constructing a double slide crystal set. My coil is three and one-half inches in diameter and is wound with 200 turns of No. 22 bare wire. Is this alright? M. A. V.

A. If the wire is spaced so that the individual turns do not touch, this should work satisfactorily.

Q. (1) I have trees around my place. Will it be necessary to suspend my aerial above the tree tops, or will I get just as good results by having it only 30 feet above the ground? (2) Is it better to have separate grounds for the set and lightning arrester, or will one connection serve both? C. N.

A. (1) In the wintertime the trees will have little effect on reception, but in the summer there might be some difference, although it would be only slight. Tree leaves and sap are believed by some to absorb radio energy. (2) Two "grounds" should be used.

Q. I intend making an Elgin Super-Reinartz receiver. Is this set a reliable one to build, or is it a trick set. F. S.

A. We do not give opinions as to which are and which are not "trick" receivers. Some manufacturers guarantee their products to back up their claims, and it would be advisable to use such parts in constructing a set.

Q. What is the difference between inverse reflex and straight reflex circuits. F. N.

A. In a straight reflex circuit, each stage of audio frequency is reflexed (directed back) through the tubes in the same order as the radio frequency. In an inverse reflex receiver, the audio frequency passes through the tubes in reverse order of the radio frequency.

Q. Which is the best circuit, a reflex or a neutrodyne and what is the difference.—D. M.

A. This is largely a matter of personal opinion, based on individual experience. In the neutrodyne circuit, tubes function merely as single-duty amplifiers, thus necessitating a greater number for the same volume afforded in the reflex circuit with a minimum number of tubes. In addition, much energy is expended to neutralize tube capacitance with resultant loss of signal strength.

Q. (1) Does it injure the headphones if they are connected to the receiving set at all times? (2) I have a small crystal set and sometimes hear as far as Pennsylvania, but there is a large tube set next door to me. Has it anything to do with such reception?—H. M.

A. (1) It is advisable to remove the headphones from any set which employs an outdoor antenna, and especially those of the single-circuit type. (2) It probably has. Sometime when you are listening to a Pennsylvania station ask your neighbor to disconnect his receiver from his aerial and if your distant signals can still be heard, you may know that his set has nothing to do with the results you are getting.

Q. (1) Can a diode tube be operated successfully as a long-distance receiving set instead of a crystal set? (2) Does the diode tube require a "B" battery or will an "A" battery supply sufficient current? (3) Please publish a hook-up of the diode tube.— R. W. P.

A. (1) The range of a diode tube is little more than that of a sensitive crystal. (2) An "A" battery is required to heat the filament of a diode tube, but no plate battery is necessary. (3) Circuit showing diode tube appeared in the Post-Dispatch, issue of May 23, 1923.

Q. In hook-up No. 5 of the Radio Weekly Supplement, would it be possible to substitute a 50-turn honeycomb coil in place of the primary inductance? Would a 50-turn coil work for most wave lengths? —H. L. E.

A. You might substitute a 50-turn coil shunted by a 23-plate variable condenser, but the results would hardly equal those obtainable with the tapped coil specified.

Q. I am anxious to build the reflex receiver described in a recent issue of the Post-Dispatch, but the specifications call for a 23-plate condenser and I have only two 17-plate variable condensers. Would it be possible to use the ones I have by changing the number of turns on the inductance coils? F. P. R.

A. The six plates difference would not prevent the set from working. We suggest that you construct the set using the condensers you have.

Q. (1) Should the batteries be disconnected when the set is not in use? What wires should be disconnected? (2) My Baldwin head phones do not work as well as a cheaper set. Could they be repaired? By whom? S. F. H.

A. 1) The "A" battery circuit should always be broken when the set is not in use. This can be accomplished by either placing a small battery switch in series with the rheostat, or turning the rheostat to the "off" position, or else disconnecting one of the "A" battery leads. The "B" battery need not be disconnected. (2) Write to the manufacturers (whose address appears moulded on the cases of the receivers) in regard to having the phones overhauled.

RADIO TYPEWRITER IS DEMONSTRATED

Device Exhibited in New York Has Efficiency of 99½ Per Cent.

Publishers and editors from all over the country, attending the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association in New York recently discussed with amazement the most modern method of news transmission without wires—the radio typewriter.

This unique machine is known as the International News Service high speed automatic radio printing system, and is being demonstrated by its inventors and M. Koenigsburg, president of the International News Service.

The first public demonstration of the device was made in a room at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel where, operated in daylight from a 60-foot reception aerial outside a window, it took words from the air at the rate of 65 a minute with an accuracy which W. G. H. Finch, one of the inventors, set at 99¼ per cent.

The "story" from the air was sent by an operator in the experimental laboratory of the news service a mile and a half away and it was delivered automatically and perfectly written on a typewriter.

It can be speeded up to transmit 100 words a minute. Electro-radio engineers experimented three and one-half years before the device was made ready for commercial use.

Veteran newspapermen who witnessed the demonstration declared themselves astounded and pointed out that the invention makes possible the transmission to any paper, no matter how remote, of daily news reports without the expense of telegraph wires.

Mr. Koenigsburg, replying to their congratulatory remarks, said:

"We are proud to have been privileged to work out this fascinating problem of transmitting the printed word through the air onto a sheet of typewriter paper. To have suggested such a thing a short decade ago would have been to invite the services of an alienist."

The system has been in daily operation between Tarrytown, N. Y., and Columbus Circle for a year as an endurance test, and between San Francisco and Los Angeles, 350 miles by air line.

The inventors and developers of the equipment are Finch, William A. Bruno and A. M. Stevens. George Useman assisted them in their final experiments.

A mere speck of soldering paste is just as effective as a big smudge of it.

Before placing a battery on charge be sure to get the correct polarity reading.

UNIVERSAL TONGUE DISCOVERED

Neither Dictionary Nor Encyclopedia Would Be Needed.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover has been asked by Howison E. Hoover of Washington, D. C., to appoint a jury of representative experts; scientists, philologists, engineers and other savants to hear his exposition of a new radio language.

The writer says he has discovered, not invented, this universal tongue, which he claims is as old as time and space. He pointed out that it needs no dictionary nor encyclopedia, the words being built up on a logical basis as they are needed. They are readily deciphered by the same process by the one who receives them visually, audibly or electrically, he explains.

Commissioner Carson, of the Bureau of Navigation, which includes the radio administrative section, has replied that when the use of the radio telephone becomes more general and communications more reliable, it is possible that the matter of an international language or code will be recommended for adoption. He points out that even today owners of high powered broadcasting stations which have been heard internationally might be interested in the proposal.

The wires from antenna and ground where they approach the receiver should be separated as much as possible to the point where the antenna wire enters the building.

Own Your Home

Back Where Your Folks Started

Have you ever stood before a picket fence, peering beneath an overhanging elm at the doorway, the windows and the climbing roses of an old house, while your heart and lips kept saying to you, "Here I am, back where my folks started!"

Where they started! You think deeply of the old folks and how and where they started; you feel a pride in the old home where they began; you want to be the factor in your community which your parents were in theirs. You want to be considered substantial and on the way to better things.

It matters not how prosperous you are; how much you think of yourself; or how much you attribute your start to the help others have given you, there is something in the place and the way we get started.

The one sure way to get started toward home-ownership, is to make up your mind that you will start today. Begin now by reading the advertisements of Real Estate and Homes over in the Real Estate Section of the Post-Dispatch.

It is a deep-breathing, robust feeling that gets a man started right towards real estate and home ownership.. It's insurance against dependent old age, safety for the wife and later a pride and satisfaction to the kiddies to view in retrospect, "Back Where My Folks Started."

Obey that Urge. Look now to the Real Estate advertisements. Make the selection this week which means safety, success, increased health, increased happiness.

Spring Breezes Lure and Country Clubs Beckon and Society Heads for the Open Spaces

Hundreds Beguiled From Their Winter Haunts by Golf, Polo and Saturday Night Dances—This Week Crowded With Parties Honoring Miss Marjorie Livingston Whose Marriage to William Bryan Robertson Soon Will Take Place.

SPRING, with its warming sun, and gentle, coaxing breeze, is in the air, and society, surfeited by the more strenuous life of the winter months, begins to long for the out-of-doors and its lighter amusements. The tired business man reaches for his golf bag and takes stock of his clubs, his wife arranges for the linen covers to give the furniture that cool, summery look, and perhaps has the porch chairs painted, while his daughter contents herself with replenishing her wardrobe with the dainty summery things so dear to her luxury-loving soul. The country clubs, as if in answer to the call, opened last week. The golf and tennis courts have been rolled into condition for the spring players, the polo grounds at the St. Louis Country Club put into service yesterday, and the Saturday night dances at most of the clubs also have started. Several hundred guests attended those at Bellerive and the Country Club last night, and at least three of the larger affairs at the latter place were in honor of out-of-town guests.

Miss Claire McDonough, an attractive visitor from Dallas, was honoree at a dinner given by her hostess, Miss Elizabeth Smith, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Smith of Maryland avenue; Mrs. George Leib, of San Francisco, the erstwhile Isabel Haldeman of Louisville, who with Mr. Leib is here for a week to visit her sister, Mrs. George Wendling, and Miss Virginia Pratt of New York, the guest of Miss Mary Christy Tiffany, were given parties, respectively, by Mrs. Wendling and Miss Katherine Sipple.

A "Dutch" party was given for Miss McDonough Friday night at the home of Edward Chouteau Papin, 4642 Pershing avenue. An orchestra was hired for the occasion and the rugs rolled up the rugs and danced. Included in the group were Messrs. and Mmes. Joseph Louis Werner, Warne Niedringhaus, James E. Kaime, William D. Orthwein II, Louis Hager, Leicester Faust, Thomas K. Niedringhaus Jr., Richard S. Hawes Jr., Harry Hall Knight, Misses Smith and the honor guest, Claire Garneau, Elizabeth Luyties, Louise Francis, Katherine Corlis, Mary Francis Dickson, Marguerite Moll, Damaris Macbeth, Eleanor Simmons, Dorothy Monroe, Emily Millikin, Rebecca Chase, and Messrs. Cal Koehler, Charles Zimmerer, John Hadley, Charlie Pettus, Jerry Meyer, Alfred Bevis, Frederick and Richard Orthwein, Dana von Schrader, Harry Papin, Clarence Maloy, Micky Lambert, Richard McLane, William Gardner, and Stewart and Howard Williams. Miss McDonough met her hostess while a member of the party touring Europe a year ago, which included Miss Garneau, Mr. and Mrs. Niedringhaus and Mr. Maloy. She will depart tomorrow.

The week is crowded with parties honoring Miss Marjorie Livingston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Dalzell Livington and her fiance, William Bryan Robertson. Beginning last Friday there is scarcely a day when there is not at least one affair for them. Mrs. John Ensign Sheridan gave a small tea for the bride-elect Friday, and Mrs. George F. Powell, sister of the bridegroom, had a table for her last night at the opening of Bellerive Country Club. Tomorrow evening John Janes of Webster Groves will be host at a dinner for them and Tuesday Miss Livingston will be honoree at a bridge party to be given by Miss Katherine Farrar at her home in Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Holmes, the latter formerly Miss Idelia Bush, will entertain the bridal party at dinner at the Coronado Hotel Wednesday night, and Thursday John Robertson, who will be his brother's best man, will give a dinner for them. The rehearsal will be held late Friday, followed by a buffet supper at the bride's home, at which her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hudson of Tampico, Mexico, will be hosts. The ceremony will take place Saturday evening at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, and will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents, 40 Kingsbury place. Mrs. Norton Schuyler of Clinton, Mo., another sister of the bride, will arrive today with her two children, and Mr. Schuyler will follow later. Mrs. Kate Salmon of Jefferson City, Mo., a cousin of the bride, and her daughter, Margaret, will be here later in the week. One of the Schuyler children and Miss Salmon will be in the bridal party.

FLIES TO DEATH

When you puff El Vampiro into the air, every fly in the room will die. Breathing as flies do through a score of tiny pores, one whiff of El Vampiro will lay them low. Don't wait for insects to find a poison powder or liquid. Baby or dog might find it first. But, harmless to man and animal, El Vampiro kills flies, roaches, fleas, lice, moths, mosquitoes, and plant and animal lice. It comes to you in a handy YELLOW bellows box, 15c and 30c sizes. Also in a big sifter-top can for $1.25. If you prefer a liquid spray for flies, there's Liquid El Vampiro and it's just as potent. Allaire, Woodward & Company, Peoria, Ill.

Sensible Method of Removing Wrinkles

If crow's feet appear prematurely about the eyes, apply a lotion made by dissolving an ounce of saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. This is the best, quickest-acting treatment known, as it tends to restore normal conditions. It tightens and strengthens the skin, likewise the underlying tissue, the loosening and softening of which are the cause of a wrinkled condition. It also has a tonic effect, which not only aids in the same direction, but, by improving capillary circulation, helps bring a healthy color to the face.

The same solution, acting as it does, naturally affects not only every wrinkle and line, but hanging or flabby cheeks and chin, as well. When your face wears a tired expression, bathe it with. Reg capillary circulation, helps bring a druggist for powdered saxolite.

VARIOUS PARTIES ON SOCIAL CALENDAR

Arrangements for the Junior Prom of the St. Louis University School of Medicine, which is to take place Thursday evening, May 1, are complete. This is the most notable function on the school's social calendar and will be given as a formal dinner dance at Hotel Chase. The prom was initiated in 1850 and has been featured by increasing splendor each year.

Students from many foreign countries and from every State in the Union will be represented. Many out-of-town guests have been invited by the students, who have planned for their entertainment over the week-end at smaller functions.

The completed list of hosts and hostesses includes Dr. and Mrs. Robert E. Schlueter, Mr. and Mrs. Festus J. Wade, Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Neilson, Dr. and Mrs. Don R. Joseph, Dr. and Mrs. William L. Talked Like a Dutch Uncle

"My father is a physician and, naturally, I was opposed to all patent medicine. So when a friend told me to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy for my stomach trouble, I laughed at him. Some months later, after my father had told me he had used all known remedies in my case, I met my friend again and he talked to me like a Dutch uncle and finally induced me to try it. All my symptoms have now disappeared. It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. At Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Jules & Dolph (2 stores), Enders Drug Co. (3 drug stores), Bigger-Clingstie, Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and druggists everywhere.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Own Story

A plain girl became a famous beauty. Great critics pronounced her the most beautiful thing that ever appeared on the stage. For 40 years she led a life of fame and glory, and she lives it still. Now, at a grandmother's age, she retains her youthful looks, with girlish contours, a debutante's complexion, and hair that young girls envy. Here Miss Hopper tells the secrets of that beauty.

Miss Hopper's beauty extends from tip to toe. Her figure is girlish. She has a healthy girl's vim and vivacity. She looks like her own granddaughter.

Miss Hopper's hair is thick and lustrous, finer far than 40 years ago. She has never known falling hair or dandruff, and never a touch of gray. Her method has brought like results to multitudes of friends.

A classical pose, showing her youthful contours. Miss Hopper now appears on the stage every day to show other women the ways to beauty and youth.

This picture of Miss Hopper was taken in 1923. In face and figure, in hair and complexion she looks like a girl of 20. Yet for 35 years she has been a stage star, working as stage stars must. For 4½ years she served in the battle zones for France.

My World-Famed Beauty

How I searched the world to gain it
How I kept it to my grand old age

By Edna Wallace Hopper

A Professional Beauty

I AM a professional beauty, and have been for 40 years. Beauty is and always has been my chief stock in trade. It has made me what I am.

In my earlier years the papers described me as "the most beautiful thing New York had ever seen on the stage." And kindly critics very often pay like compliments today.

Yet my natural beauty was not extraordinary. In fact, I was rather a plain girl. What I became was due to cultivation. I fostered every charm. And what I am today—an "old-age beauty"—is due to expert care.

For 34 years a star

I have lived for 40 years in the limelight. For 34 years I have been a stage star. In drama I was one of the earliest proteges of David Belasco and the late Charles Frohman.

It was in the early '90's when I made my great success in "The Girl I left Behind Me."

I have lived a generation since then, but am still a stage beauty. The thousands who see me daily wonder at my youthful bloom. They flock every week to my special matinees where I reveal my secrets.

The wonder of it

That is the wonder of it—being a girlish beauty at my grand old age. I could easily pass for twenty. I look, some say, like my own granddaughter. Schoolboys flirt with me on the street.

My skin is like a baby's. My complexion is like a debutante's. My hair is abundant, lustrous and silky. It has never begun to turn gray. I am young in body and spirit, bubbling with vitality.

Those are the lessons which I have to teach. First, how young girls or older women may foster beauty, as did I. Second, how to keep one's youth.

A debt to my mother

I owe much to my mother. She played a royal part in life because of wondrous beauty. And she died a youthful beauty at the age of 57—with a baby's complexion, girlish contours, and not a gray hair in her head.

Mother was rich and ambitious. She urged me from my earliest years to foster and enhance my beauty, as did she. She taught me her secrets and gave me her formulas. Then together we traveled the beauty-loving world in search of better methods.

We consulted great specialists in France, Germany and Austria. We talked with many famous beauties and obtained their secrets. Lucie Lantelme, queen of Parisian beauties, gave me some wondrous helps.

Able scientific men helped us to choose among the hundreds of suggestions. They evolved ways to combine some dozens of helps into four or five preparations, which experts perfected for us.

Ever since then I have kept in touch with the latest scientific advancement. I have spent many years in France. I have always kept my preparations the last word in beauty helps.

I thus secured what I consider the supreme beauty helps of all ages. I have never met anyone who in other ways secured comparable results. And certainly no woman can ask for more than these aids brought to me and mine.

I have supplied the same helps to countless friends on the stage and in society. They secured like results. Most of my friends are over fifty, yet every time I see them I marvel at their youth.

So I know that my results are not unique. I am convinced that countless women of all ages can accomplish what I did. And I am going to help them.

More beauty for all

Beauty differs in degree and kind. But I have proved that any girl or women may enhance her beauty by very simple means.

Signs of age are sometimes due to ill health. But the average woman need not show them up to sixty, as I've proved.

Countless women, often as young as thirty, look very much older than I. I am going to tell them the ways I found to restore their girlish attractions.

In the old days, only exceptional women fostered youth and beauty. They became famous beauties, because beauty was rare. Some were makers of history. Some were noted belles at sixty and above.

They merely did what I did and am doing. They used facial clays, oils, foods and tonics for the skin and hair. My advantage lies in vastly better products, in the latest scientific helps.

Now millions are cultivating beauty, millions are fighting age. In every circle we see plain girls who have made themselves resistless. We see mothers who look like their daughters, and grandmothers who look like girls.

The best helps known

The helps I offer, so far as I know, are the best helps known to science. They result from many years of world-search.

For economy and convenience, I combine in four preparations some 33 great beauty helps. I have them prepared by the ablest experts without regard to cost, but I spend little on the packages.

A duty to my sex

Many thousands of women have asked me to do this. They have finally convinced me that I owe it to my sex.

These beautifiers cost me years of searching and a fortune. But I had the time and money, and I had a mother's help. Many experts, all my life, have freely contributed their best, because of my place on the stage. So I count these matchless helps as gifts, and I feel profoundly grateful.

In 1914, when the great war came, I was the first American woman to offer her services to France. I served her in the battle zones until the war's end. And largely because I owed to France the beauty helps which made my fame and fortune.

In that same spirit I undertake this task. Some very kind men with money have contributed their aid. So I am now placing the very helps I use within every woman's reach. I am pricing them so every girl and woman, poor or rich, can afford them. And in my busy life I am taking the time to tell the facts about them.

My White Youth Clay

My chief beauty item is my marvelous complexion. That is largely due to a clay. French beauty experts taught me to use it long before clays came into wide use here.

Now you read much about complexion clays. Any woman who does not use one does herself injustice. A large percentage of the youth and beauty seen today is due to clay.

But most clays are crude and muddy, such as I quit years ago. I use a clay which experts have perfected by 20 years of scientific study. It is the last word in facial clays.

Now they have found that rare clay—a certain mineral-laden clay—which brings maximum results. They have learned how to refine it to remove the useless mud. The clay I use is white and clean and dainty.

They have learned added factors which multiply results. My White Youth Clay is almost a complete beauty treatment in itself. So ordinary clays, when compared with this, seem crude and ineffective.

Clay has been used for ages. It forms, and always has formed, a vital factor in beautiful complexions. No woman can look her best without it, few women can keep their youth. The users of clay stand out in any crowd. Women who omit it can never hope to compete with them. It is a beauty essential.

Ordinary clays, however, are very out-of-date. The results may seem amazing, as they did to me at first. But until I found this new-type clay, I did not know one-tenth what clay could do.

Now this is a dainty habit. My clay is white, clean, fragrant. It does not stain things. You will be delighted with its use and its effects.

White Youth Clay purges the skin of all that clogs and mars it. Oil, grime, dirt, hardened oil, dead skin, etc. Those are the causes of muddy complexions, blackheads and blemishes. You will feel the impurities fairly drawn from the skin, and a new complexion follows. Blemishes disappear.

White Youth Clay also brings the blood to the skin to nourish and revive it. That is what causes the sensation of warmth. That is what brings the rosy afterglow, so amazing to new users. Many women in thirty minutes seem to drop ten years.

White Youth Clay also firms the skin. It embodies an astringent. It combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores. Thus it retains and restores youth's smoothness and contours. In a marvelous way it corrects and prevents signs of age.

I apply White Youth Clay three times a week. Every time I use it I behold a new complexion, soft and rosy, clean and clear. The result is a revelation, almost unbelievable at first. Then I apply my Youth Cream, and my face is like a child's.

If lines and wrinkles have already formed, I advise a daily application to those places for awhile.

My White Youth Clay does more for youth and beauty than all other helps combined. That is because it combines with clay so many other skin essentials.

Edna Wallace Hopper's White Youth Clay sells for 50c and $1.00 per tube at your store.

My Facial Youth

I use no water on my face, no cleansing cream. I found in Paris years ago a liquid cleanser which is vastly more efficient. I call it my Facial Youth.

It contains no animal, no vegetable fat. So it cannot grow hair on the face. It does not assimilate in any way with the skin. It simply penetrates every pore, cleaning the skin to the depths. When I wipe it off, all the grime and dirt, all the clogging matter comes out with it.

My skin was never really clean until I found this cleanser. I have tried cleaning my skin to the utmost with old methods, then applying Facial Youth. It is amazing what extra dirt and refuse then come out.

In the theatrical profession the removal of make-up is the supreme test of a cleanser. There my Facial Youth is superseding everything else.

In late years leading beauty experts the world over have found and adopted this formula. But their prices are very high. The leading experts charge $3.00 per bottle. So this great liquid cleanser, while widely used by the well-to-do, has been barred to the great majority.

Utter cleanliness is a prime requisite of beauty. A clogged skin can't be healthy. And nothing compares with Facial Youth for cleaning the skin to the depths. Once follow any other cleanser with it, see the extra grime that comes out, and you will never use another.

I treat my body with the same care as my face. Before my bath I cover myself with this Facial Youth. And I marvel at the clogging matter which water fails to get.

I apply Facial Youth night and morning, and whenever else my face needs cleaning. I cover my face, throat and shoulders with it. Of course, I always use it on retiring. One should never retire with powder or rouge on the face, for the skin must breathe at night.

I follow with my Youth Cream, at bedtime as a night cream, in daytime as a powder base.

Facial Youth is more than a matchless cleanser. It acts to soften and to whiten the skin. Wherever it goes it carries several skin helps with it. It also combats wrinkles. In fact, this same formula is sold by a beauty expert of nation-wide fame as a wrinkle remover.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Facial Youth sells at 75c per bottle at your store.

My Youth Cream

This is my cold cream which I apply on retiring, after cleansing my face with Facial Youth. Also daytimes as a powder base. Night and day I keep it on my face to foster the fine texture of the skin.

Youth Cream is a remarkable creation, perfected for me by French scientists. Every new discovery in this line has been added to it. Today it embodies, I believe, all the best helps science knows. Among them are products of both strawberry and lemon. All my world-search, all my ceaseless efforts, have found nothing better to soften, whiten, feed and smooth the skin. It is one of the chief reasons for a skin texture which has given me world-wide fame.

My Youth Cream comes in two types—Cold Cream and Vanishing Cream. Both have the same essential constituents. Be sure to get the type you want.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream sells for 60c per jar at your store.

My Hair Youth

My hair is my greatest glory. It is abundant, silky, lustrous. Before I bobbed it, it fell below my knees. It grows finer every year.

I have never had falling hair, dry or oily hair, and never a touch of dandruff. I have never had a gray hair. So with mother. She died at the age of 57 with hair like mine today. So with many friends whom I have long supplied. All of them are notable for heavy, healthy, youthful hair.

This is due to my Hair Youth, which I also owe to France. I apply it with an eye-dropper once a day directly to the scalp. Just enough to dampen the scalp. It takes but a minute, and the dropper does not muss the hair or disturb the wave. One who has falling hair or dandruff should apply it twice a day.

Hair Youth treats the hair like a garden. It combats dandruff. It removes the sebum—the hardened oil which stifles the hair roots. It maintains a clean scalp, then it stimulates and fertilizes. Hair flourishes on such a scalp, just as flowers thrive in a well-kept garden.

Gray hair is due to lack of pigment. That comes, like falling hair and scant hair, from clogged and stifled hair roots. Dandruff and sebum are the great hair enemies. Keep the scalp clean, feed and stimulate the hair roots, and the hair should keep its vigor, health and color to old age. Neglect those things, and hair, like flowers, will wither.

My Hair Youth is the result of decades of hair study by the ablest of hair experts. It combines every helpful thing I found in all my searching. It is just as harmless as it is effective. It does not affect the hair's color, save as new vigor makes the hair more colorful. It does not affect hair which is artificially colored with henna, peroxide or hair dye.

No rubbing is necessary. Women sufficiently massage their scalps by combing and by shampoos.

I can do no greater kindness to men and women than by advising this Hair Youth.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Hair Youth costs 50c and $1.00 per bottle at your store.

An eye-dropper comes with each bottle. The $1.00 bottle is three times as large as the other.

My Powders

To oblige my friends, I have induced the makers of my powders to put up the identical powders for me to offer at ordinary prices. So these exquisite powders are now at your command.

They are supreme creations—as fine as vapor, as harmless as dew and fragrant with my favorite perfume. I, who have searched the world for beauty helps, have found no powders to compare. I am glad that, by the kindness of the makers, I can supply them to you.

Personally I use a heavy, clinging cold cream powder, with a basis like my Youth Cream. I call it my Youth Cream Powder. It clings and stays, and it protects my face against the elements. This comes in square boxes at $1.00 per box.

But some of my friends like powder light and fluffy, without the cold cream base. So I had both kinds prepared. My light Face Powder comes in round boxes at 50c per box.

Both come in three shades—White, Flesh and Brunette. All at your store.

All are Guaranteed

The preparations I describe here are my chief helps to youth and beauty. They combine 33 ingredients which modern science considers the greatest beauty helps in existence.

But I want no woman to feel that she lost by taking my advice. I want no woman to hesitate for fear of disappointment. So I have instructed every dealer who handles my products to offer a guarantee. If the first package of any of my products fails to delight you, your dealer will return the price and Edna Wallace Hopper will pay.

I cannot do more. I see countless plain girls whom I know could be beauties. I see countless old-looking women whom I know could be young. The evidence is on every side. My trial offer is open to all. What more can I do?

One Sample Free

I will gladly mail a sample of one of my helps to any woman who requests it. But I cannot write you personally, because I am on the stage. I am not a beauty expert, not a cosmetic maker. I can only tell you what others told me, and supply you what they made for me.

All druggists and toilet counters now supply Edna Wallace Hopper's beauty helps. Each package carries a guarantee, so none may lose by taking my advice. When you try one you will want them all. And every woman should use them all.

LOAN CONCERN BUYS HOTEL BUILDING ON PINE STREET FOR ITS NEW QUARTERS

Industrial Trust & Savings Co. Will Occupy Wellington Structure—Transfer of Downtown Corner.

By Berry Moore.

The sale of the four-story Wellington Hotel building at 713-15 Pine street for the Van Studdiford estate to the Industrial Trust & Savings Co., was announced yesterday by the Cornet & Zeibig Trust.

The building, which has an ornate facade, with stone trimmings, and the dimensions of which are 81x30 feet, is to be transformed for occupancy by the Industrial, which now has quarters on the ground floor of the International Life Building, at Eighth and Chestnut streets. The removal will take place after a year.

The concern formerly was known as the Industrial Loan Co., but it recently acquired a charter as the Industrial Savings & Trust Co., thus increasing its scope as a financial institution.

Second Purchase in Year.

Less than a year ago the Industrial Loan Co. bought the five-story Orpheum Hotel Building at the northeast corner of Ninth and Chestnut streets, having plans for a 16-story building. Execution of the building project was precluded, owing to the higher building costs and the Ninth and Chestnut streets building was recently resold at an advanced price to N. M. Glick president of the Glick Realty Co., and Jack Dubinsky.

The Wellington Hotel Building is regarded as well suited both as to character and location to the demands of the Industrial Savings & Trust Co. The price paid for the structure was not announced.

Big Downtown Corner Sold.

The big deal of the week embraced a downtown corner east of Twelfth boulevard and two attractive sites in the wholesale district, west of that boundary. Details of the operation are withheld as premature, but the deal is virtually closed it was declared yesterday.

The 13-story building project of the Jefferson Hotel for the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Locust streets, will perceptibly enhance the perspective of Locust street, and will doubtless prove a factor in the development of this section of the city.

The addition will serve as an arcade from Twelfth boulevard to Thirteenth street, and will be in the picture with the Public Library and the Bishop Tuttle Memorial, projected for the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Olive streets, with a full sweep of the Memorial Plaza, which is to beautify this part of the city. A description and illustration of Hotel Jefferson as it will appear when the projected addition is completed, is printed elsewhere.

Contracts for the purchase of three downtown corners were closed through the Ben Altheimer Brother Real Estate Co., but particulars are withheld pending delivery of final papers. The agency effected transactions aggregating $300,000.

Convention Plans.

Gerald B. O'Reilly has been made chairman of the St. Louis Convention Committee for the convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. The committee will hold a luncheon at the American Hotel Annex Wednesday, when arrangements will be completed for sending a delegation to the convention. It will be held in Washington, beginning June 2.

The St. Louis delegation to the convention will travel on a special train which will leave Union Station Saturday, May 31, probably at 3 p. m. The other members of the St. Louis committee are James P. Blake, Barney Dickmann, Joseph M. Ebeling, Marion S. Fuqua, C. M. McDonald, Orman J. McCawley, Dave Zucker of the Bulletin, Charles Nax of the Globe-Democrat and Berry Moore of the Post-Dispatch.

WORK ON HOTEL JEFFERSON ANNEX WILL BEGIN SOON

Thirteen-Story Extension Will Have Frontage of 101 Feet on Thirteenth Street and 205 Feet on Locust.

The 13-story extension, to be erected to the Hotel Jefferson, will have a frontage of 101 feet on Thirteenth street and 225 feet on Locust street and will overlook Library Park, which is to become a part of the proposed Municipal Plaza.

A $3,200,000 bond issue is to be underwritten by Stifel-Nicolaus & Co. for the erection of the building, and construction is to start within the next three or four weeks.

The character and the scope of the improvement will make the Greater Hotel Jefferson vie with the finest hotels in the United States. A thousand rooms are contemplated, including the present Jefferson Hotel.

The lobby of the present hotel is to be extended to Thirteenth street, through the annex, as a magnificent corridor, which will be known tentatively as Peacock Alley and which will be sumptuously furnished, carrying out the traditions of the best English hotels.

Four Shops Provided.

Adjoining Peacock Alley will be the ladies' reception and retiring rooms, beauty parlors, and cloak rooms. On the south of Peacock Alley running to Locust street, plans for four shops have been made. These shops will house ladies' exclusive garments, art shops and other shops of special interest to the traveling public.

Off Peacock Alley will be the office of Lyman Hay, manager, and the Maitre de Hotel. Hay is head of the Hotel company and the moving spirit of the building project.

The convention and banquet hall will be 100 feet long and 70 feet wide and will have a capacity for 1000 guests at banquet, with an overflow accommodation on the mezzanine floor of banquet hall for 500 more.

The convention hall will be located midway between the first and second floors, and while elevator service will be provided, the main entrance to the convention hall will be by way of a grand marble stairway 12 feet above the level of Peacock Alley. The guests will not be submitted to the discomfort of crowded elevators by reason of conventions being held on the roof garden.

Roof Garden Planned.

A roof garden for the summer use will be provided. This roof garden will overlook Locust street.

Ajoining Peacock Alley on the south, an additional dining and tea room will be located. These will be decorated in restful colors.

In the basement will be located the new kitchen, refrigeration storage and laundry. The kitchens will be equipped with automatic dish conveyors and every innovation tending to prompt and efficient service. The plans for the building have been prepared by the T. P. Barnett Company, architects, with offices in the Arcade Building, which will have supervision of its construction.

The proposed annex was originally planned also to embrace the adjoining plot at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and St. Charles street, having a frontage of 199 feet on the former and 225 feet on the latter, and separated from the site selected for the proposed improvement only by the east-west alley of this block. The strip is now occupied by Butler's eight-story warehouse.

Thus the Hotel Jefferson would have covered the entire block from Twelfth to Thirteenth streets, and from Locust to St. Charles streets. The joining and parallel strip at the southeast corner of Thirteenth and St. Charles streets hasbeen under consideration several times for theater projects, notably b ythe Shuberts for the Shubert-Jefferson Theater, which will shortly vacate its quarters in the Union Electric Building, to make way for the expansion of the Union Electric Co.

This strip is owned by the Mutual Realty Co., composed of clients of the Mercantile Trust Co.

The present Hotel Jefferson was promoted on the eve of the Louisianna Purchase Exposition by Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co., which made the building loan for the project. It was also designed by Thomas P. Barnett.

The new Arlington Hotel, under construction at Hot Springs, Ark., and which will entail an investment of more than $3,000,000, is being financed by the Mercantile Trust Co. It is being erected by the same interest controlling Hotel Jefferson.

PLAN TO PURCHASE BUST BY BRINGHURST

BUST IT IS PROPOSED TO PLACE IN MUSEUM AND THE SCULPTOR

Two-by-Four Club Would Present Marble Study of Joan of Arc to Art Museum.

A move to purchase and then present to the Art Museum a marble bust by Robert P. Bringhurst, one of St. Louis' most able sculptors, and a pioneer in his art in this city, is under way by the Two-by-Four Club, a local society of sculptors, painters and architects, of which Bringhurst is a charter member.

The bust, which the sculptor calls Joan of Arc, is a study of the Maid of Orleans listening to the voices which prompt her to go to the aid of her country. It is of marble, chiseled out of the block by Bringhurst himself, the artist having done the work when studying in Paris while a young man.

Though one of his earliest creations, critics declare it to be one of his finest. The face, of course, is that of a young woman, and the legend which inspired the artist is retold in the fine spirituality of the maid's expression, the nobility of the facial contours, and the pervading sweetness, which is in no manner lessened by the ardor of the girl's eyes.

Bringhurst Now an Invalid.

Bringhurst, who is 69 years old, suffered a paralytic stroke about a year ago, and has been unable to work since then. Prior to his illness he maintained a studio, and for a time after he was confined to his home at 21 Yale avenue and did some work there. His condition now makes it impossible for him to engage in his art.

The artist was born at Alton, Ill., in 1855. He later moved to Litchfield, in the same State, where he engaged in the marble and monument business, during which time he was married. He had displayed ability at modeling in clay when a boy, and his monument trade again gave him the opportunity to model in a minor way.

ROBERT P. BRINGHURST.

Feeling that sculpture was more to his liking than selling stones for burial grounds, and believing he might have some ability along those lines, he gave up his trade, came to St. Louis and studied at the then new School of Fine Arts. He later went to Paris, studying for three years, during which time the bust of Joan was begun and completed.

Taught Sculpture Here.

Then he returned to St. Louis, becoming a member of the faculty of the school at which he first studied. He retained his connection with the Institution until 1903, when he was forced to resign because of the press of work brought about by the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, to which he greatly contributed.

In the meantime he had made a national reputation for himself by the excellence of his portraits, busts, monuments and various other forms of sculpture, receiving medals at many exhibitions in different parts of the country. Lorado Taft, nationally known sculptor and art critic, spoke of his work on the Education Building at the St. Louis fair, and some earlier work at the Omaha Exposition, as "works of much beauty," and commented especially on another work, the "Awakening of Spring," alluding to the artist's delightful and poetic fancy.

Works at Art Museum.

Three of Bringhurst's works are now at the Art Museum, including "The Kiss of Immortality," a clay in high relief. It is a copy of a larger work of his, which was destroyed by fire at the Portland Exposition, the original being more fully modeled. This creation was also known as "The Kiss of Eternity," the name being changed at the Portland exhibition. Visitors insisted on calling it "The Kiss of Immorality."

The bust of Joan, which admirers of Bringhurst hope the city will soon possess, is now on exhibition at the Artists' Guild.

EXCURSION STEAMER COMING

After an absence of nearly eight months, the excursion steamer "St. Paul," will return to St. Louis this week from winter quarters at Davenport, Ia., and will open the river excursion season with a dancing trip Saturday night, May 3.

The first all-day trip will be Sunday morning, May 4, down the river to Herculaneum and Crystal City. The week-end church and school trip will start about two weeks later.

The Streckfus Steamboat Line, the operators announce the St. Paul has been redecorated and refurnished, and that new and modern cafeterias and check rooms have been added. The advance ticket office has been moved to the mezzanine floor of the Arcade building, and arrangements completed for advance sale of tickets at earnier and later hours and on Sundays.

GERMAN PURCHASES OF U. S. GOODS INCREASE 67 PER CENT

Cotton Sales Largely Responsible for Increase—Import of Goods From Germany Declines.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—German purchases of American goods for the first quarter of 1924 increased 67 per cent over the corresponding period of 1923, the Commerce Department announced today. American exports to Germany during the period were valued at $126,213,006, against $75,558,803 for the first quarter of 1923.

Heavy increases in the sales of American cotton to Germany was largely responsible for the increase. Germany's February purchases of cotton in the United States were valued at $29,000,000, against $8,000,000 for February, 1923. Increases were also shown in lard, evaporated and condensed milk, tobacco, dried fruit, typewriters and adding machines. Imports of German goods into the United States declined from $39,262,000, in the first quarter of 1923, to $33,913,000 for the same period this year.

The decreased demand for German goods in the United States was interpreted as indicating that while Germany is able to make heavier purchases abroad, the stability of currency, and general higher production costs are limiting her ability to compete in foreign markets.

TO SPEAK ON Y. M. C. A. WORK

Charles P. Taft II, of Cincinnati, O., a nephew of Chief Justice William Howard Taft, will be one of the speakers at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon in the Chamber of Commerce dining room, 511 Locust street, Wednesday noon. Taft is a graduate of Yale University, where for three years he was a member of the Yale football team and captain of the basket ball team. At the luncheon, Taft will tell of the work being done by the Y. M. C. A. throughout the United States.

H. A. Wheeler, an oil geologist and mining engineer, who formerly was an instructor of the engineering classed at Washington University, will speak on "The Physical Aspects of Teapot Dome."

MISS BOOTH VISITS PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON, April 26.—Evangeline Booth, national commander of the Salvation Army, changed the new "handshaking regime" of the White House into a handshaping episode when she called on President Coolidge today. When Commander Booth was ushered into the executive office of the President, several hundred visitors from all over the country were lined up for the purpose of observing the President at work. Recognizing the chief of the Salvation Army, the visitors forgot decorum, gave her a cheer, and instead of filing up and down the line to shake hands with each one, they told the President that the Salvation Army had not abandoned "street corner" and, despite growth, continues its work of listening to the least notable.

Others elected are Harold S. Fox, St. Joseph, vice president; Clarence Jones, of Joplin, secretary-treasurer; Gibson, of Joplin; C. A. Sedalia; H. O. Hendricks, Wellston, and W. W. Why Buy an Open Car

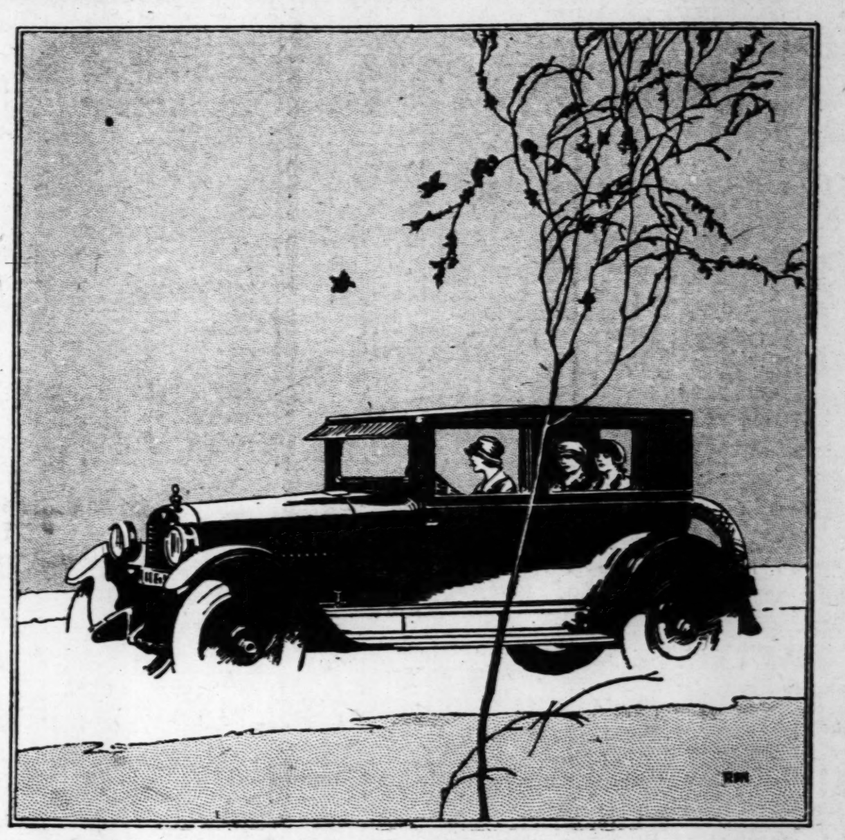
The Coach Costs So Little More



No Wonder the Coach Owner is Envied

All year utility and comfort. Warm in winter. Wet-proof, dust-proof in summer. No curtains to bother. And you pay no more than open car cost.

HUDSON SUPER-SIX COACH $1550

Freight and Tax Extra

Pride of Ownership in the Coach

Handsome appearance, roominess and personal comfort give a sense of well-being that completes the enjoyment of delightful performance in the Coach.

ESSEX SIX COACH $975

Freight and Tax Extra

And the Coach is Exclusive to Hudson and Essex

The Coach is a Hudson-Essex invention. No other type and no other car gives closed car comforts at open car cost.

The Coach costs but little more than the open models of either Hudson or Essex. The extra cost of closed models on other cars is from $300 up, even on the lowest priced cars. More than 125,000 Coaches are in service. Sales exceed 3,000 every week. Everyone prefers a closed car. The Coach alone is the quality car within the reach of all. No wonder the Coach on Hudson and Essex is the world's largest selling six-cylinder closed car.

It is the Car for Everyone

In two and one-half years the Coach has proved a staunchness and reliability never before associated with a closed car. In all service in every part of the world it satisfies the pride of ownership. It gives all the utility you get in any closed car. No one who knows will be content with anything less than closed car comforts, and the Coach alone gives those comforts at open car cost.

The Evidence Detroit Gives

Sales leadership in Detroit is a far more important endorsement than its similar position elsewhere. For motor car values are better understood than anywhere else in the world.

More than 200,000 Detroit automobile workers know the inside of every automobile success. They appraise values as experts. They buy the cars they believe in

For three successive months Hudson-Essex sales in Detroit and throughout Michigan have outnumbered any other makes with the exception of two widely known low-priced four-cylinder cars

This unanswerable evidence is proof of what the most critical and best informed group of motor buyers in the world think of Hudson and Essex

The cars they buy are the cars it is safe for you to buy

Hudson and Essex Are of one Quality

Both are the creations of the same engineers. They are built in the same shops by the same workmen under the same patents. There is no difference in quality of material or workmanship.

The price you want to pay for a car will decide whether it shall be a Hudson or Essex. The closed car advantages of the Coach and its price leave no other consideration.

Hudson and Essex Are of One Quality

Important Notice to Buyers

The remarkable value offered in Hudson and Essex is matched by the astonishingly low parts prices and the progressive service policy that keeps maintenance down to a minimum. Be sure and get parts price list from your dealer.

E. L. G.—Rose jars are made as follows: Gather rose petals early in the morning and lay on a table in a cool, airy place until the dew dries. Then put them in a large stone jar, sprinkling a little more than ½-inch layers of the petals. Add petals morning after morning until enough have been gathered for your purpose. Then after 10 days after the last is put in, stirring every morning. Have an ounce each of cloves and allspice, coarsely ground, and as much broken and shredded stick cinnamon. Transfer the rose petals to another jar and scatter the spices mixed together, alternately with the flowers. Cover the jar tightly and let stand in a cool place for three weeks, when the contents will be ready for permanent jar. Have ready a quarter of an ounce of mace, allspice and cloves, all coarsely ground; half a grated nutmeg, half an ounce of cinnamon, broken fine; one ounce of powdered orris root, and a quarter of a pound of dried lavender leaves. Mix all together in a bowl and fill the rose jar with alternate layers of the petals and the mixture. Pour a few drops each of rose geranium or other fragrant oils should be dropped into the layers as you progress. Over the whole pinch pour an ounce of fine cologne or rose extract. This is sufficient to fill two quart jars or one very large one, and it will keep for years. Other kinds of the various sweet things may be added, as a few tube roses or a spray of heliotrope. If the jar be left open for a half hour every day it will fill your rooms with spicy fragrance.

POLITICAL TENDENCIES DISCUSSED BY EMERY

"We Cannot Substitute Statutes for Commandments," He Tells Catholic Club.

James A. Emery of Washington, speaking before the Catholic Club of St. Louis at its dinner at the R... Louis Club last night, on "Political Tendencies," outlined the principles which guided the framers of the Constitution, and asked:

"Do we follow the needle of the great compass with even approximate care? I do not refer to those excursions in which every people may indulge under the temptation of extraordinary circumstances but from which it is hoped they may return to their main course with renewed satisfaction. Its occasional, even extensive, manifestation is entirely human, but now we face a continuous preachment that not merely forgets the distinction between the fundamental and the superficial but moves ever more steadily for the removal of restraint upon legislative authority. We have imbedded sumptuary legislation in the national Constitution, while the newer states have not merely adopted a fundamental law but amended its terms into statutory legislation, which in one instance acts upon 69 amendments in a single year. Thus we tend to regard the fundamental charter as casually as a city ordinance.

The Capital Levy.

"We have been critics of the capital levy proposed by the British Labor Party, unconscious of the fact that the State and local taxation of gifts, inheritance, and profits upon the sale of capital assets have carried us a long way toward a capital levy, the revenues from which has been expended for current expenses, a dissipation of capital offending the most fundamental economic principle.

"The right to govern ourselves is no longer at issue; the capacity to do it is facing a severe test, for we reject the most expert to accept the most popular. We face a large school who believe government should interfere wherever it can, not merely wherever it must, and is to protect the citizen against himself and not merely against others. We cannot substitute statutes for commandments, nor the external prohibitions of authority for the internal guardianship of conscience and character. Character is the product of the fireside. It originates in the family. Its creation is the family's obligation. It should be aided by the school; guarded by the church; protected and promoted by the state."

Discusses Legislation.

The speaker discussed legislation affecting Catholic schools, particularly the Oregon law, and said:

"It is useless to argue with a bigot. His mind is like the pupil of the eye. The more light you throw upon it the more it contracts. There is no political fact more certain than the revival periodically of every ancient calumny of knownothingism directed at catholicity. For the moment it assumes a new form, more grotesque than we have recently witnessed. It finds its support in secrecy and ignorance, and its appeal to that prejudice which rejects information. It expresses itself even in the public forum, and circulates again the ancient slander that the Catholic citizen owes political allegiance to ecclesiastical authority.

"We assert and revere the spiritual supremacy of the successor of St. Peter. He is the head of our church; the unerring voice of our creed. But we cherish our country no less than our church. We are citizens of the United States and not of Rome. Our political head resides in the White House and not in the Vatican. We know no Catholic prelate who seeks to transform his mitre into a crown or his trozier into a scepter. Nor do we know the prompt rebuke from the Catholic laity which awaits the ecclesiastic who could so degrade the majesty of his moral authority.

The Catholic voter will no more take his political platform from a hierarchy than he will receive the articles of his faith from Congress."

Purposes of Club.

John S. Leahy, president of the club, explained its plan of organization, with only 100 members and its practice of inviting guests, irrespective of religious belief, to its dinners, at which the Archbishop of St. Louis is the guest of honor. In censuring the Ku Klux Klan, he said:

"Such an organization finds a prototype in the person of Benedict Arnold, who, after he had betrayed his country, wrote what he styled, "An Address to the American People," in which he said that the reason and justification for his act was that he found many foreigners in the continental army, that he had discovered that Washington and Hamilton and their associates were mere politicians, and that he had actually seen a priest celebrating the mass.

"We are opposed to any hyphenated citizenship and we announce that our debt of gratitude has been well paid, both in blood and in treasure, to all the countries of the old world, and that we are not Gaelic, not Nordic, not Celtic, nor Slavic, nor Semitic, nor Teutonic, nor Anglo-Saxon, but just and only plain citizens of the United States of America. We stand for loyalty to but one country—the United States—and for devotion to but one flag—The Star Spangled Banner. We believe in but one God, and we demand the right to worship Him as we see fit."

IMPROVEMENT BODY PLANS TRADES PARADE

Chouteau-Lafayette Association to Commemorate Reconstruction of Thoroughfares.

The Chouteau-Lafayette Improvement Association, a civic organization composed of manufacturers, merchants, tradesmen, real estate owners and residents of the district bounded by the railroads, the river, Jefferson and Lafayette avenues have completed plans for a trades parade and celebration, commemorating the reconstruction of Chouteau avenue and Twelfth boulevard and installation of the new lighting on those thoroughfares.

The parade, which will assume somewhat the character of an exposition on wheels, will form at Twelfth and Chouteau and encircle the district returning to the plaza, Twelfth and Chouteau, where a grandstand is to be erected and public speaking and music indulged in. Prominent speakers are to be on hand. This exhibition will be educational and entertaining.

The Twelfth Street National Bank, Lafayette-South Side Bank, Texana Petroleum Corp., Blue Valley Butter Company, Anheuser-Busch, Inc., Polar Wave Ice and Fuel Co., St. Louis Turn Verein and about thirty others will be represented.

During the celebration week the district will be decorated. The Chouteau-Lafayette Improvement Association, of which Phil J. Kraemer is president, was organized to promote and develop the district as a well-balance all-around center.

T. J. Schleicker of the Schleicker Bag Co., is chairman of the celebration committee.

Health Questions Answered

By Dr. Lewis Baker

An Advertisement. Telling How and When to Use Trustworthy Products and Reproducing Extracts of Patrons' Letters Relating to Cadomene, Balmwort, Sulpherb, Arbolone, Su-thol, Mentho-Laxene, Minyol, Hypo-Nuclane, Vilane, Etc.

DR. LEWIS BAKER

Mrs. J. R. asks: "I am 52 yrs. old and am very nervous. Suffer a great deal with pain in head and back of neck. Have no ambition and am always tired and depressed. Am pale and listless."

Answer: I suggest that Cadomene tablets be taken to aid improvement of the quality and quantity of the blood and help restore the normal functioning of the body organs and nervous system.

J. D. asks: "I am 17 and under weight for my age and height. Am troubled with costiveness and pimples and boils on my face and body. Would like to know what to take."

Answer: To quickly aid the bowels and rid the blood of the toxins causing pimples and boils, take Sulpherb tablets as a laxative blood medicine. To increase weight, try Hypo-Nuclane tablets as a nutritional tonic. They may be taken at same time.

M. L. C. writes: "Having used the Triopeptine tablets to correct digestion with great success, I am now asking for something to help a rheumatic condition that seems to be getting chronic. My right leg, hip, shoulder and right arm is the location of trouble."

Answer: I recommend Cardiol tablets as an aid to better elimination and to remove the acid condition responsible in the cause. For relief of the severe pain take 5-grain Su-thol tablets, as needed, in conjunction.

R. A. S. asks: "I have bladder and kidney trouble, often have dull aches and pains of muscles and joints. Can this condition be helped?"

Answer: This condition is sometimes due to constipation, in which case take Sulpherb tablets, as a bowel and kidney tonic. If due to functional inactivity of the kidneys, take Balmwort tablets as a diuretic-tonic and neutralizing agent to build up kidneys and overcome the bladder irritation.

Answer to Mrs. E. M. H.: Where high blood pressure exists the personal attention of a physician is necessary.

Answer to Mrs. J. R.: The pains of sciatica may sometimes be relieved by massaging with triple strength Mentho-Laxene Saliva. Su-thol tablets also relief in some cases, of rheumatic pains.

Y. W. asks: "In the past year I have gained ten fat and also I suffer with embarrassment, because I have to have all my clothing made to order, as nothing will fit me. Can I reduce?"

Answer: I suggest that you obtain Arbolone tablets, which are generally very effective in reducing superfluous fat.

Mrs. E. H. asks: "It seems like I can't eat anything. It lays on my stomach and causes gas and pressure on my heart. I wish you would tell me what to do."

Answer: If constipated take Cascara-Royal Pills as a pleasant laxative. Also begin taking Triopeptine tablets, which tend to aid and overcome functional distress of stomach and bowels.

W. E. B. asks: "My hair is falling, have itching scalp and a bad case of dandruff. Is it necessary to cut the hair before using the plain yellow Minyol? Does Minyol stain the hair?"

Answer: No, do not cut hair. No, Minyol does not stain. It quickly stops dandruff, falling hair, and itching scalp, and improves the strength and beauty of the hair.

Answer to Mr. H.: Cadomene tablets and Balmwort tablets may be taken at the same time when conditions warrant.

Answer to Mrs. E. E.: For your child's obstinate cough, try Mentho-Laxene. Contains no opiates, narcotics, pine or chloroform and helps where ordinary cough syrups fail.

Mrs. K. R. asks: "Will you please advise a remedy for nasal catarrh and bad breath?"

Answer: Obtain antiseptic Vilane Powder and use as per directions as a nasal douche, mouth-wash and to gargle throat twice or more daily. Also apply Mentho-Laxene Salve in nostrils morning and night. This is the most effective treatment when used regularly for several weeks.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, Medical Director, The Blackburn Products Co., 312 College Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, has been recommending Trustworthy medicines to millions of people through the medium of the newspapers, and doubtless has helped in relieving the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single individual in the world's history; and by an inexpensive method.

The medicines mentioned by him are pure and free from habit-forming drugs. They represent the combined wisdom and experience of physician and chemist.

Progressive druggists can supply them. By reading his answers to others you should find a case similar to your own.

Thousands have written him expressions similar to the following:

LETTERS TO DR. BAKER

Mr. John P. Hart, 546 W. D. Woodruff Place, Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "In 1918 I was feeling very miserable. Felt weak and no ambition. I got worse from day to day and became too weak to climb stairs. I called a doctor and he asked what I was doing to help myself. I told him I had just commenced using Cadomene tablets. He told me to continue, as they were as good as anything he could prescribe. After using two boxes I kept getting better until now I am fit for most anything. Appetite good, sleep well, etc. Had weighed 145 pounds and now weigh 175 pounds. I think it is the best medicine for a run-down system and recommend it to everyone, etc."

Miss Mamie E. Brooks, Brighton, Ky., writes: "I never wrote a letter like this but I feel that I must say that Balmwort tablets are the best I ever used. I suffered two years with kidney and bladder trouble. My brother, who had successfully used Balmwort, told me to try them and now I am ever so much better. You can use my letter to tell others, etc."

Mr. John F. Henderson, box 302, Garland, Tex., writes: "I am a young man, university graduate and an artist by profession. I have, for about three years, been having pains all through my chest, with a deep-seated cough most of the time. Was examined and doctors all said I had no T. B., but one said I must have my tonsils removed. I did, but to no avail. One day a shoe salesman told me to try Mentho-Laxene. Well, I did, and besides having a pleasing taste it felt so soothing and stopped my terrible cough instantly. That awful coughing, hawking, spitting and pains are all gone, etc."

Ravid Davis, 613 Case St., E. Rochester, Pa., writes: "I must say you certainly do recommend the right thing. I had been badly constipated for five years and had to continually take strong cathartives to prevent serious results. But since taking Sulpherb tablets which you advised some one else to take, whose case was similar to mine, I am now free of constipation and feel in fine condition after taking only one package, etc."

Mrs. J. E. Price, Thomson, R. R. No. 1, Fairbanks, Ind., writes: "I am 46 years old and have been troubled with indigestion for over 2 years and had doctored with several doctors. They said that my stomach was good and I would have to suffer it out. I would have spells of belching, heavy feeling in stomach, bloated and at times could scarcely get my breath. One day I read your answers and saw some one else had suffered as I did and had gotten relief from taking Triopeptine tablets. I used them and have not been troubled since and I gladly tell others of their goodness, etc."

Herman A. Yokie, 2411 8th Ave., Beaver Falls, Pa., writes: "I started taking Sulpherb tablets about two weeks ago and they are sure helping me. I was bothered with pimples, boils and blackheads for some time, but they are leaving me now since I started taking Sulpherb tablets. You may use my letter, etc."

John A. Garrity, 64 South St., West Lynn, Mass., writes: "For 3 years I have been using Vilane powder for catarrah and thought it time to tell you what it did for me. A man who visited in my home told me about it. Have told my shopmates about it and quite a few of them are using it and they all speak well of it. I would not be without it for it is doing me good, etc."

Ernest Dolly, 333 11th st., Toledo, Ohio, writes: "Had been troubled with itching scalp, falling hair and dandruff for years, but have used one jar of Minyol and must say that the troubles have left me. Am very much pleased and grateful and recommend Minyol at all times."

LACLEDE GAS IN CONTROL OF NEW OWNERS

Syndicate Represented by G. H. Walker & Co. Exercises Option on Majority of Common Stock.

PURCHASE MADE AT 98⅛ PER SHARE

Buyers Headed by Former General Manager of Light and Coke Company of Chicago.

Control of the Laclede Gas Light Co. yesterday passed to a syndicate represented by G. H. Walker & Co., brokers, which exercised its option on slightly more than $5,500,000 of the corporation's $10,700,000 outstanding common stock. The purchase was made at 98⅛ per share, 2⅛ points higher than the market.

Secrecy was maintained as to the identity of the purchasers, but the syndicate is headed by a former general manager of the Peoples' Gas Light & Coke Co. of Chicago. The new capital interested was furnished by Chicago, New York and Canadian sources.

No announcement was made as to the date when the present directorate will be supplanted. It is intimated that, since the purchaser has long been identified with the practical operation of a gas utility, a change of officers is imminent.

Purchase for Investment.

It was said that the new purchasers were interested in the purchase of the company purely as an investment and that the properties will not be used by an outside gas or electrical company for the purpose of getting a foothold in this territory. Suppositions were that the purchasers were representatives of a corporation intent upon contesting the domination of the Union Electric Light & Power Co. in the electrical field here.

W. B. Dean of G. H. Walker & Co. declined to comment on the matter. C. L. Holmann, president of the Laclede company, was also silent as to the new purchaser.

Most of the stockholders were not informed of the identity of the purchaser. However, several substantial stockholders insisted that they be definitely informed because they were prepared to decline the offer in the event it emanated from North American Co. sources. The North American Co. controls the Union Electric Light & Power Co. To these stockholders, G. H. Walker & Co. revealed the fact that a former manager of the Peoples' Gas Light & Coke Co. was the moving spirit behind the purchase.

Dominates the Gas Field.

The Laclede company supplies a relatively small number of consumers with electricity, but dominates the gas field.

The North American Co. held control of the Laclede company until 1907 when the bulk of its common stock was bought, mainly for wealthy St. Louisans, in a campaign similar to that which resulted in the transfer of control yesterday. G. Herbert Walker, then head of G. H. Walker & Co., and now head of W. A. Harriman & Co., New York, handled that transaction as he did this one.

The $10,700,000 of common stock is held by about 2000 persons in all parts of the country, although a large part of it is held by St. Louisans.

The price paid for the stock means a handsome profit for some holders. During the war years it dropped from par and slightly above, where it had sold 12 and 15 years ago, to below 60 for a short period during the utility hard times. With the passing of high fuel costs and the improvement of business, the resumption of dividends, which had been discontinued for several years, was brought about.

Book Value of Company.

The book value of the Laclede Company, its own appraisal of its value, is $43,326,348. However, the Public Service Commission decided upon a valuaton of $21,326,726. This may be explained by the assertion of engineers for the city, who in hearings before the commission on the company's valuation, have maintained that the Laclede common stock was issued as a bonus to holders of the preferred stock and did not in fact represent any investment in the physical properties of the company.

The commission probably paid some attention to this contention a few years ago when it fixed a valuation of $20,000,000 on the properties as a temporary rate base. This approximately represented the $28,500,000 of the company's bonds and preferred stock with little allowance for the $10,700,000 common. The outstanding preferred stock totals $2,500,000.

THE INVISIBLE LIGHT RAY AS A TRAP FOR WRONG DOER — AND IT WORKED!

A University professor of chemistry believed that he had made a discovery of scientific and commercial value —But, on repeating the original test, he could not get the same results again, until he stayed beside apparatus day and night for 48 hours—Suspicions, he devised an invisible, automatic, undiscoverable snare in the laboratory to catch anybody who might be meddling :: ::

In the night the flashlight went off. The watchman, warned in advance, was promptly on the scene. There he found a much frightened young instructor trying to escape. The plate in the camera showed this young rascal in the very act of disarranging the professor's apparatus.

By E. E. FREE, Ph. D.
Fellow of American Association for the Advancement of Science.

IN A WELL-KNOWN university a few years ago there was a young professor who believed himself to have made a discovery of some scientific importance and probably of commercial value as well. He described this discovery, in a preliminary fashion, to his colleagues on the faculty of science and, with their criticism and advice, he set about a carefully planned series of experiments that would definitely determine, they believed, the truth or untruth of the new discovery. These same experiments would provide, it was expected, the detailed and unassailable evidence necessary to convince the scientific world as a whole.

Unfortunately, these experiments refused to duplicate the results that the young professor had obtained at first. Over and over again he repeated the operations of his original test. He was careful to use the same apparatus. He employed the same materials in the same quantities. He made every effort to carry out the operations in the same way, even down to the minutest details, such as the number of times a certain mixture was stirred or the speed with which two ingredients were poured together.

But in spite of every care—of care that seemed almost superhuman in its effort to duplicate all features of the original successful experiments—the same results would never come. The young professor grew haggard. His older colleagues met him with smiles that were charitable enough, but just a shade too charitable to be consoling.

He imagined what they said when he was not around. "Too bad about young Blank. A nice youngster, of course, but too much inclined to jump at conclusions. You know, he can't duplicate those astonishing experiments that he claimed in that investigation of his on photocatalysis." Whenever the young man let himself think thus he writhed internally—and he couldn't help thinking.

As a matter of fact, there probably was not one professor on the whole faculty who ever would have said or thought any such things. There is no kindlier race alive than the elderly, seasoned university professor. Furthermore, all of them were scientists themselves, with long records of research. They knew how easy it is for the best of scientific men to have trouble in duplicating their results. If the young professor had simply contented himself with defeat, dropped his experiments and admitted that he could not repeat his former results, it is a hundred chances to one that no one else in the faculty would have given the matter another thought.

But the young professor did not believe that. He took his work and himself very seriously. His career was to make. There was a girl, too, and dreams of something better than the fraternity house where, though long since graduated, he still occupied one of the cheaper rooms. It was his firm conviction, rightly or wrongly, that he had to solve that mystery of the failure of the experiment or else give up his dreams of scientific reputation, advancement in the university and a career.

This conviction sharpened his wits. It happened that one part of the experiment which he could not repeat involved the digestion of some ingredients, in a certain solution and at a certain temperature, for a period of about two days. This operation required no attention, and it was the professor's custom to allow the digestion to proceed by itself, night and day, until the necessary time had elapsed.

But because of his trouble with the repetition of the experiment, the professor decided to sit up with this long-time operation and to watch it continuously, night and day, for the necessary 48 hours. He did it. By dint of much black coffee he kept awake. And he had his reward.

This time the experiment worked. The result was the same as it had been in the beginning, before the professor had described his results to anyone. It was quite different from the continual failures that he had encountered since.

In this circumstance there was food for thought. When he was with it every minute the experiment apparently went through all right. When he left it alone, even at night, something happened to spoil it. Could it be that some ill-disposed person was entering the laboratory secretly, damaging the experiment in some way, and making his escape unseen?

It seemed scarcely possible. The building had a watchman, capable, trustworthy and careful. Cautious inquiry from him elicited the information that no one had been in or about the building at nights, except, of course, the men on the teaching staff, who were both entitled and accustomed to work there at whatever hours they pleased.

WHERE THE INVISIBLE RAY BELONGS AMONG THE OTHER KNOWN VARIETY OF RAYS

ALL the rays, light included, are really varieties of ether waves, like the well-known ether waves used in radio. The different kinds differ only in wave length, the radio waves being the longest and the rays from radium being the shortest. The table below shows the kinds of rays that are known at present.

THE GAMMA RAY—These rays, the shortest rays known, are given off continually by radium. It is they that cause the curative action of radium on disease. They are so short that it takes more than three billions of them to make an inch.

THE X-RAY—These rays, next shortest to the gamma rays, have become well known because of their ability to penetrate the human body, so that they can be used by physicians to investigate the character of internal fractures or ailments.

THE ULTRA-VIOLET RAY—These rays are invisible to the human eye, as are the X-rays and the gamma rays. Otherwise they are a good deal like ordinary light except that the waves are shorter, the longest of them being about one-seventy-thousandth of an inch long.

ORDINARY LIGHT RAYS—The rays of visible light have lengths between about one-seventy-thousandth of an inch (which is for violet light) and about one-thirty-thousandth of an inch, for red light. The other colors of light are in between these two extremes of wave length.

THE INVISIBLE RAY—This is the invisible ray used in the scientific burglar alarm. It is just like ordinary light except that its waves are longer, being about one-ten-thousandth of an inch long. We cannot see these waves at all.

The young professor had been up two nights with his experiment. He said nothing about his newly successful result. He merely went home and went to bed.

In the morning he had made his decision. It was probable, he concluded, that someone in the teaching staff, presumably actuated by motives of jealousy, was entering his laboratory secretly and was doing something to cause the failure of the experiment. No other explanation seemed possible.

But it would not do to rush out and say this. Suspicion was one thing; proof was another. One could not break out with unsupported accusations of some person or persons unknown. The professor resolved to trap his enemy in the act.

Ordinarily this would have been easy. Any simple man trap on the door of the laboratory would have been enough. But so direct a method was impossible in this instance for the reason that several persons had right of access to the laboratory. The watchman, for example, went through it once hourly as he made his rounds. What was necessary, in the way of detective apparatus, was some device that would record the presence in the laboratory of any unauthorized persons or of any persons at all at unusual hours.

It was necessary, also, that there be no complicated wires or bells or burglar alarms to attract attention. The young professor was unwilling, as yet, to go to the university authorities with his suspicions and he could not ask them to authorize any special installations or any alterations of the usual routine for the watchman and other members of the staff.

There was the problem. He needed an invisible, automatic, undiscoverable trap that would record the presence of anyone in the room. The young professor solved this problem by means of the invisible ray.

Few people outside of scientific circles know that there are two kinds of light that are invisible. One kind is composed of waves shorter than the waves of light; it is called the ultra-violet ray. The other is composed of waves longer than those of visible light; it is called the infra-red ray. The professor decided to use the second one of these.

He built a small apparatus to generate this invisible infra-red ray. He directed the ray across the room, close to the floor. On the other side, where the ray would hit it, he put a simple electric device that recorded from moment to moment the intensity of the ray that fell on it. All this, even the ray itself, was quite invisible. At night the room seemed entirely dark.

Yet, nevertheless, the invisible ray was there, passing continually from one side of the room to the other, just as though it had been a thin pencil of visible light, like the light from a flashlight. If any-

The World's Richest Heiress Also The World's Shrewdest Bride

Cornelia Vanderbilt, who weds high-born Englishman this week, is only 23 years old—But the wise young woman has guarded herself against the tragedies which developed in many other international marriages—By prior agreement, she will remain an American citizen, and she and the Hon. John Francis Amherst Cecil will reside in the United States—She realizes that in America the law is more favorable to women than it is in any other country :: :: ::

CORNELIA VANDERBILT.

THE wedding of the world's richest heiress, which will occur next Tuesday at Biltmore House, in North Carolina, is a very remarkable affair in more ways than one. The least interesting part of the story deals with the colossal fortune of the 23-year-old bride, and the fact that the bridegroom comes from one of the most aristocratic families in England.

There have been international matches before, in which American millions were joined to British or other foreign titles. And the unhappy outcome of such matches, in the vast majority of cases, is familiar to everyone who reads the newspapers.

But Cornelia Vanderbilt, although she is fabulously rich and although she will wed the Hon. John Francis Amherst Cecil of the historic English family, is different from other American heiresses who have married high-born foreigners.

And her marriage will be a decidedly new departure in such alliances between American girls and eligible young men from abroad. Perhaps the kind of union on which Miss Vanderbilt insisted never will become widely popular. But at least her wishes in the matter prove beyond any question whatever that Miss Vanderbilt is a sensible, level-headed girl.

"Why didn't I think of that, too?" may well be the unspoken question of American women who made brilliant matches in the past, but are sadder and wiser now.

The Hon. John Francis Cecil is first secretary to the British embassy at Washington, a post which carries with it considerable social distinction. But, more than that, he is a son of Lord William Cecil, Getleman Usher to the King, and in line for one of the oldest titles in England—namely, Marquis of Exeter. Here is a brilliant and assured position in English society for the wife of Cecil, with his connections in the present, and what the future may bring him.

And Cornelia Vanderbilt will have none of it.

Plainly, this young woman knows the cold, hard facts about international marriages and the tragedy in which the rose-tinted dream of many and many a rich American girl has ended.

She has seen these women sacrifice entirely too much in the name of love and for social prestige—a very slight prestige in some cases. She evidently knows what it really means when an American girl renounces her native land, its generous, equitable laws about marriage and the extraordinary position of women in the United States, to become the wife of a foreign nobleman.

Cornelia Vanderbilt is young, but she has a wise head. She decided that she would not make any such sacrifice, even for Love, with a capital L. She will remain in the country where she, both as wife and as individual, can enjoy the most advantages. Under any other arrangement, she sees, her loss would be greater than her gain.

So, after her marriage, the present Miss Vanderbilt will become plain Mrs. John Cecil. She will remain an American citizen. She will continue to reside in this country. It is the husband who must change his residence and his citizenship. By terms dictated prior to the ceremony, John Cecil must stay with her, in the United Stafes, or do without her.

And as for that ancient English title, it really doesn't matter at all. Nor the empty social honors which might have been hers, in old England. Thus has the usual order been reversed, and a new type of international marriage been evolved, by the richest (and, it appears, the brainiest) of American girls who found the man of their choice in a foreigner.

There will be a simple wedding, at her magnificent country estate, Biltmore House. An American girl will become an American wife. Thus does she retain freedom for her individual rights and opinions, and a very serviceable loophole for escape, should the marriage prove to have been a mistake.

Possibly, it is suggested, Cornelia Vanderbilt does not deserve all the credit. Did her decision spring partly, at least, from the changed attitude of the modern generation of women?

Women used to have a saying that love was blind. Perhaps they used it to excuse their man when they had to introduce him to the general world. Perhaps it was the only way they could explain the matrimonial monotonies in which they found themselves.

Whatever the truth, women of a former time always tried to make love look like a state of coma. They portrayed themselves as rendered unconscious, dumb and blind by the thrilling magnificence of one male creature. Their general attitude was that if they had been forced to earn their living during this period, the only thing they could have done would have been to hold out a tin cup and six pencils. They were helpless victims, they insisted, before the dazzling glitter of love.

But what destroyed the perception of the American heiresses during this sentimental period was not love. It was ambition, and an absurd sense of values. Being a democratic nation, we worship titles. Go to Europe today and you cannot interest a native in any tale about the royalty. He knows them for the kindly figureheads they are. It is the Americans who still thrill to their names and stories.

It was much worse a generation ago. Persons bearing titles were as remote to us then as the islands of the blessed. Dukes and Lords and Russian Czars were all going concerns. The crowned heads of the continent were not being shuttled back and forth across neutral Switzerland, with the Swiss and the diplomats wondering what on earth to do with the ineffectual, useless creatures.

In the 1890's, to be able to speak to a well-known King—well, wasn't that worth a million dollars, which several American families could produce?

The American heiresses thought so, and the European nobility also thought so, only they weren't looking at it from the same point of view. The impoverished European nobles soon learned that a title, any title, was worth, with a little flirting, a million dollars in America. They discovered that American girls were beautifully naive and ferociously ambitious. They believed vows of eternal love and faithfulness. The titled European in general, and the Englishman in particular, set out to sell his ancient name by way of love making.

The better his title, the better his monetary return, but even a decidedly marred, poverty-stricken title was worth many American millions. He had to take a wife in the bargain, but this bothered him not at all. He was perfectly aware that a wife in England can be more of an asset than a liability. A rich American wife could open to him doors which

In a Cave With a Tiger

Stalking the great cats is very different in China from the sport as followed in India — Lacking a jungle, the animal must be tracked to his lair in the rocky caverns—Chinamen with torches and spears, who make this work a business, then drive him out to the waiting gun, or block him in, so that the hunter can enter cave and get a shot — Sometimes four tigers break cover at once—An American diplomat's thrilling crawl, underground, and the huge beast which he encountered. :: :: :: :: ::

The following article begins a series written by Joseph C. Grew, who recently became Under Secretary of State, after 20 years in the consular and diplomatic service of the United States. The series will describe some of Mr. Grew's adventures while hunting big game in the Far East. He attended the pre-armistice negotiations at Versailles, as secretary to Col. Edward M. House, October-November, 1918, and was appointed secretary-general of the American Commission to Negotiate Peace, with the rank of Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary, Paris, Nov. 30, 1918. Afterwards he was Minister to Denmark and then to Switzerland. By JOSEPH C. GREW,
Under Secretary of State.

ALONG the coast of China, midway between Hongkong and Shanghai, there lies a tract of country quite devoid of any growth, where the barren hills which roll back from the sea to the rice-cultivated country inland are strewn with gigantic boulders of some prehistoric glacial moraine; and it is in the numberless caves and subterranean passages formed by these great confused masses of rock that the sole wild occupant of the country, the Chinese tiger, finds his lair.

Accordingly, the sport of tiger shooting is here quite a different proposition from that in India and other tropical countries, where the methods of shooting are adapted to the jungle; that is, from the backs of elephants, on foot on a jungle path, by driving, beating or sitting up over a kill. Here in China the animal must be tracked to his cave; and if found in such a position that he cannot be driven out to the gun, he must be blocked in so that the sportsman can enter with comparative safety.

Thus, whereas in India the excitement is generally over in a few seconds, in the cave shooting a sportsman is frequently kept at the highest tension for several hours, having located the game, and while still uncertain as to whether it will charge out before being successfully blocked.

I had had my fill of the jungle. Rains, flies and fever had convinced me that tiger shooting in the tropics had its distinct disadvantages, and had made me wish for a healthful country and a respectable atmosphere, where one could enjoy living and shooting at the same time—a paradox in the jungle. I was unwilling to return without a tiger; glowing tales were told of this cave district.

It was with the keenest anticipation that I finally found myself rolling down the coast of China toward Amoy on the little Haitan. The old Scotch engineer told me stories over our pipes and coffee in the evening, of lighthouse keepers along the shore watching the tigers play at night on the beaches below, and of natives carried away from the rice fields within shouting distance of their very villages, which made me feel that at last I was in for some sport.

So, though alone, except for my old Cingalese servant, Thomas, who had now shared with me many adventures, I was not at all loth the next morning to transfer self, goods and chattels to the care of a yellow pirate in a dilapidated junk and set sail for the shore.

It was a few days later that I found myself in a snug little village, Chi Phaw by name, tucked away at the foot of the hills, with the flooded padi fields skirting it on one side, and to the west a pagoda-crowned mountain, towering like a sentinel above—far too peaceful a scene to suggest the sport on which I had come.

As the guest of the village, in that I was to do my little best in ridding them of a nuisance, I was led up the central path through a staring and wondering crowd of peasants—who were unaccustomed to seeing white men and had no modesty about showing it, among innumerable black hogs enjoying continuous and undisturbed slumber along the highway, and past the rude hovels, within which hens, babies, dogs and kittens sprawled promiscuously.

We came, at the end of the village, to a remarkable-looking building—a sort of large shed with arched roof and paved floor, with one side opening to a courtyard flanked by a 10-foot wall, which, though ordinarily a temple sacred to the common ancestor of the village, was now, I learned, to be my habitation for as long as I cared to remain.

The seven Chinese hunter men, who from now on were to be my escort, now presented themselves. They stood grinning in a row, their almond-shaped eyes sloping upwards, their yellow skins burnt to bronze from work in the rice fields, and wrinkled like old parchment. With one exception they were under five feet—hardly the imposing individuals I had pictured, who were to walk into the tiger's den with only their torches to frighten him and their spears to stop a charge.

Their weapons, however, looked sufficiently businesslike, for each carried a sort of trident with three iron prongs and a heavy wooden shaft. They carried with them also, in a small basket, an exact representation in miniature of themselves—a little Chinaman who held in his hand the typical trident, and in the sand which filled the basket about him were burning joss sticks.

This, I discovered, was their idol, whom they worshiped fervently and regularly, and never in our subsequent hunting were they without him; for, as they told me, it was he who gave them their courage to hunt and their strength to fight the tiger.

My interpreter, a young Chinaman named Lim Ek Huit, who had learned English at an American mission school in Foochow, then arranged between us the rate of wages, and this matter having been satisfactorily decided, we repaired to our respective suppers—I, to the great delight of the admiring throng in the courtyard, to knife, fork and plate, they to their chow bowls and chopsticks.

At dawn the courtyard was filled with the same admiring crowd of the night before—men, women and children—who watched the processes of bathing, dressing and eating breakfast much as we might observe the Wild Man of Borneo taking dinner at the dime museum. This was embarrassing, and became, before many days, extremely irritating, though it was a rather difficult matter effectually to drive them away.

The hunter men had procured long, slender bamboo poles and were winding strips of cloth about their tips, these latter being dipped in oil and serving as torches to light up the interior of the caves which we explored. Then, after chow, we started out in single file, I following the head hunter man, quite ignorant as to where or into what he would lead me.

Knowing the lay of the land, they had no hesitation in choosing at once the most likely caves to explore; a tramp of some four miles brought us upon the rocky hills, and here at last, with the openings of caves and passages all about us, I felt the first pleasant realization that game might be near.

The hunter men soon stopped above a cave which led directly down into the earth, while one of them led me a few yards down the hillside to station me at the mouth of another opening below, Lim translating that they were to move through the passage and drive the tiger, if he were there, down to the exit which I guarded. They quickly oiled their torches, shed their great umbrella hats and dropped one by one out of sight into the hole.

Lim had had scruples about accompanying me on the hunt, but protests that he was indispensable and assurances of perfect safety had overruled them: he was necessary, not only to interpret directions, but to hold my extra gun and pass it to me, should the two barrels of the .450 cordite-powder express prove ineffectual.

Probably few forms of sport afford greater interest than watching the opening of a cave, knowing that at any moment one or more tigers may charge out, and aware that if they do, one must shoot both instantly and accurately. Under such circumstances an ordinary hole in a hillside becomes a distinctly fascinating object, as one who has had the experience must realize.

As Perry and Wheeler a year before, in the same spot had seen four tigers break cover simultaneously, and as two days later Perry had found and shot a fifth in another cave near by, I was sanguine of success. But there were to be no results from this day's work, nor, indeed, for many days to come.

I now decided, and the men agreed with me, that this wholesale exploration of caves was a poor thing, since, if a tiger should happen to come to one of them later, the smell of the torches would prevent his entering, and he would doubtless at once move to some other part of the country. The animals are continually roaming about and may appear in a certain district at any time, so there is nothing to do but wait.

Accordingly, in the evening, I purchased from a shepherd six small goats and placed them around the country within a radius of a mile or so, attaching each before the opening of some promising cave, and as we returned to camp we could hear their bleating coming from all directions. Should a tiger arrive within reach of that sound, I knew that we should have something to work on.

The next week was a monotonous one. Every evening we attached the goats, and every morning at sunrise we brought them back untouched to the village; these were the only events of the long, hot days.

The hunter men always had an admiring circle about them as they squatted over their chow. Tiger hunting is nothing new to them, as they make it their business, the profession being handed down in the same family from father to son. They attack the tiger in his cave, killing him with their spears and selling the meat, bones, claws and skin at a high price, as the natives believe the possession of the claws or the eating of the meat gives them strength and bravery.

The men are undoubtedly courageous, as, notwithstanding the fact that some of them are killed from time to time, they walk into the caves without hesitation.

Bruce and Leyburn are the names most prominently connected with the sport of tiger shooting in this district. They were business gentlemen in Amoy, who, whenever a tiger was located by the hunter men, would pick up their guns from beneath their office desks, come over post-haste to the cave wherein the game had been marked down, and generally return the same night to their homes, successful. Leyburn is credited with over 40 tigers.

"I lay full five minutes watching him. At the end of that time I moved the express slowly into position, being badly cramped."

I had moved to another near-by village called Ki-Lai, and was awakened at 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning by the loud barking of a dog, which was immediately taken up by all the other dogs in the village. This was unusual, as seldom anything disturbed the silence of the town at night; and I was vaguely wondering what could be the matter, when the men in the temple were all on their feet, some running for their spears, and others to get my gun out of its case.

In a minute we were out in the village street in the moonlight, where the dogs were bolting up and down, barking furiously and evidently much disturbed at something, though the cause was not apparent.

And just then I distinctly saw, off in the rice fields, a shadowy form sneaking away—a dog, perhaps, or a pig, though it looked like something larger; and though my first impulse was to follow, I saw at once that it would be useless. The barking of the curs soon subsided and we returned to the temple.

In the morning great excitement prevailed in the courtyard; the whole village had apparently gathered there and were talking and gesticulating violently. Lim translated that a dog had been taken away in the night, and that a tiger was undoubtedly about. The hunter men had meanwhile gone out to inspect the goats, and returned with the news that one had vanished, the rope being parted clean and the animal having completely disappeared, without a sign of blood.

I was on the spot immediately, and found the report true, with no vestige of any track to work on. There was nothing to do. To smoke up the caves by exploring them was clearly inadvisable, so we returned to wait in patience till nightfall.

The anticipation of sport near at hand made that day seem endless. But, finally, the sun sank, and by 7 o'clock I had the five remaining goats at their posts, and, as nothing more could be done, prepared to sit up over the fifth, which was the loudest bleater, in the hope that the tiger would pick him out for his night's kill.

We found, some five yards from the goat, a suitable rock, which shaded us from the moonlight, and waited, the animal crying lustily and being answered continually by one of the others which was within call. The first hour or two of this sitting up was not bad, but eventually one's eyes became strained from peering through the moonlight, and, with the help of a sharpened imagination, pictured a moving form in every rock and shadow.

The goat had by this time quieted down, the moon had waned, the hunter men were fidgeting; so it seemed better to give it up, and silently and in single file, we covered the three miles to the village.

But the discouragement of the evening was not to last. The men had gone out to the goats at sunrise, and I was awakened on their return by a tremendous clamor; they were all shouting at once, running about the temple for their spears, and preparing the torches in a way which looked like business. Lim himself was so excited that he could hardly translate; but I finally quieted him down enough to learn the news: all five remaining goats, including the one by which I had sat up, had been killed; the country around was covered with blood tracks and only one head and one body had been found.

At 8 we were on the spot where I had kept watch the night before. The string which tied the goat had been cut off short, and at a distance of 10 yards was the head of the animal, torn roughly from the body. The men then brought up for my inspection the body of still another goat, untouched except for two distinct tooth marks in the neck, made as cleanly as though by a vampire.

This was excellent news, for the tiger had clearly killed more than he could eat, and must have retired for the day to some cave near by to sleep off his gorge. But actually to track him to his lair was no easy matter, for the trails of blood which led in several directions were quickly lost in the low scrub, and in a few minutes we had to abandon the idea. To search all the large caves in the vicinity and to trust to fortune to find him seemed the only thing to do.

Then followed a scene, which, under the circumstances, was thoroughly amusing, though at that time I was too impatient at the delay to appreciate it. The hunter men set the idol, which, as I have said, they invariably carried with them while hunting, on a rock, and gathering about it they lighted joss sticks and proceeded to worship in the usual manner, clasping their hands, waving the joss sticks three times up and down, then placing them in the sand before the image.

This done, they asked the idol if the tiger was in a certain cave which opened within a hundred yards of us, at the same moment throwing up two pieces of wood, each with one smooth and one rough side. Should they come down even, the answer would be affirmative; if odd, negative. In spite of the fact that the blood trails all seemed to lead in other directions, the answer, mirabile dictu, was "yes."

The men immediately picked up their spears and ran downhill to the cave, which, like most of them, was formed of immense boulders, opening by a crevice running straight downward. Then, stationing me at its mouth, with warning to be ready, they entered.

Five minutes passed. A hunter reappeared and said something which caused the crowd of villagers who had approached to scramble back up the hillside. Lim's eyes bulged as he whispered excitedly: "Get ready, master; tiger inside."

The sport was now on in earnest. Bulletins were announced at regular intervals from below. At first they could see but one paw of the animal, then he moved and showed himself in full—"very large tiger," Lim translated. They were trying to drive him out; he might charge from any one of three openings, and I was to watch them all carefully, for it would be quick shooting. A half-hour passed.

Then came up the announcement that he had got into a small passage and could not be driven out; they would block him in, after which I must enter. The villagers immediately set to work gathering bushes, which they bound together and threw down to the opening, while the hunters came to the cave's mouth and dragged them in. They worked quickly and quietly, but with a subdued excitement which kept my interest at highest pitch.

My finger was on the trigger for four hours, nor did I dare take my eyes from the openings during this entire time, for the men had cautioned me that, until finally blocked, the tiger might charge out at any moment.

It was past midday when the seven men emerged and beckoned me to enter. I slipped down into the crevice, landing in a sort of small chamber, which was partially lighted by the torches, though my eyes, fresh from the sunlight, could not see where it led. They directed me to one side, and pointed to a narrow shelf or ledge, from which a hole seemed to lead straight into the face of the rock; Lim, who was behind me, translating that I was to crawl into it until I came to the tiger.

This did not sound reassuring, but knowing that the men were trustworthy and would not send me into a risky position, I scrambled quickly in, dragging the express behind, as I was too cramped by the smallness of the hole to carry it with me.

One of the men held his spear ahead in the passage, though he himself stood behind. I crawled slowly in for some 10 feet; it was quite dark and I was ignorant as to where the animal was, or how the hole ended.

Then there was a loud "augh-r-r" within a few feet of my face, and I knew by the sound that the tiger was in another cavern into which my passage opened. It appeared that the latter broke off and turned abruptly downwards.

My eyes were now becoming used to the darkness, and by the light of the torches which had been thrust into the tiger's cavern through the chinks in the rock I could see him in full. He lay on a ledge of rock, facing me, his green eyes shining and blinking sleepily in the light, his great striped back moving up and down as he panted from fright and anger.

His face was not four feet from mine when I had come to the end of the passage; but there was little danger, since he was too much cowed by the light to charge, and had he done so, my opening was too small for him to enter. Had he tried to get at me by tearing away the stones at the mouth of my passage, he could have been warded off with the barrel of the express.

I lay full five minutes watching him. At the end of that time I moved the express slowly into position, being badly cramped; the tiger snarled angrily as he saw the barrel approaching, and drew back restlessly, still roaring. This was not pleasant to hear.

I then fired without being able to see the sights,

Weird Adventure Among Underground Dwellers in Arabia

Rumors of a troglodyte village, and of a famous "invisible prophet" there, sent Rosita Forbes upon another exploring journey—Her kindly reception in bizarre surroundings by a people whose women never see the sunlight, and glimpses of the warren where 10,000 persons live in darkness—Famous Englishwoman's talk with the mysterious Sayed, who makes a startling prophecy

By ROSITA FORBES.

THE earth looked as if it had been a battleground of the ancient gods. It was full of great pits and strewn with boulders which must surely have been the weapons of a primeval struggle. The cliff dropped a sheer thousand feet to a plain sprinkled with lilies and desert broom, but up here on the edge of the world, where the desolation was lit by a stormy sunset, it was bleak and so cold that I shivered under my sheepskin coat.

"Where is the village?" I asked Abdullah, the tall tribesman who rode with me, as I strained my eyes across the waste in front of us.

"It is under your feet, lady!" he replied, dismounting and looping the tasseled reins over his arm.

I stared more closely at the heaped sand beside pits, which might have been the hundred shafts of a once busy colliery. There was no one in sight, yet all around us there was movement and sound. My horse nuzzled the ground and snorted. At the same moment a boy appeared beside us, as if he had risen out of the earth.

"Every one of those pits is the courtyard of a house," explained Abdullah, "and below you 10,000 people are living their lives in darkness."

A faint, savory smell drifted past our nostrils. "By Allah, they are probably now cooking our dinner!" he added with a laugh.

The sunset was like feathers of orange across the sky. Against this appeared two blots, which resolved themselves into women. It was uncanny, the way these people appeared from nowhere.

"Marhaba—welcome! Your coming is good." The greeting was called to us in sibilant tones, which reminded me of birds in spring; but the women did not move. We went toward them, and at the sound of our footsteps, they stretched out groping hands and took a few stumbling paces with fingers fluttering, as if to feel their way.

"Are they blind?" I whispered to my companion, and then, as I came quite close, the words froze on my lips. I stared at two faces which looked as if they had long been dead. The light flared on skin that was smooth and leaden, tightly drawn over beautiful small bones.

The wind whined round the cavern looming at our feet, and blew back draperies of indigo and purple which matched the bruised circles under eyes so enormous that they seemed like black mirrors. Fascinated, I stared at those circles, which dyed cheek bones and crept up beyond the narrow brows.

"Wallah, you are welcome!" repeated a soft, high voice. "Come below, that we may see you—the light hurts us." Groping fingers caught me, and I was surprised to find them warm. "I am Aziza—I will guide you."

It was a young voice, I decided, and saw that the women were smiling. Their leaden lips were parted over teeth that, in their whiteness, were the first human, normal thing about a beauty exquisite and yet so strange as to be repulsive.

"This way," crooned Aziza, and stepped into a shaft which opened at our feet.

After the first few paces I was stumbling in pitch darkness, but a hand held me firmly, leading me down and down, till I felt I should reach the heart of the earth. The path was smooth and the walls and roof polished to the touch.

"It has to be wide enough for our camels," explained the girl, and then the earth fell away beside me and I heard beasts grunting. I suppose I shrank nearer my guide, for she reassured me. "We are passing the stables—can't you see the animals? The tall one belongs to my father—he feeds it on dates and olives."

The hand which led me was withdrawn. In panic I caught at invisible draperies, but they slipped through my fingers. I heard the door shut behind me. For a second I knew sheer terror. I felt that I was buried alive, and, instinctively, I put out my hands as if to beat away something that was threatening.

I thought I could distinguish a thicker blackness where all was dark, and two points of light which must be the camel's eyes.

Then a door barred our passage and Aziza opened it with the sureness of clear sight. I fell down a step after her.

The tunnel narrowed and twisted sharply till suddenly we debouched into the grayness of a square pit, where hens scuttled away from us and a gazelle stood with one hoof upraised.

Blinking, I looked up. Some hundred feet above us the sunset was still golden and the wind drove the sand in swirls along the edge of the smooth walls which inclosed us. It was very still below, though sound came to us, muffled and far away. I noticed that the pit was square and each of its faces was pierced by rows of doors, but no windows.

From some of them issued smoke and a glimmer of fire.

Both women stared at me with their immensely magnified pupils, and here in the dimness they were wholly beautiful—supple, intangible daughters of shadow, with their black, silken hair loaded with gold ornaments, and the crushed violet which stained nostril and lips to a finer sensitiveness than our common reds could show.

ROSITA FORBES.

An older woman came noiselessly from the door. "Marhaba," she said, "our desire went to meet you. He has been expecting you."

With a little shock I remembered the reason of my journey. Far away in the desert I had heard of the troglodyte village whose women never saw the light, and whose men earned a hard living by cultivating olives and grain on the plateau, and by hunting gazelle, fox and wolf, to barter their skins with the Bedouin below.

Rumor spoke of a famous Sayed, whose lineage was older than that of the ruling Emir, who lived among the troglodytes, but whose face no man had seen. I had never heard his title—if any knew it they kept the secret—but I was told of his study of that terrible science which can master the unbelieving spirits, "the Ulm el Jann," before whose very name the Bedouin tremble.

I heard that this hermit of the South could foretell the future as surely as he could read the minds of peasant and Prince, however far away they might be, and, of course, I determined that I would not leave the country until I had talked with him. With the richest presents that could be bought on the coast—bales of silk, a rifle or two and some ornaments of beaten gold, I set out, accompanied by Abdullah, and a monosyllabic Bedouin who drove my pack horses.

In the sunlit plains, where nomad herdsmen followed their camels and goats, the adventure had promised amusement, perhaps even a new thrill. Here, on the threshold of darkness, among women whose speech even was unhuman, I shivered a little and wondered if the "invisible prophet" knew in what spirit I had approached him.

"Ta faddel! Be seated," said the shadow of a voice, and I found myself crouching on a carpet of fox skins, staring across a charcoal fire at the mother of all time.

If the troglodyte girls looked like the dead, this crone was death itself, for her bones seemed to tear the livid skin which stuck to them. Her nails and the palms of her hand were blue, and her eyes were like dull coals, in hollows so deep that I felt there was nothing between those eyes and the naked brain they mirrored.

"Eat first, lady, and then you shall accomplish the object of your journey."

All around me were vague forms, and I heard the tinkling of silver jewelry, and smelled amber and fresh herbs, but, beyond the circle of firelight I could distinguish nothing. I ate gazelle meat with my fingers and drank bitter coffee, while the women talked in ghostly voices.

"What are your houses like?" I asked, rolling rice and olive oil into a ball in my palm.

"They are very pleasant, for we have as many rooms as we like. See, the walls are of clay and we decorate them with delicate moldings. Sometimes we paint them with the yolk of eggs, and we hang them with the furs our men bring us."

I learned that there were inner rooms beyond the row leading into the court, and it was in these that the women slept. The upper stories could only be reached by ladders from the central yard, but, for several miles, the earth was tunneled like a rabbit warren, so that sometimes, when a family decided to enlarge its house, it dug through into the dwelling of a neighbor, whose front door might be a hun-

The Daredevil Birdman

By Austin Parker

ZOE DE LORME, who was billed at the Sharon County Fair as "Queen of Leopard Tamers," was not a person who delivered herself of abstract philosophy in an offhand manner. She first made sure of her audience and her victim.

Zoe sat at the head of the table in Murphy's Eats Emporium, where the performers were finishing dinner.

"I'll tell you what I think!" announced Zoe, and allowed her cool gray eyes to travel menacingly about the table. It was a definite command, and silence fell.

Red Lake and Dauntless Harry Myrick were billed as "Plane Changing, Wing Walking, Parachute Jumping Death Defiers." It was over Lake and Myrick, the latter especially, that a bitter discussion had been raging.

"I think," continued Zoe, "that there are some things which ain't to be forgave!" Her red lips curled angrily and her voice was crisp. "and one of them things"—her eyes settled upon Dauntless Harry Myrick—"is being slow in the head!"

Myrick shifted slightly in his chair and scooped up the last of his pie a la mode.

"Is that so?" he muttered.

Zoe snorted indignantly. "There's a wise crack for you! 'Is that so?'" she mimicked. "Dauntless Harry Wisecracker!"

Bill Harrah, whose chief possession in this world was a string of half-trained, nasty-disposition, leopards, said: "Aw, dry up, Zoe! Dry up!" Zoe de Lorme, who was nominally his employe, and actually his boss, turned upon him, her gray eyes gleaming. "I'll salt you down, too!"

With a grunt, Bill Harrah arose and sauntered out into the evening.

Harry Myrick pushed back his chair. "If you was a man, Zoe," he said, slowly, "you wouldn't be quite so hard-boiled, because you'd get it kicked out of you."

Zoe's blonde coiffure shook, and, catlike, she spat out: "It'd take a better man than you! You punk!"

Dauntless Harry Myrick's eyes went to his partner, Red Lake, who was sitting at Zoe's right. For a long time it had been a case of Red and Harry, right or wrong, against the world. Regardless of their private differences of opinion, they had always presented a solid front.

All of that was changed now. This Zoe de Lorme, with her blonde hair and her red cheeks, had stepped in. And Red was falling for her.

To Red Lake he remarked, caustically: "An' there you sit, like a dab-headed yahoo, listening to me get run down. Me!"

The others leaned forward, taking it in. Harry Myrick had had little to say for himself during dinner, but he appeared to be taking a good running jump now. The lesser fry at the next table—mechanics and helpers of one kind and another—cocked their heads and listened.

"You!" continued Myrick, disgustedly. "You're so dumb it hurts you to remember your own name. Any snake charmer who wants you can have you, for all I care." He arose and stretched indifferently.

A trainer of leopards and lions does not like to be called a snake charmer. Zoe stiffened in her chair, appeared ready to spring upon him. "Are you talking about me?" she demanded.

"I don't argue with ladies," answered Myrick.

Red Lake laid a restraining hand upon Zoe's arm, and she subsided as though a kindly trainer in whom she had confidence had patted her.

Red turned to Myrick. "You better keep your trap shut," he suggested.

"You're tough, ain't you?" Harry Myrick then took his hat from the rack and put it on. "I'm gettin' afraid of you. Guess I'll go before I start tremblin' all over an' makin' a show of myself. Always was afraid of guys that fight." He cased at Red and Zoe de Lorme benignly, and whispered: "Love's young dream! Ain't it just too sweet for words!"

The laugh sounded pleasantly in his ears as he strolled from Murphy's Eats Emporium. Outside he found Bill Harrah leaning disconsolately against a telephone pole, smoking.

"Say, I know a place where we can get some real beer," said Bill. "Wanna talk to you."

"Sure. Everybody does."

This crisis in the affairs of Lake and Myrick, professional death defiers, had arisen in the afternoon—the result of an accident which cost them one of their two planes. The audience had seen the plane, with Harry Myrick piloting and Red Lake standing far out on the lower right wing, slip out of control in a sudden lurch earthward; then, just as it was on the verge of a spin, the right wing crashed into a standpipe of an artesian well. The effect was to yank the machine about, so that it crashed flatly to the earth—pancaked—instead of nosing in.

There was not a chance in the world of her recovering her senses while she dangled, spinning, by one leg.

The noise died away, and the aviators arose from the wreckage miraculously unhurt.

Red bellowed, accusingly: "You poor sap—you tried to turn with me down!"

"The rudder jammed!" answered Dauntless Harry Myrick.

That was the subject of the discussion into which Zoe de Lorme had thrown herself, which threatened the dissolution of the firm of Lake and Myrick.

Myrick walked along beside Harrah in glum silence. At last, in the dingy back room of a saloon, Harrah said: "If I was you, I wouldn't let 'em throw the hooks into me like that."

"Um-m." Myrick wiped the suds from his upper lip, and in his eyes there was a gleam reminiscent of older days.

"Say," Bill broke out, suddenly, "what does that partner of yours think he's pulling—cutting in on me and Zoe?"

"Ask him about it," replied Myrick, negligently. "Zoe belong to you?"

"Well, she's workin' my cats. We're going to get married, maybe." Bill Harrah's red face moved closer across the table. "And I'm giving you a tip," he added, angrily. "You'd better tell that partner of yours to lay off, or I'll give him something he'll remember."

Harry Myrick took a long draft of beer and sighed once more. "Gosh, you're tough, too, ain't you?"

"Don't pull any of that stuff on me," Harrah flared up. "I'm telling you, and when I'm telling you, watch out! And as for that red-headed partner of yours"——

"Oh, choke it off!" ordered Dauntless Harry Myrick, wearily. "Listen, Harrah, I only weigh a hundred and thirty-three, but there ain't an ounce o' me that ain't sick o' your line. I'm tellin' you, Mr!" He prodded his chest. "I'm tellin' you, I've fought everything that'll fight, including wildcats an' missin' links. I fought 'em with everything there is to fight with—guns, knives, teeth, feet, an' stone hatchets. An' tonight I'm aching for a fight. If you want to start anything, start it right now, or shut up!"

Bill Harrah's glaring, puffed countenance hung motionless over the table. Myrick rose and stretched.

"An' if you start anything with Red Lake," he continued, "I'll take what's left o' you an' put you to bed with your dirty leopards. Laugh that off, you punk!"

He strode from the room and up the street, feeling relieved of at least some of the day's accumulation of venom. Murphy's Eats Emporium was deserted, except for Red and Zoe de Lorme, who sat talking, with their heads close together. His greatest emotion, as he passed the restaurant and made his way toward the center of town, was a comforting presentiment that he would have a good knock-down-and-drag-out fight before the night was over.

In Murphy's, Zoe was saying: "You're a nice boy, Red. I like you! You're a reg'lar fella!" She stroked his arm ingratiatingly. "You ought to have a better partner than that dried-up little shrimp!"

"That's all right, Zoe," Red broke in. "Don't get it into your head that Harry Myrick's any dummy."

"But he ain't like you, Red. He ain't a gent'man."

Red Lake made no response.

"I'm mighty sick of Bill Harrah," continued Zoe. "He wants me to marry him. But he ain't got no nerve. He used to handle lions, an' one of 'em took a chunk out of his leg. Since then he ain't had no nerve at all. Gosh, I like a man with nerve!" Her tone was admiring, flattering, and Red warmed beneath it.

She moved closer to him. "Say," she went on, "I'd like to get into this air-o-plane game. I'm sick o' animals, and Bill Harrah. I got nerve, Red. Let me take a crack at it. I can do all that junk that Harry Myrick pulls. Huh? Red?"

"Aw, you don't want to"——

"Sure I do! An' I want to team up with a reg'lar gent'man. La' me take a whirl at it! Will you, Red?"

"Maybe." He shifted uneasily. "I wonder where Harry is?"

Dauntless Harry Myrick had been directed to a poker game.

Sitting in the game were the local undertaker, the proprietor of the cigar store where they played, a telegrapher, a man who said he was on the road for a hardware house, and a jockey who was riding at the fair. Harry Myrick sat between the salesman

When Sailors at Sea Go the D

A new humanitarian use for wireless, not as spectacular as the rescue of shipwrecked companies, but one which means much to a sick or injured man aboard ship—Only the larger passenger boats carry physicians, and on the vast majority of ocean-going vessels there is just a supply of drugs, designed for simple needs—Now, descriptions of symptoms are sent, and directions for treatment received, in radio messages—Some of the actual cases, medical and surgical, recently handled in this manner :: :: ::

BY THIS time the reading public has grown familiar with spectacular rescues at sea which have been effected by means of radio. The groups which owed their preservation to radio messages have varied in number. Sometimes it was just the crew of a small freighting vessel. Sometimes it was the combined crew and passengers of a big liner.

Radio has brought aid and comfort to ships which were disabled, or sinking as the result of a storm, or even in that most terrible of all predicaments upon the lonely waters—afire.

But in the ordinary course of events, with reasonably fair weather and just average good luck, ships do not spring leaks at sea. Nor do they drift helpless in hurricanes, nor burn. All such disasters, compared with the total number of vessels afloat, are unusual.

And so, despite the undeniable thrill that such adventures give to readers, they only come at rare intervals, and touch very few people. We scan the grim details with something of the same feeling of personal detachment with which we read about the perils encountered by gallant British climbers in their efforts to reach the top of Mount Everest. It's exciting and splendid, but not likely ever to happen to us.

However, there is another very interesting and practical side to the work of radio in saving life at sea. It is a matter about which most of us know little. Yet in this less dramatic role radio is being used practically every day to relieve the sufferings of some person on a ship here, there or anywhere upon the vast spaces of the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

This everyday, routine work is the giving of medical advice to vessels at sea. The advice is asked for, and supplied, by radio. It could not be obtained in any other way, no matter how shockingly a man might have been injured, or in what extremity he might lie from illness. The ship's doctor? Most of the large passenger vessels have such an officer, of course, and in this regard are independent of radio. Even so, doctors aboard different liners already have found it convenient to hold consultations about difficult cases, by radio.

But the greater part of this new blessing—medical advice by wireless—goes to ships other than the passenger vessels just mentioned. Few of the other ships, and this means the vast majority of seagoing vessels, carry a physician. All of them are supposed to have a supply of drugs aboard for "first aid" and for the commoner ailments. Often this stock of medicine is quite simple. It is dispensed when necessary by master or mate, as best he can. Jack Tar sick has been more or less out of luck.

The U. S. Public Health Service is helping to correct an unfortunate condition which has existed for centuries. No longer need the most comfortless small freighter cast loose from medical attention when she puts to sea, if equipped with radio. From shore stations of the Public Health Service, from passing liner or from warship, she can get a diagnosis based upon the patient's symptoms, and receive instructions for his treatment with the drugs available.

At 8 o'clock in the evening of Feb. 21, this year, the following message was received at Marine Hospital No. 70, New York:

"On Board Steamship Rosalind (through Radio Corporation of America).—Please advise treatment for lady with appendicitis. Ship due in Halifax tomorrow morning. James Martin, Master."

The following reply was sent:

"Master Steamship Rosalind (through Radio Corporation of America).—Apply ice to right side of abdomen. Rest in bed. Do not give cathartic.

"Sprague."

The publication of these two messages, and others set forth below, is authorized by Surgeon-General Hugh S. Cummings. No elaboration of the words is necessary to realize the drama behind them—a woman suddenly stricken with painful and grave illness, a ship without any doctor, a worried captain, keenly alive to his responsibility but quite without knowledge of what to do.

Then, the appeal by radio for advice. And the medical man's reply, with its warning against the step which most people would be tempted to take in such circumstances. Appendicitis is no laughing matter, even in the most modern hospital. What must it be like at sea, without a doctor?

The history of another case handled by the same Marine Hospital in the preceding month is summarized in the following series of messages. On Jan. 29, 1924, at 9 p. m. came an inquiry:

"Steamship Casey (through Independent Wireless Co.).—Request consultation as to advisability of extraction of infected teeth. Moranzes."

The following reply was sent:

"Steamship Casey (through Independent Wireless Co.).—Request information as to location and number of teeth. Condition of gums. If there are any cavities in teeth and general condition and symptoms of patient. Sprague."

That night at midnight came the reply:

"On Board Steamship Casey.—One side lower jaw badly swollen. Four to five teeth affected. No cavities in teeth. Has been in serious condition and has had fever and partial collapse. Incision was made in jaw and pus discharging. Is now somewhat better. If discharge continues, shall I extract teeth? Moranzes."

Whereupon Marine Hospital No. 70 sent a message, thanks to which, no doubt, some man today has five more teeth in his head than he would own if he had not received expert advice, dissuading him from what evidently was the first intention. The message to the Casey said:

"Do not extract teeth. Apply continuous hot compresses to cheek. Give five grains of aspirin every four hours. Give patient a dose of salts immediately. Wash out mouth every hour with alkaline antiseptic. If no alkaline antiseptic, use a teaspoonful of salt to a glass of warm water. Take temperature and pulse every four hours. Keep us informed of condition. Sprague."

Another case, in which the patient was a very sick sailor and the treatment prescribed rather complicated, begins with the following radiogram to the Marine Hospital, New York City:

July 26, 1923.—On board Steamship Benjamin Brewster. Thirty miles south of Nantucket. Have sick seaman. Patient took sick at 5 a. m. July 26. Put in ship's hospital. At 6 a. m. gave him mild dose of salts. At 7:30 a. m. gave him five grains of quinine. Fever 103. No vomiting and slight pain in chest. At noon fever 104, pulse rapid (98 per minute). Gave him 20 grains of quinine at 2 p. m. Fever 103-4. No chills. Please advise treatment.

"Ludt."

Back came the advice from the Marine Hospital:

July 26, 1923.—Captain Steamship Benjamin Brewster, W. L. C.: Keep man in bed, well ventilated room. Give fluids, water, lemonade, ginger ale, one teaspoonful of soda bicarbonate in glass of water three times a day. Want more information. Has the man a cough? Character of expectoration? Number of respirations per minute? Recommend putting the patient ashore and to a hospital by ambulance as soon as possible. The treatment given satisfactory. Sprague."

To which the commander of the vessel said:

"July 26, 1923.—On Board Steamship Brewster, en route to Europe. To Medical Service, New York: No cough; character of expectoration white. Throat very dry. Respiration o. k. Fever 103-5. Face very flushed. Thanks for advice. Ludt."

With this additional light on the case the Federal physicians sent another message:

"July 27, 1923.—Captain Benjamin Brewster: Give 20 grains quinine immediately and repeat in four hours. Give glass of liquid every hour until kidneys act well, then glass every two hours, weak lemonade, with very little sugar, or plain water. Give sponge bath with water if temperature rises above 103. Moderate doses of salts when necessary. Continue soda bicarbonate as ordered. You are handling case very well. Keep us informed if patient does not improve or if he becomes worse, giving all symptoms in full. Sprague."

Back to New York came this final message, plainly indicating that the sailor's crisis was past and that he was on the road to recovery:

"On Board Steamship Benjamin Brewster.—To Medico, New York: Gave patient sponge bath yesterday and fever dropped almost instantly. Fever 100 to 101, no more pains in chest. No cough, no sore throat. Kidneys act well. Salts effective. Patient very hungry; keeping him on liquid diet. Continuing soda bicarbonate as ordered and giving him five to ten grains quinine occasionally. Thanks. "Ludt."

A surgical case, in which competent advice caused the mode of treatment to be changed, is described in this message:

"On Board Steamship Delphinula.—To Medical Officer, Marine Hospital No. 70, New York: Delphinula has patient very bad poisoned finger, or Whitlow finger. Has been lanced twice. Soaked in hot water and carbolic disinfectant, also bread poulticed every two hours. Given laxative. After seven days' treatment shows no improvement. Finger badly swollen, slight lump under arm. Patient otherwise seems well. Age 20. Please advise further treatment. Master."

The Marine Hospital replied:

"Oct. 25.—Master Steamship Delphinula: Stop carbolic disinfectant. Stop bread poultice. Soak finger in hot salt water solution, one teaspoonful table salt to one glass water, every other hour while awake. Between time put large dressing [illegible] in above solution on hand and up to shoulder. [illegible] ing dressing warm with hot-water bottle. [illegible] hand elevated to level of shoulder. Give soft [illegible] Report condition, including temperature, tomorrow. "Dr. Sprague."

Another sick man aboard ship who needed [illegible] ful treatment and got it, by radio direction, [illegible] described in this message:

"Nov. 21, 1922.—Steamship Elestero. To Marine Hospital, New York: Patient susceptible [illegible] Fever not high yesterday. Was given 15 grains quinine. Felt good this morning. Had breakfast and supper. Walked on deck 9 p. m. tonight. Has chills and shivers. Head hot. Temperature [illegible] Give advice. C. D. Pederson, Master."

Said the reply of the Marine Hospital:

"Pederson, Master Steamship Elestero: Put [illegible] to bed. External heat for chills. Hot drinks. [illegible] grains quinine four times a day. Reduce dose one-half if ringing in ears. Report tomorrow. "Medical Service."

Next day came the report as directed:

"Nov. 22, 1922.—On Board Steamer Elestero. Referring to sick man here the treatment advised by you has improved him. Chills left him about 8 a. m. today. Feeling fairly good. Not much fever. Still continue to give quinine, four grains every three hours. Craving for food. Any other advice be appreciated. C. D. Pederson."

And the last message from the hospital said:

"Master Steamer Elestero: Continue treatment advised yesterday. Give for food soup, eggs, [illegible] crackers, fruit, custards, soft vegetables and occasional boiled meat, drinking water and lemonade generously; tea and coffee occasionally. Give [illegible] som salts for laxative if necessary. Keep in bed until fever disappears.

"Marine Hospital No. 70, New York."

Not only a suitable course of treatment, but [illegible] arrangements as well, can be settled by radio in manner not otherwise possible, as attested by messages exchanged on the Pacific coast. The first one said:

"On Board Steamship Ensley City, 6 p. m. [illegible] 3, 1922.—Marine Hospital, San Francisco: [illegible] 10 p. m. fourth. Can Marine Hospital ambulance and doctor's boat meet me immediately on arrival for transfer of patient referred to in previous telegram? If so, will advise exact time arrival Farallones. Master."

"Hello, doctor!" said the radio operator at Cape May. "There is a vessel lying helpless out in the bay near you, but her master cannot reach you. A man has fallen down the hatchway and is badly hurt. Can you go or send someone on board to see about it?"

"I can do better than that," said the doctor. "I will send an ambulance and bring him to the hospital. Give me the vessel's location, then tell the captain that we will be out at once."

So, in such a little while that it seems like kindly magic, the sailor was in a clean bed at the hospital, the broken leg skillfully attended to and himself as comfortable as he could be made, considering his injuries.

"You saved my life, doctor," said grateful Jack, as they tucked the covers around him for the night.

"No," said the doctor, shaking his head. "You must thank your own wireless operator, and the operator at Cape May."

Some remarkable incidents in which radio has figured as an auxiliary of medicine, previously published in the daily news, are worth briefly reviewing here. One case which attracted much attention was that of 20-year-old John Miller, stoker on the U. S. Shipping Board's freighter, West Norranus, bound from New Orleans to Rotterdam and Bremen. Like most freighters, the West Norranus carried no doctor, but Capt. F. B. Castenara had with him a supply of medicines such as is usually provided on such craft.

These drugs did not, however, include several items which are necessary in a severe case of lobar pneumonia, which was the illness developed by young Miller in August, 1922. There is no doubt that Capt. Castenara did all that was humanly possible for a layman to do when he hadn't the needed medicine. Faithfully he followed the radio directions which came to him from Dr. E. K. Sprague, who figures in some of the radio messages cited above in other cases. Dr. A. Sprink of the U. S. Public Health Service, New York, also gave advice by radio. And Dr. Hodgson of the westbound liner President Monroe was heard from, too.

All these competent physicians necessarily adapted their directions to the means at Capt. Castenara's command.

But it was no use. The boy grew steadily worse. He needed medicines not available on the West Norranus and he needed a trained nurse and frequent goings over by a doctor. When young Miller had retained no nourishment for three days, and two husky seamen had to be stationed outside the delirious youth's door to keep him from getting out of bed and jumping overboard, the medical men advised Capt. Castenara to get in touch with the nearest ship and transfer his patient. Nice prospect, that, for a man dangerously ill in midocean!

Straightway Capt. Castenara asked for, and received, authority from the U. S. Shipping Board to transfer his patient if such a procedure should prove to be warranted. And to make a long story short, the eastbound liner President Garfield promptly altered her course when the matter was presented to her commander, Capt. H. L. Look. She even turned back, for a few hours, to meet the oncoming, slow freighter. The latter ship was asked to make as much smoke as possible. It was heavy weather, with choppy seas and rain.

Finally, the big liner, with her passenger list of rich, important people, and the freighter, with only her small crew and one very sick stoker aboard, met each other. The President Garfield lowered a boat, which went to the West Norranus. In the boat careful hands placed John Miller, strapped to a narrow iron cot. Then back again to the President Garfield, where passengers lined the rail of the big, luxurious liner as it lay strangely idle upon the heaving Atlantic.

The ship's doctor on the President Garfield, by the way, was Dr. Glover H. Copher, a native-born Missourian, who afterwards became a member of the teaching staff at his alma mater, the Washington University School of Medicine. Here young Miller received the medicines, the nursing and physician's care which he needed, and when the President Garfield steamed up the Thames River a few days later he was very decidedly convalescent.

Capt. Look's official report shows that the diverted steaming distance of the President Garfield was 76 miles, and the time off her course, 6 hours 18 minutes. She was stopped 1 hour 37 minutes, so the total time lost in the rescue was 7 hours 55 minutes—certainly a serious matter in the schedule of an ocean greyhound. And the anger of those delayed passsengers may be judged from the fact that a "benefit" entertainment was arranged on board the President Garfield and the proceeds of almost $100 handed to John Miller.

One Sunday in May, 1921, a naval radio operator named C. R. Glass, on the Farallone Islands, 30 miles off the California coast, sent out calls asking for instructions in the emergency treatment of his wife, suddenly ill. He was told how to proceed, and a tug started out at full speed. Before nightfall Mrs. Glass was in a San Francisco hospital.

Just imagine a ship far at sea without any fire in her galley! It was in March, 1922, that radio messages from the freighter Blossomheath, 1000 miles southwest of San Francisco, described symptoms of the serious illness of John Keating, ship's cook. The Marine Hospital at San Francisco sent back a prescription 15 minutes later. Messages which came afterwards said Keating was much better.

Another case was that of several sailormen aboard the Danish freighter A. T. Lanterhavet, which had sailed from Malta. Their malady was diagnosed by Dr. Lee Brown of the Royal Mail liner Oropesa, as both vessels were voyaging to New York. They were many miles apart, but radio spanned the distance. Dr. Brown, who had been at Malta with a British squadron during the war, recognized the illness as Malta fever, a species of malaria.

One of the more unusual stories about medical advice by radio, and there is an element of humor in it, too, concerns the pulling of a tooth which had driven its unfortunate owner almost frantic. The incident was described in November, 1922, by Dr. A. E. Wood, surgeon upon the liner America of the United States Lines. Late one night, said Dr. Wood, a radiogram was received from the captain of a small freighter, then 500 miles distant from the America. The captain reported he had been suffering for five days with a toothache, and wanted instructions about removing the guilty molar.

Now, Dr. Wood was not a dentist, but a surgeon. However, the case looked like an emergency. Having gotten a detailed history of the toothache, Dr. Wood decided that extraction was necessary. The captain of the freighter said his chief engineer was prepared to pull the molar with a pair of wire pliers, when detailed directions were furnished him.

Thereupon, with all the exactness of which he was capable, Dr. Wood described how the operation should be performed. Back came a message from the freighter, stating that the directions were fully understood and that the chief engineer and his pliers were about to do the job. And in half an hour came the eloquent message:

"Tooth successfully yanked. Your generous assistance warmly appreciated. God bless you."

In November last year radio saved the life of a sailor who was suffering from acute gastritis aboard the steamer Venetian, 1200 miles at sea. Directions for the man's treatment were sent to the ship's officers by Maj. H. L. Heidreck of the U. S. Public Health Service at Los Angeles.

Late in December of last year, calls for help in subduing a maniac were received at San Pedro, Cal., from the crew of the British tramp steamer, Roman Star, then 2000 miles distant, in the South Pacific. Dr. A. J. Langan, police surgeon, sent suggestions by radio. Later messages from the Roman Star said the crew had managed to lock the crazy man in a storeroom, after a vicious struggle.

and the jockey. The salesman complained of the draft and rose to close a window.

Harry Myrick shuffled the cards. Out of the corner of his mouth he quietly asked the jockey: "You heeled?"

"Tickler," replied the jockey.

Myrick began dealing the cards. It was a small pot, won by the owner of the store, and the cards went to the salesman. He paused in his shuffling to sniffle and to dab at his nose with his handkerchief; then, as he was on the verge of dealing, his face began to contract for a wrenching, explosive sneeze.

Myrick kicked the jockey, who leaned over to scratch his ankle, not because it itched but because he kept his knife—his tickler—strapped to the calf of his leg.

The salesman was convulsed by the violence of his sneeze, and his hands jerked back into his lap. He was just regaining his breath when Harry Myrick's right fist swept across the table, caught him squarely on the mouth, and sent him backward to the floor in a shower of cards.

Instantly Myrick was upon him and the room was in an uproar.

"Are you there, kid?"

"I'm here," answered the jockey, back to back with Myrick—an eight-inch knife waving the others away.

Suddenly the salesman subsided. Harry Myrick felt the man's pockets and pulled forth an automatic. Catlike, he was on his feet, back against the wall.

"I'll plug the first man that lets a yip out o' him," he announced. "Pick up those cards an' count 'em. This bird was plantin' a cold deck on us. You got a lot o' brass, you bum hay-shaker!—to think you could pull that sneezing-game on me!"

"I'll call the police and have him locked up," volunteered the proprietor, starting toward the door.

"You stay where you are!" ordered Myrick. "We'll look through your pockets next!"

There were 104 cards upon the floor. The salesman's pockets revealed two more decks, one of them cold for a six-handed game and the other a used deck. On a ledge under the table there was a similar layout, sufficient to involve the proprietor of the cigar store, even though his own pockets were clear.

Myrick, the jockey, the undertaker and the telegrapher relieved the other two of all the money they had and split it four ways. It was plain frontier justice, and Harry Myrick was presiding magistrate.

"If you let a squeal out o' you, we've got two local witnesses to swear that you were runnin' a crooked joint," he explained to the storekeeper. "An' as for you, Sneeze-wheeze, you're nothin' but a punk!"

Feeling strangely at peace with the world, the tumultuous emotion of early evening stilled, Dauntless Harry Myrick idled down the street, whistling his contentment to the waning moon. From Red Luke's room in their lodging house came a swelling paean to sleep.

It was after 1 o'clock the next afternoon when Myrick hopped from his bed. He stood before the streaked mirror of the bureau, and counted his gains of the night before. Seventy-eight dollars in velvet!

He grinned at his reflection and thumped his lean ribs in elation. From his throat to his left hip bone ran a jagged bluish scar. A Sulu had given that to him with a knife. Also there were two dimples where bullets had entered. "The flesh is rubber and the heart is zinc!" was his favorite description of himself in relation to the various lethal weapons which had been tried upon him since the day he ran away from home with a circus.

Red Luke had already left the house. Myrick went to Murphy's Eats Emporium, where he ate a combined breakfast and lunch with Bub Jennings, one of the dirt-track team.

"Say, Harry," demanded Bub, "what's the big idea of letting 'em razz you like they did last night?"

"Everybody has to shoot off his face a little, once in a while. I do it. But"—Myrick paused—"when a lady begins tellin' me what a big bum I am, I—oh, I dunno—I just don't know how to answer back to ladies. I don't understand 'em. Me an' ladies never got along overmuch."

The team of Luke and Myrick was scheduled to perform at 3:30, and it was close to that time when Harry and Bub Jennings sauntered toward the fairgrounds.

The plane swept up from the field as they paused, a few feet within the gate.

"Probably goin' up for a test," said Myrick, in answer to Bub's questioning glance. "Passenger, maybe."

He stood up, one foot in his seat, the other braced against the gasoline tank, clutching Bub's collar for support, and waved the shirt above his head.

They crossed the race track, and Bill Harrah came charging down on them.

"Red's taken Zoe up for some stunts," he announced, angrily.

"That's all right." Harry Myrick went into the long frame shanty that served as a dressing room for the men. From his trunk he brought out white flannel trousers, white shirt, shoes and socks. He was nearly dressed when Harrah found him again.

"Say, listen," Harrah began, in a voice which quavered, "Zoe's standing out there on the wing. She'll kill herself! Say, can't you make 'em stop it?"

"Aw, buck up! She's all right." Myrick went to the door and watched the plane. Zoe was out on the wing, sure enough, waving to the grandstand. She was trying to pull his stuff! Resentment shot through him. She couldn't do any of his stunts, he knew; but, also, he knew that a girl has the bulge with the audience.

He turned his back upon Harrah and walked away. "I'll show 'em!" he muttered, belligerently. "I'll show 'em who's wing walker around this joint!"

If Zoe de Lorme wanted war, she'd get it!

Sitting on the forward edge of the lower wing, legs dangling, white blouse fluttering and snapping in the wind, Zoe gazed speculatively at the landing gear beneath her—an axle and two wheels, with their supporting wires and braces. She fingered the rope which she had wound about her waist.

From this same point on the wing, while the plane was resting safely upon the ground, she had studied the axle, calculating footholds and handholds, and it was curious how far away, how unattainable it had become, now that they were 3000 feet above the earth. The propeller sliced the air viciously, sending back a cyclonic wind which she had not calculated upon.

The idea of weakening, or of compromising in the slightest, did not enter her head. She covered her hesitation by adjusting her bandana, which was drawn tightly about her head; then grasped a strut, turned and felt in space with her toe for the axle.

Red Luke slapped the throttle shut, and the noise of the motor died. "Hey!" he yelled. "Where you goin'?"

"Underneath. I'm all right. G'wan!"

"Hey! Listen! You don't"——

But Zoe's confident smile and bandana disappeared over the edge of the wing. Red leaned from the cockpit and caught a glimpse of her, sitting upon the axle.

"Hang on," he yelled, "while I get some altitude." A wave of her hand answered him. He drew the throttle open gradually, fearful of dislodging her, and then commenced to climb. With their altitude of 3000 feet regained, he leaned out once more—just in time to see her start down the rope, which she had tied to the axle. He could see that she had looped the other end of the rope about her ankle.

Apparently she was planning to go down the rope—perhaps dangle there head downward, waving the handkerchief which she held in her mouth, while he circled over the grandstand—then climb up again.

Harry Myrick had done the same stunt the day before—only he dropped from the end of the rope, fell several hundred feet, and opened a parachute.

As her hand let go its grasp upon the bracing wire, she turned in the wind blast and began to spin like a top. The proper way to do it was to go down rapidly and get out of the propeller stream.

Red slapped the throttle shut. "Go down or come up—quick!" he shouted.

Red caught a glimpse of a tensed face, white except for the stark incongruous splotches of rouge upon her cheeks.

She was clutching the rope desperately, hugging it; then dizziness sapped her strength, and she slipped downward. Yards below him, at the end of her rope, she swung in space, huddled into a little ball.

The earth was approaching rapidly.

"Zoe!" shouted Red. "Zoe! Zoe! Hang on! I've got to go up again!"

With the engine pulling she commenced to turn more rapidly. Her head bobbed weakly.

Red, sick with fear, was holding the plane in a steep climb, staring down at her, horrified, when her grasp upon the rope slackened. With black unconsciousness flooding her mind, she toppled over limply. The jerk of her body against the rope sent a shudder through the plane. The bandana slipped off, and her blonde hair streamed out in the wind.

Red Luke gasped.

To make a landing now would mean scraping her life out upon the ground, and yet a landing, sooner or later, was inevitable. There was not a chance in the world of her recovering her senses while she dangled, spinning, by one leg.

Red took the last chance and shut the motor, hoping that she might recover herself in a minute or so of easy, quiet gliding. He flattened the glide as much as he could, to prolong it; but the earth moved up toward them impassively. In despair he pulled up and dragged her aloft once more.

Bill Harrah, trembling and in tears, had set out upon Harry Myrick's trail when he saw Zoe de Lorme shift her position from the wing to the axle.

"Keep your shirt on!" advised Myrick. He borrowed binoculars from the manager of the fair. "She's all right—she's all right—don't worry, Bill—I tell you, she's—— Hey! Hey!"

A vast, sharp "Ah!" came from the audience—an expression of satisfied desire for a thrill.

I Have Found How to Get Rid of Superfluous Hair At Once

Here's the Secret

I had become utterly discouraged with the growth of hair on my face and body. I tried to get rid of it—all the depilatories, electrolysis, even a razor. I tried every remedy, but all were disappointing.

I thought it was hopeless until there came to me the simple but truly wonderful discovery which has brought such great relief and joy to me and to other women that it really cannot be expressed in words.

My face is now not only perfectly free from superfluous hair but smooth and soft as a baby's, all by use of the simple method which I will gladly explain to any woman who will write to me.

Zoe de Lorme was directly tantalizingly out of reach,

he could almost touch her hand. The plane and the racer swept down the track at the same speed; then Red Luke settled a few feet closer.

Myrick grabbed the girl with his left arm, bore down heavily upon her to keep the rope taut, and slashed. Locked together, they went down in a heap, and it was only Bub's quick snatch at them which kept them from tumbling over the edge of the small bucket seat to the track.

Brakes ground and shrieked. The car skidded, narrowly escaped plunging into the fence and rolled up before the judges' stand. A doctor was waiting for Zoe.

A little later Harry said to Red:

"I'll hand it to her that she's got nerve," acknowledged Dauntless Harry Myrick. "She's got nerve—plenty of it—but she's short on judgment. An' her—thinking that she could pull my stuff! Tryin' to crab my show! An' you ought to seen Bill Harrah! Bawlin' like a seasick trout, he was—an' usin' me as a blotter!"

He squirmed into a clean white shirt and coiled about his waist the rope upon which Zoe de Lorme had dangled.

"C'mon," he said. "Time for us to give a show. Ought to been up five minutes ago."

"What're you going to do with the rope?" asked Red.

"Stick around an' find out," answered Myrick, without deigning to give him so much as a glance.

As he stepped from the shanty a burst of applause shook the big frame grandstand. And the band struck up a march, keeping time with him as he strode toward the plane. He affected not to hear any of it, but his body stiffened and his head was up. Did he like it? Does an old circus horse like to hear the band unlimber in parade.

Red Luke followed humbly.

They swept skyward, and Dauntless Harry Myrick made his way to the upper wing, where he sat unconcernedly, gazing about the country and whistling as he uncoiled the rope. He motioned to Red to drive the plane away from the fairgrounds; then, well out of range of eyes, he tied the ends of the rope to the two struts on either side of the engine. That done, he stood up, facing forward, pulling upon the rope with both hands as though he were holding reins.

He balanced there, slightly crouched, feeling out his position, testing the spring of his leg muscles. He took a single turn of the rope around either hand, then, apparently satisfied, he turned to meet the inquiring gaze of Red Luke, and gave him the signal to loop the plane.

Instead, Red throttled the engine. "What?" he demanded in a yell.

Myrick turned again, disgustedly. "You ought to know your signals by this time! I said to loop 'er."

Again he resumed his crouching position, tugging on the rope.

There was a moment in which Red hesitated, then they slipped into the swift gliding descent which comes before a plane noses skyward in a loop.

Red hated to do it. But wasn't it a slogan of Luke and Myrick, Death Defiers: "We will try anything, anywhere"? Neither of them had ever proposed a stunt that the other would not try. The spirit of partnership had never been so strong within him as it was in those few seconds while he watched the spare, lithe figure of Harry Myrick riding the upper wing of their plane. "Riding her as though he were glued there!"

Up and over they went, with Myrick's wiry legs bending ever so slightly to take up the shock of the turn.

As the plane swung down on even keel again, Myrick looked around and grinned. He motioned with his hand to have the motor shut off, and sat down upon the wing, facing Red.

"Wanted to try it out here where nobody could see me," he drawled. "Didn't want to make a darn fool o' m'self by fallin' off with the crowd watchin' me. Let's go down an' do it right in front o' the grandstand. Right smack in their faces! The closer the better!"

Red, too, was grinning; but there was admiration, loyalty, written over his face.

Dauntless Harry Myrick studied him for a moment good-humoredly. "'There is some things,'" he quoted, slowly, "'which ain't to be forgave!'" He planted the rubber sole of his shoe in Red's face and gave a friendly push. "'An' one of 'em,'" he added, "'is bein' slow in the head!' Like you!"

Red blushed, reached up, and whacked him. Myrick scampered out of the way, danced along the top wing, looking back fearfully; he pretended to trip, to come within an inch of falling off. Then he gave a clownish exhibition of fright and panics, dashing from one wing tip to the other and being horrified at the distance to earth.

At last they headed back toward the fairgrounds, to perform a stunt which was heralded

Adventure Among Underground Dwellers

dred yards away. The acid smoke of the fire got into my eyes, and it seemed to me that I had sat for hours in the low-ceilinged room, eating strange messes full of red pepper, and talking with unreal people, half-stifled with the incense drifting from small braziers.

At last a man's voice sounded from the threshold. "Greetings, lady—he waits for you!" Perhaps it was imagination, but I thought the women grew suddenly tense, and I was conscious of a sigh suppressed as I went out into the pit.

I never saw the face of my guide, but he led me without faltering, through tunnels whose blackness seemed a tangible thing, across wide rooms where the air was close and fetid, till at last we reached a flight of steps.

"Walk with care," he said. "There is a door."

A gust of wind blew in my face and I felt I was in a large room. The hand which led me was withdrawn. In panic I caught at invisible draperies, but they slipped through my fingers. I heard the door shut behind me.

For a second I knew sheer terror. I felt that I was buried alive, and, instinctively, I put out my hands as if to beat away something that was threatening——

A voice spoke to me from the further end of the room:

"Allah keep you. There is no fear."

The pulses which hammered in my throat grew less painful. There was something reassuring in that voice, remote and grave. It was a little muffled and I guessed that the speaker wore a veil. "You have eaten my bread, oh lady"—— and I heard the name by which I had long been known in the East, but which neither Abdullah nor anyone on the plateau had heard.

"You knew our customs and you know that you are safe. Be seated."

I sank down on a pile of furs and fear left me. How well I knew that measured Arabic, courteous because of the dignity and the force which were the birthright of the speaker. Recognizing at once that it was some great religious who was talking, I was horribly ashamed of the futile curiosity which had brought me into his presence.

"Yes," said the voice, as if answering my thoughts, "you have made more useful journeys than this one."

"Sidi," I replied, giving him a Prince's title, "may not the seed sown in idleness bear good fruit?"

There was a pause. "What did you come to ask me, for you have deserved well of my race?"

I wondered, since the "invisible prophet" evidently knew of my work, how much else he knew. Without waiting for me to speak, he said:

"You have done much for the Arab peoples, yet you were but an instrument in the hands of Allah." He paused. "There is a curious blessing with you. Many times this must have been told you, for the Bedouin know these things. Always you are side by side with danger, yet always there is as if one stood between it and you. It is the will of Allah, but it is a strange thing."

The voice sounded puzzled, before it relapsed into the grave finality of the fatalist. "Your feet will tread strange roads and they will never be still. At the end you will long for peace, as a woman in travail, but it will not come to you in your own country."

Silence fell and I had an idea that it was like the sea, lapping up and up around me. I felt I was waiting for judgment, and there was no doubt in my mind then (nor has there ever been since) that the Sayed knew what the future held for me.

"Each man carries his fate on a ribbon around his neck," he said. "Yours will be very swift and it will come to you in the South, by a man's uplifted hand."

I heard my breath coming quickly, for the phrase conjured pictures of violence in the hot, strange lands where life and death are so closely linked that a man scarcely realizes when he passes from one to the other.

"What else did you come to me to ask?" said the voice, so pregnant with wisdom and power.

I dared not mention the wild phantasies I had heard concerning his commerce with spirits, but I faltered some question about this life of darkness and seclusion.

"Your world has need of all its great men," I suggested.

"Do you deny the influence of thought?" he asked. "If prayer can move mountains, thought can move men."

I could find no words, and after a moment the Sayed continued: "What a man is, is so much more important than what a man does. That is your mistake in Europe; you would make men and things before you have made yourselves."

Some time later I realized that I was talking world politics with a man who knew every move of the game. It seemed to me that I was looking at the modern nations through the eyes of all my forefathers, and I interrupted a discourse on the inevitability of what we call progress with a question that was almost a cry:

"Who are you, Sidi, who are you?"

I imagined that the Sayed rose to his feet, for the answer came from far above me. "I am a servant of Allah—may He give you, after many journeys, peace."

I don't know how long I crouched there in the room which I knew was empty. At last, shuffling feet approached me and a hand felt for mine. "Come with me." Once more I stumbled down steps and through long passages, but when my guide left me, with instructions to follow the gray glimmer that pierced the darkness, I was nowhere near the pit where I had talked with the troglodyte women.

A few steps brought me round a corner into a cavity, not unlike a badger's earth. I had to crawl through this on my hands and knees; then I was staring across the plateau, where the light was still orange.

I wondered how the sunset could have lasted so long, and I looked around, puzzled. The earth was scarred with pit and sandhill. The great cliff dropped behind me to a rose-red plain. A few yards away Abdullah leant on his rifle, beside the horses, and the steel of bit and barrel gleamed in the light. It was dawn! The tall figure shrouded in its burnous turned, as a stone rolled from my feet.

"Praise be to Allah, you are safe! Mount quickly now—the pack horses are already on the way."

It was not till we had left the last pit behind that Abdullah asked, cautiously:

"What was he like, oh lady? Did you see his face? They say it is horned like a beast, with eyes of live fire and the tongue of a serpent."

I thought of the grave, quiet voice, instinct with suffering and with something greater that I did not understand, and I laughed. "No, I did not see his face," I said.

The shadow of a branch flickered across the way. It looked like a brandished weapon and I remembered the phrase spoken in darkness—"It will come to you in the South, by a man's uplifted hand."

I shivered . . . and was glad when, three days later, we saw the first clouds of a Northern sky!

Invisible Light Ray as Trap for Wrong-Doer

one walked across the room he cut this ray momentarily as he went past it. A "shadow" fell on the electric recording device and was recorded, together with the exact time when the interruption of the ray occurred.

That was the device. It was ingenious, and it worked. The very first night that it was in place the record in the morning showed not only the hourly passages of the watchman, but an entry and exit of someone else. He stayed about 10 minutes. The following night some visitor, the same or another, came twice. The third night he came only once, as he had done the first night.

For a few days the young professor studied these records; he learned the habits of the nocturnal intruder; by moving the invisible ray to new parts of the room on successive nights he discovered that the person who entered actually did approach the experimental apparatus and that he remained for some minutes close to it, as though making some damaging adjustment to it. Soon the professor was ready to act.

One night he adjusted the invisible ray close to the experimental apparatus instead of on the floor. He arranged, also, that when the invisible ray was interrupted by someone's body the electric receiving apparatus, faiting to receive the ray, would instantly fire a magnesium flashlight. A camera, lens open and plate prepared, was placed to take a picture of the scene.

Everything worked out as planned. In the night the flashlight went off. The watchman, warned in advance, was promptly on the scene. There he found a much frightened young instructor trying to escape. The plate in the camera showed this young rascal in the very act of disarranging the professor's apparatus.

The act was not precisely a crime in the eyes of the law. Neither was it desirable that too much publicity be given to so conspicuous a lapse of one of the university's official family from the high standards of scientific morality. And so, the immediate "resignation" of the young culprit was arranged.

Thus happened what was, so far as I know, the first use of the invisible ray in criminal work. It promises to have much greater use in the future. For example, it may be employed for burglar alarms that require no wires, that may be installed in a few minutes and that are absolutely invisible. It may be used to check the movements of a night watchman without his knowledge.

Every time that he walks past the invisible ray, thus cutting it off momentarily from the receiver, there is a record of the instant at which it was done. And the only way that anyone can make such a record is to be there and actually to cast a shadow in the ray. The very existence of the ray traps in a building need not be known to anyone except the man who put them in place.

but trusting to hit a vital spot. In the darkness which immediately ensued—for the torches had been extinguished by the report—it was impossible to tell what he would do, though he could be heard roaring and leaping around his cavern.

The hunter men were in a frenzy of excitement behind and were calling me loudly to come out, though, as I was firmly wedged in the passage, this for the moment was a physical impossibility. I then fired two more shots, the tiger lay panting and was still.

Once in the open, it was evident for the first time at what high tension my nerves had been kept during the four hours of watching. In another hour we had dragged the tiger up to the mouth of the cave, which, owing to the big rocks which had to be replaced before we could get at his cavern, was no easy matter, photographed him and then carried him suspended from a pole to the village, while the peasants ran alongside, laughing, shouting and generally showing their delight.

I skinned the body on a flat rock in the village, found to my satisfaction that the pelt measured 10 feet 6 inches from nose to tip of tail, which the hunter men said was a record, though I have no means of verifying this assertion, and then adjourned to the temple, where a feast of triumph and tiger meat was held throughout the evening.

Indeed, within two hours of the shooting the meat was being sold in the village streets and voraciously eaten by the peasants.

The World's Richest Heiress

had previously been nervy because of his lack of funds. Once inside those doors, he could size up his naive young wife and she would be helpless to alter the situation.

The conquering title sails home to the United States. You must remember some of them yourself, at least the swaggering Duke of Marlborough, who married Consuelo Vanderbilt and many millions; Lord Paget, who landed a fourth heiress and a small fortune, and even the very recent Count Salm, who has won the Rogers wealth by way of the beautiful Millicent Rogers.

Name alone, then as now, brought the titled foreigner his acquaintance with the holders of withdrawn fortune to bait matters out for his own. After a sometimes impassioned courtship he won her, got a dowry settlement after the European custom, tied her down with the foreign marriage laws, transported her to his native country and introduced her to the King or Queen to keep her quiet.

Then, heavy of pocket and light of heart, he went back to his amusements, and the disillusioned, broken-hearted American girl looked on and could do nothing whatsoever, not even get a divorce.

These were the international marriages of the age just preceding Cornelia Vanderbilt's, and she must have been brought up on the history of many of them. The very date of her birth protects her, however, from such madness. Her decade is the one when women are weighing marriage as carefully as men. So, this girl could not fail to realize the tremendous asset of her wealth to any suitor for her hand.

She is one of the richest of the very rich Vanderbilts. She is the only daughter of the late George W. Vanderbilt, and where much of the original wealth of this family is distributed over the large number of heirs among whom it must be divided, Cornelia, being an only child, gets hers intact.

Imagine for yourself Biltmore House, her magnificent country estate. It is the most beautiful in America. Her father and mother were lovers of beauty rather than society and they selected the site of their home for the natural glory of its surroundings.

It was here that Cornelia was brought up. The fields of Biltmore House she has tilled with her own tractor. It was from this place that she gave out, on her twenty-first birthday, a statement that she was opposed to all unions with empty-handed foreigners.

It was estimated at one time that Biltmore House needed 40 servants to run it, but Cornelia and her mother, who live very simply, comparatively speaking, do not employ more than half that number. Besides this estate, she has several other highly valuable real estate holdings, together with her present income of $2,000,000 yearly.

In two years, when she is 25, she will come into fifty millions more. Fifty million dollars! Her mother, to whom she is devoted, and whose sole beneficiary she will doubtless be, is in her own right a rich woman, one of her legacies alone being the income from a million dollars.

On this gigantic fortune Cornelia Vanderbilt as an American citizen pays a large tax. As an English citizen she would still be taxed by America, together with an additional English tax, which is much larger. That is one consideration, and Cornelia Vanderbilt, being a girl of today, is too economically minded to ignore it. For the mere privilege of living in her husband's country, she would have to sacrifice nearly a million dollars.

But this money matter is only the least of the dangers from which she is protecting herself.

She is protecting herself from entering into the beautiful gilded prison that the foreign marriage is. She is profiting by the example of that beautiful relative of hers, Consuelo Vanderbilt, who, in 1895, became the Duchess of Marlborough. Consuelo's father gave the Duke of Marlborough $2,500,000 on the day he wed. Consuelo herself gave him considerably more than a million, besides restoring Blenheim Castle, building him a town house and bearing him two sons.

Her married life was one of bitterness and misery. It took her 25 years to get her divorce. Why? The English divorce law which works only one way—the man's way.

Cornelia isn't unduly cynical if she thinks of the possibility of divorce. It does happen, with terrible frequency, to the most auspicious of unions.

In America the divorce laws are fairly elastic, should Cornelia Vanderbilt ever need them. In England they are very rigid—as far as the wife is concerned. The supreme sacrifice of any being is the sacrifice of freedom, and any girl marrying an English citizen, because of the unjust divorce laws, makes just that sacrifice.

Cornelia Vanderbilt, profiting by the example of others, knows this. She is keeping her matrimonial liberty. She is keeping her economic liberty. She is keeping her American citizenship. And moreover, despite youth, love and wealth, she has kept her common sense.

Just look at that record! Cornelia Vanderbilt is different!

NOISELESS PAVEMENTS MADE OF RUBBER.

THE suggestion that sheets of rubber be used for street paving, instead of wood or asphalt or stone, has been put to practical test on a roadway in Singapore. The pavement, laid in the summer of 1922, has just been examined by engineers, whose report is favorable to the new material.

While the first cost is somewhat higher than for pavements of more usual character, the repairs are much less. The rubber surface is soft enough to give a trifle under the traffic, instead of wearing off as harder materials do.

But probably the greatest advantage of rubber pavements is that they are practically noiseless. Their general use would eliminate nine-tenths of the noise of traffic, a boon which will be appreciated by every city dweller who is not already deaf.

To Have Beautiful Hair

HALF the girls you meet nowadays are happy that they had their hair bobbed. The other half wish theirs was, and there you are! The best thing I can recommend for any head of hair is beta-quinol. It is colorless and yet you can take blonde, brunette or titian hair that lays flat, coarse, straight, and dead-like, apply a little beta-quinol to the scalp, when lo! each hair freshens. It takes on a glint or shimmer, it stands out alone, and whether cut short or worn in great masses it becomes, as hair should, light, feathery and fluffy. If hair is very thick beta-quinol lyrens each hair to fluff up and thus takes away the feeling or sense of weight.

Ask the druggist for one ounce of beta-quinol, costing only 65 cents, mix it with a half pint of rubbing alcohol and a half pint of water. Thus for a small price you get a whole pint of the best hair tonic and dressing known, really worth its weight in platinum.

Most Delightful Shampoo

After a few days of treating the scalp with beta-quinol get 25 cents worth of eggol at the drug store and give your head a real shampoo. It is simply marvelous.

After a wonderful frothy rub a little water washes it out and not a trace of soap or stickiness. And the hair fluffs out to your heart's delight.

To Banish Wrinkles.

Now turn to your complexion. Is it lines, crow's feet, wrinkles, that disturb you?

If so get from the nearest druggist two ounces of ogtol for 65 cents. Mix this with a tablespoon of ordinary household glycerine. It makes a thick cream and will last for months. Rub it into the skin a few moments and it is absorbed. In a short time it works its way into the tissues, spreads itself around and fills out the skin, obliterates the lines, and it is now plump and full looking. By all means try this Ogtol treatment. Without question it is the most effective preparation in my experience and is delightful to use.

Wakefulness and Blemishes

If it is freckles, muddiness, red spots, sallowness, and the shining, oily skin that makes you think you look like a fright just mix an ounce of sulzone and two tablespoonfuls of your ordinary gly-cerine.

Rub this on your face, arms, neck and shoulders and it will work—you will hardly know yourself. The effect is magical. You can get the sulzone at any drug store for 65 cents and it makes a large bowl sufficient to supply you for months to come, using it liberally.

Dissolve Blackheads

It may be that in spite of all your efforts you will find your skin spotted with blackheads. Don't squeeze them as you will cause hard lumps; simply spread a little noroxin on a cloth dipped in very hot water. Rub this over the skin and pat it where the blackheads are then rub the skin briskly and not a blackhead remains. Ask the druggist for an ounce of noroxin for which he will ask you 65 cents, but it is worth a king's ransom to any girl troubled with blackheads.

Beauty Secrets Revealed

These are simple home remedies and yet they are the professional secrets of those whose lives are devoted to the art of appearing beautiful. Their livelihood depends upon appearances.

If You Are in Doubt

I am quite sure you will find any of these lovely beautifiers in almost any drug store, as they are all standard preparations. But in case you do not, simply send the price to me and I will have my secretary get it and mail it to you.

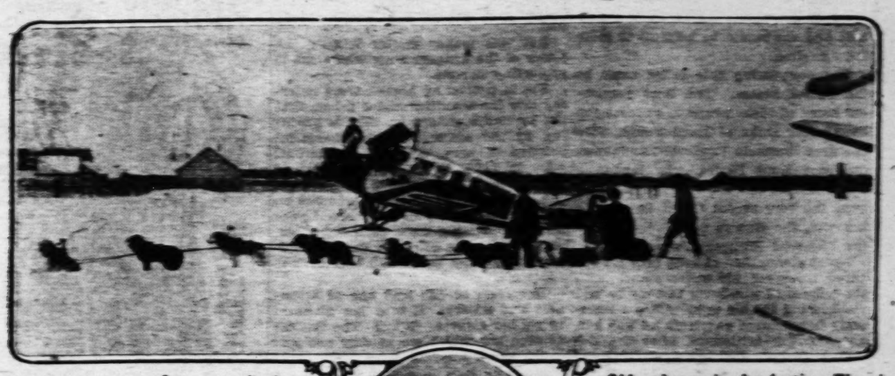
Through The Arctic Snow For Nine Months To Teach Eskimos "Thou Shalt Not Kill"



Old and new in the Arctic. The airplane belongs to an oil company with a well at Fort Norman. In the foreground is Sergt. Thorne's dog team.

Bringing two murderers to justice was all in the day's work of Canadian Mounted Policeman—Into the frozen night on a long assignment — By ship, railroad, horse stage and dog sled across the top of the world to see justice done and the law sindicated :: :: ::

TATAURIGANA.

"NOTHING out of the ordinary—just the usual sort of patrol, but a little longer."

In this nonchalant manner did Sergt. Hubert Thorne of that famous police force, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (formerly the Royal Northwest Mounted) dismiss his nine months' winter patrol from Edmonton, Alberta, to Herschel Island, in the Arctic Ocean, and return.

Two Eskimo murderers, Alikomiak and Tataurigana, paid the death penalty, confirmation of which sentence was the reason for Sergt. Thorne's long and lonely trip. The first-named Eskimo shot and killed two white men, Corp. Doak of the Mounted Police, and Otto Binder, a Hudson Bay trader.

The shootings occurred in 1921. The arrests were made in 1922. In June, 1922, a Judge of the Canadian courts made the long trip north, held court in the lonely police post in the Arctic, with the Eskimo tribesmen peering in at every window and through each door. In accordance with Canadian law, the sentences of death must be confirmed by the Minister of Justice at Ottawa. By the time Thorne could reach the Arctic with confirmation of the death sentence, 1924 was already a week old. On Feb. 1 the two men were hanged by a special executioner.

Thus slowly but surely does white man's justice travel in those lonely wastes at the top of the map; reaching out over the months and the miles, to gather into its dragnet at the last the man who breaks that oldest of laws, "Thou shalt not kill."

The tale of the crimes has been told. How jealousy of the white trader's interest in a native girl caused Alikomiak to shoot the trader; how the slayer, arrested by Corp. Doak, after a chase of hundreds of miles across the icy wastes, lulled the policeman into a false security and shot him, sleeping, with his own rifle; how Tataurigana killed his tribesmen in a tribal feud where the hot blood ran fast, and deliberate child desertion followed in the wake of the killings. They are epic of the primitive passions that ebb and flow in the hearts of the little yellow men of the ice floes.

Sergt. Thorne, 6 feet 3 in his moccasins, square-shouldered and square shooter, to whom the North was as an open book, was the man chosen for the long trail that should lead to a gallows noose in the old whalebone house on Herschel Island, with the rose and silver sheen of the Northern Lights putting to shame the dull glow of the midnight sun that circled over the pole in the short summer days.

It was late fall when Thorne left Edmonton. The last boat for the Arctic, down the mighty inland waters of the Mackenzie River, had long since sent the echoes of its siren to startle the black bears feasting on the wild berries in the river flats. The last white goose, trumpeting his defiant way south to the Everglades, had left the silver ribbon of waters to follow his own instinct of direction south and ever south. Down the bends of the river the Ice King laid his grip on the still waters in the waving rushes, his clutch reaching ever-out and out, soon to close all the swift-moving river in bonds that only the summer sun of next year would unlock.

So Thorne went out by the westward route, by ship to Seward, Alaska; thence north by the U. S. Government railway to Chatakina in the interior, where the steel ends and the long white trail begins. There was yet one link with civilization—the horse stage to Circle City, on the Yukon River.

Then for the lone trail, with the husky dogs for sole company, and the white solitudes stretching their interminable miles; the hasty meals of bannock and coffee; the nights in the fur-lined sleeping bag, with the dogs lying round in a circle, and the timber wolves howling to the flashing stars; north and yet north, though Arctic blizzard howl, or the soft snow fall waist deep over the iron-hard barrens; north and yet north—to the gallows in the old whalebone house on Herschel Island, and two for a shameful death in the cold of an Arctic morning.

Through Alaska, through the Yukon territory, and so to the bleak coast, with its ice hummocks, and at last the gray walls of the police post on the ice-bound island, with that little square of color fluttering from a masthead—emblem of white man's justice for all comers.

Thorne's own eyes saw the two men hurled off into eternity, for so his duty demanded. A few days' rest, while his tired dogs ate greedily of the dried fish which is the diet of the Northern sled dog in the winter months, and Sergt. Thorne, his papers duly attested and in order, gave his crisp salute of farewell to the Inspector in charge of the post, and headed for the out trail once more.

So, after his nine months' trip, Thorne walks once more into the office of Supt. James Ritchie in Edmonton, reports for duty, makes out his brief record of the trip, and promptly forgets all about it.

In the general office an Orderly Sergeant reaches for the bulky file, dips his pen in a bottle of red ink, and across the pages where stalked rage and passion, lust and hate, hot-blooded death and merciless justice, writes just two words:

"Case concluded."

GLEANINGS FROM THE WORLD OF SCIENCE

NEW INSTRUMENT WARNS OF STRAINS ON AIRSHIPS.

THE United States Bureau of Standards has perfected a new instrument which can be placed in any part of a structure of metal girders, like the framework of an airship, and which will indicate electrically whether the strain on a certain girder is safe or is too great. Such an instrument in the nosecap of the Shenandoah would have indicated the dangerous strain before the ship broke away. It can be used in structures anywhere, for example in the framework of buildings, and it can be arranged to indicate strains due to compression as well as to tension.

THE MOST WONDERFUL FACT IN THE UNIVERSE.

PROF. BAXTER of Harvard has examined with the most extreme care some small bits of metal that have fallen from the sky as meteorites. They contain a little of the chemical element called cobalt. Prof. Baxter finds that this celestial cobalt is exactly the same in every way as cobalt that miners find right here on earth. Nobody knows just were the cobalt in the meteorites came from; perhaps from some exploded star billions of miles off in space. Yet it is the same as ours. Throughout the universe, throughout space so vast that we cannot even imagine it, in the midst of millions of flying stars and flaming suns, the laws of chemistry and the nature of chemicals are everywhere the same. Surely no fact that we know is more marvelous than this.

SOLID GLASS IS LIKE A SIEVE.

THE same week that Prof. Baxter announced his discovery about the cobalt in meteorites, Dr. Van Voorhis of Princeton told the American Physical Society that helium gas (the same gas that is used to inflate the navy airship Shenandoah) would leak through solid glass. If you corked up some helium in a glass bottle and left it alone for a long enough time all the helium would leak out. Glass seems solid but really there are millions of tiny spaces between the invisible atoms of it. Tiny as these spaces are the helium slowly gets through them.

MARRIED ATOMS THAT MAKE FOOD FOR US.

FOUR-FIFTHS of the air is nitrogen gas. It is useless. But nitrogen in other forms makes fertilizers and helps grow wheat to make bread. Why the difference? Simply this; The nitrogen in the air exists in a state of single blessedness, it is just nitrogen. In the fertilizers the nitrogen has got married; each atom of the nitrogen has attached itself to an atom of oxygen. Like so many people, the married nitrogen goes to work; the single nitrogen loafs. One of the most important discoveries of recent years was made a short time ago in the Fixed Nitrogen Laboratory of the United States Government. It was the discovery of a way to make the nitrogen of the air get married; to convert the useless kind of nitrogen which is so plentiful in the air into the married kind that we need for fertilizers.

ARE INSECTS WINNING OVER MAN?

DR. L. O. HOWARD, Chief of the Bureau of Entomology at Washington, flippantly known as the "bug bureau," has made a surprising announcement. He says that injuries caused by insects to farm crops make a money loss of more than $2,000,000,000 each year. If we add to this the other injuries that insects do us, such, for example, as the spread of disease by mosquitoes and flies, it is evident that the greatest battle that confronts the human race is that against these tiny creatures that challenge our control of the earth we so complacently call our own. If the insects ever combined against us man would probably not last out a year.

But the insects do not combine against man as we do against them. The reason is that they seem to have little or no intelligence. Their substitute for it is what we call instinct. Instinct makes all the insects do the same things. Over and over again, generation after generation, they keep on building their houses in the same way, fighting in the same way, getting food in the same way. They are the complete conservatives. No insect ever makes a new invention. Man does. So man keeps ahead.

A HOPEFUL FRENCHMAN.

A FRENCH clockmaker named Lavat has succeeded in devising a clock so well made and so accurately adjusted that it will run for a thousand years without needing to be wound up a second time. This is a remarkable accomplishment in mechanics and in the science of timekeeping, but it is more than that. It is a lesson in optimism. Monsieur Lavat is evidently of the opinion that man is going to last for a thousand years and to need clocks for all that time. The threat of insect dominance does not seem to worry him or his clocks. Let us hope he is right, about man at least.

Suddenly men began showering her with attentions

EVEN the first tiny vial of this seductive new perfume began to bring a most peculiar change. Men literally showered her with attentions.

Perhaps this was what her jealous Parisian lover had intended when he said: "If I can't have you, then your husband shall not have you either!" Perhaps this was his sinister scheme for revenge!

But his plot carried farther than he, himself, had intended. It cost the girl her life—and his own, too.

The complete story of this tragic romance is told in a charmingly prepared booklet which is yours for the asking; either by mail or by requesting "that Mi Nena booklet" at your favorite perfumer's, who now carries this wonderful new odeur.

It tells of how the formula of this irresistible perfume called Mi Nena (Spanish for "My Darling") was found in the vault of the French perfumer after his death; how it was secured and perfected by Parfumerie Rigaud and how it has now been made available for the women of today.

Generous trial vial for you

Conspicuous nose pores

can be reduced

On your nose there are more fat glands than elsewhere.

Sometimes fat accumulates in these glands, when the skin is not active enough. Then the pores become enlarged.

You can overcome this trouble by the following treatment:

WRING a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Finish by rubbing your nose for a few seconds with a piece of ice.

This stimulating method of cleansing will gradually reduce the enlarged pores.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks for this treatment and for regular toilet use.

Millions suffer from Acid Decay at which often results in the loss of health and destruction of teeth and gums

ACIDS form in your mouth by the fermentation of tiny food particles which lodge at the gum margins. These acids attack your teeth, causing Acid Decay.

The relentless enemy of your teeth and gums

Acid Decay begins most readily in places where your tooth-brush does not reach. It is especially serious at the place where the hard enamel stops and the soft bone of the teeth is exposed by receding gums. This is The Danger Line.

Once decay begins at The Danger Line, it progresses rapidly to the roots of the teeth, causing abscesses. The gums become infected and pyorrhea may develop. Poisons from these conditions undermine your health and frequently cause the loss of teeth, rheumatism, heart disease and other serious troubles.

Everyone must fight Acid Decay

It is impossible to have sound teeth and gums—or even perfect bodily health, unless Acid Decay is stopped at The Danger Line.

Ordinary dentifrices will not prevent Acid Decay. To do this it is necessary to counteract mouth acids.

Dentists and physicians have long known milk of magnesia to be the best product available to neutralize mouth acidity. But how to combine it in the most convenient form for mouth hygiene was not known.

This problem has been solved by the Squibb Laboratories. Squibb's Dental Cream is made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, pleasantly flavored. It combines the acid-neutralizing power of milk of magnesia—plus every ingredient necessary to care for the teeth and gums correctly.

Brushing your teeth with Squibb's Dental Cream protects them from Acid Decay at The Danger Line—and elsewhere. It aids in the removal of dental mucin, cleansing and polishing the teeth beautifully. It allays the sensitiveness of acid-eroded or otherwise decayed teeth, and is beneficial to irritated gums.

Begin to use Squibb's Dental Cream to-day

No other dentifrice combines the same advantages. You and all your family will prefer Squibb's Dental Cream—not only because it really does prevent Acid Decay—but because of the true feeling of cleanliness it brings. If your druggist cannot supply you, mail us the coupon on the left with ten cents for a generous size trial tube.

SQUIBB'S DENTAL CREAM
Made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia

Squibb's Milk of Magnesia

is one of the most popular as well as the mildest of alkalis. It owes its medicinal value chiefly to its property of counteracting acidity. Other products neutralize acids, but most of them are injurious to the tissues of the body. Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, however, is the one ideal antacid as, being insoluble, it is but weakly active until it comes into contact with an acid. This releases its strength in just sufficient quantity to counteract the acid present.

Buy it in small or large bottles from your druggist

THE "PRICELESS INGREDIENT" OF EVERY PRODUCT IS THE HONOR AND INTEGRITY OF ITS MAKER

PRESIDENT 'TRYING TO GIVE FORD THE SHOALS'

Telegram Produced at Senate Hearing Also Says Coolidge Said, "It Is My Hope Mr. Ford Will Not Do or Say Anything to Make It Difficult."

SECRETARY OF WAR EXAMINED BY NORRIS

Weeks Says Ford Got Over Anger Toward Administration After White House Interview Because "He Is Sensible Man."

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Chairman Norris of the Senate Agricultural Committee sprang today's leading sensation by reading into the record of the committee's hearing on Muscle Shoals a telegram quoting President Coolidge as having said, on Oct. 12 last, that he was trying to "deliver" Muscle Shoals to Henry Ford and hoped that Ford would do nothing to embarrass him in that effort.

The telegram was sent by James Martin Miller, who was then the correspondent of the Dearborn Independent, Ford's weekly newspaper, and was addressed to William J. Cameron or Ernest G. Liebold, in care of that paper, at Dearborn, Mich. Cameron is the editor of the Independent and Liebold is Ford's right-hand man.

The text of the message was: "In private interview had with President Coolidge this morning he said confidentially, 'I am friendly to Mr. Ford, but wish someone would convey to him that it is my hope that Mr. Ford will not do or say anything that will make it difficult for me to deliver Muscle Shoals to him, which I am trying to do.'

"While the President did not say so, I am sure Weeks has been in consultation with President this morning in view of Mr. Ford's reported interview in today's papers."

Telegram Subpenaed.

The telegram was subpenaed from the Western Union by Norris on the basis of information received by him from Miller. Norris said he had established from the White House records that Miller had a private interview with the President at 10:25 a. m. of the day the telegram was sent. To get the telegram before the committee in its proper setting, Norris, in the course of his questioning of Secretary of War Weeks, who was on the stand at the time, gave the following chronology:

In September, 1922, Secretary of War Weeks sold the Gorgas Steam Plant, one of the units of the Muscle Shoals project, to the Alabama Power Company—a course which Norris said, incidentally, met with his approval.

On Oct. 12, 1923, Ford issued a statement bitterly assailing Weeks, charging in effect, that the Secretary of War was actuated by improper motives growing out of his own private business interests.

On the same day Weeks issued a statement in reply to Ford. Questioned by Norris, Weeks said that he consulted the president on the reply and that the President approved it.

Ford Calls on President.

On Dec. 3, Ford called on the President. Later in the same day he paid a "social visit" to Weeks.

On Dec. 6, the President, in his annual message to Congress, advised the sale of Muscle Shoals.

On Dec. 19, Ford issued a statement, saying that he would not be a candidate for the presidency but would support Coolidge.

In the examination of Weeks, Norris first brought out that the sale of the Gorgas plant, which saved the life of the motor car industry, was made with the approval of the President.

Weeks said that he advised the President on the subject and the President "acquiesced" with his advice.

Weeks explained that, before Ford was a cabinet member, he had had no business relations with Ford. He recalled the Ford statement on "Wall Street," and, if he had been a politician, he would have
